A traveling troupe of six lively and talented Second City comics will deliver an evening of cutting edge, topical humor on Saturday, March 10th at 7:30 p.m. in Moraine Valley Community College's Dorothy Menker Theater, in the Fine and Performing Arts Center, on campus, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills. Tickets are $20 for adults and $15 for students and seniors. This performance is partially funded by an Illinois Arts Council grant. For information or to order tickets, call (708) 974-5500. Phone orders are subject to a $1 per order handling fee.

Risks Of Home Heating Options

Dealing with hazardous weather conditions can become a routine of sorts during the last weeks of winter; however, life-threatening risks remain high and focusing on safety can prove to be a life-saving decision. The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) urges the public to continue to be aware of elevated risks associated with winter weather and to take measures to avoid them.

Heating

Home heating remains the second highest cause of fire in the home. NFPA suggests the following for safe heating:

Maintain a 3 feet (or 1 meter) separation between things that can burn and heating equipment.

When buying a new space heater, make sure it carries the mark of an independent testing laboratory and is legal for use in your community. (Some communities do not permit portable kerosene heaters, for example.)

Install your stationary (fixed) space heater according to manufacturer's instructions or applicable codes or better yet, have it installed by a professional.

Plug your electric-powered space heater into an outlet with sufficient capacity and never into an extension cord.

Use the proper grade of the proper fuel for your liquid-fueled space heater, and never use gasoline in any heater not approved for gasoline use. Refuel only in a well-ventilated area and when the equipment is cool.

In your fireplace or wood stove, use only dry, seasoned wood to avoid the build-up of creosote, an oily deposit that easily catches fire and accounts for most chimney fires and the largest share of home heating fires generally. Use only paper or kindling wood, not a flammable liquid, to start the fire. Do not use artificial logs in wood stoves.

Make sure your fireplace has a sturdy screen to prevent sparks from flying into the room. Allow fireplace and wood stove ashes to cool before disposing in a metal container, which is kept a safe distance from your home.

Turn off space heaters whenever the room they are in is unoccupied or under circumstances when manufacturer's instructions say they should be turned off. Portable space heaters are so easy to knock over in the dark that they should be turned off when you go to bed, but make sure your primary heating equipment for bedrooms is sufficient to avoid risks to residents from severe cold.

Do not use your oven to heat your home.

Make sure fuel-burning equipment is vented to the outside, that the venting is kept clear and unobstructed, and that the exit point is properly sealed around the vent, all of which is to make sure deadly carbon monoxide does not build up in the home.

Inspect all heating equipment annually, and clean as necessary. Test smoke alarms monthly; install a carbon monoxide alarm in a central location outside each sleeping area.

Carbon Monoxide

Carbon monoxide poisoning can be confused with flu symptoms, food poisoning and other illnesses. Some symptoms include shortness of breath, nausea, dizziness, light-headedness or headaches.

NFPA suggests the following safety tips to avoid the dangers of carbon monoxide.

Install carbon monoxide (CO) alarms (listed by an independent testing laboratory) inside your home to provide early warning of accumulating CO. CO alarms should be installed in a central location outside each separate sleeping area. If bedrooms are spaced apart, each area will need a CO alarm.

Test CO alarms at least once a month and replace alarms according to the manufacturer's instructions.

CO alarms are not substitutes for smoke alarms. Know the difference between the sound of smoke alarms and CO alarms.

Have fuel-burning heating equipment (fireplaces, furnaces, water heaters, wood and coal stoves, space or portable heaters) and chimneys inspected by a professional every year before cold weather sets in.

When using a fireplace, open the flue for adequate ventilation.

Never use your oven or grill to heat your home.

When buying an existing home, have a qualified technician evaluate the integrity of the heating and cooking systems, as well as the sealed spaces between the garage and house.

If you need to warm a vehicle, remove it from the garage immediately after starting it. Do not run a vehicle, generator, or other fueled engine or motor indoors, even if garage doors are open. Make sure the exhaust pipe of a running vehicle is not covered with snow.

During and after a snowstorm, make sure vents for the dryer, furnace, stove and fireplace are clear of snow build-up.

Portable Generators

portable generators to meet electricity and heating needs.

NFPA, publisher of the National Electrical Code® (NEC®), recommends the following tips for proper use of portable generators.

Generators should be operated in well-ventilated locations outdoors away from all doors, windows and vent openings.

The generator should be located so that exhaust fumes cannot enter the home through windows, doors or other building openings.

Do not refuel the generator while it is running. Turn the generator off and let it cool down before refueling.

Never store fuel for your generator in your home. Gasoline and other flammable liquids should be stored outside of living areas in properly labeled safety containers. They should be stored away from any fuel-burning appliance such as a gas hot water heater.

Plug appliances directly into the generator or use a heavy-duty outdoor-rated extension cord. Make sure the cord is free of cuts or tears and that the plug has all three prongs, especially a grounding pin. Do not try to power the house wiring by plugging the generator into a wall outlet.

If you must connect the generator to the house wiring to power appliances, have a qualified electrician install a properly rated transfer switch in accordance with the NEC and all applicable state and local electrical codes.

*The above rates are for new loans only. Term of loan is 10 years. The first three years the rate is fixed, the next 7 years at a variable rate at the Prime Rate as published in the "Money Rates" section of the Chicago edition of the Wall Street Journal. On January 31, 2007 the Prime Rate was 8.25% APR. The initial 36 month fixed rate for line products with loan-to-value (LTV) up to 80% varied between 6.95% and 8.25% depending on the approved credit line amount. The minimum payment will not fully repay the principal that is outstanding on your credit line and your final payment will be a single balloon payment. No minimum initial draw. The minimum credit advance you can receive is $250.00. Offer is available for owner occupied, 1-4 unit principal residences in Illinois, with a maximum Loan to Value of 80% and are limited to no less than a second lien position on your property. Other rates and terms are available for loans up to 90% LTV or lines without SBT checking account. Applicable Property insurances required. Current SBT Home Equity Line of Credit customers who would like to take advantage of this plan must pay a $250 modification fee. $40 annual fee after the first year. The maximum APR is 24%, and the minimum APR is 3.0%. Consult with your tax advisor regarding the deductibility of interest. All loans are subject to SBT's underwriting standards. Depression Era Glass Show And Sale

Another spectacular year at the Midwest Conference Center at Concord Plaza, 401 W. Lake St. in Northlake. Glass collectors will find The 20-30-40 Glass Society of Illinois members hosting this renowned show with its beauty and history of glass.

The Show and Sale opens on Saturday, March 10th at 10 a.m. and closes at 5 p.m. On Sunday, March 11th it opens at 11 a.m. and closes at 4 p.m. Admission is $7 per person and includes free parking and free shuttle service to the front door.

Visit this very special American Heritage Glass Show and Sale featuring Depression Era Glass from the 1920s through the years including Contemporary Glass.

Save the dates, socialize, learn and support the preservation of this era's glass. The educational possibilities will prove to be outstanding. All attendees will be processed as associate members for this event and receive a "Society Page" newsletter.

The show will feature:

- An extensive library of glass and pottery reference books, belonging to The 20-30-40 Glass Society, plus glass identification by knowledgeable members has been and continues to be a tremendous favorite of visitors. Come in and try to stump the "experts."
- Crystal Repair will again be available. Drop off your treasures that need "help" and continue to search for additional treasures.

- Throughout the two days, door prizes will be awarded, so don't forget to register, you may be a lucky winner.

Plan on making the glass show a must on your list to experience.

For show information, contact The 20-30-40 Glass Society of Illinois, P.O. Box 856, LaGrange, IL 60525, or call Neil Unger at (847) 394-2491. Email Glassclub@aol.com or visit the web site, <http://www.20-30-40society.org>

The Soweto Gospel Choir

Symphony Center presents the Soweto Gospel Choir, a 26-member choir rejoicing the African gospel tradition, in a special concert on Sunday, March 11th at 3 p.m.

Founded in 2002, the Soweto Gospel Choir is under the direction of notable choirmaster David Mulovhedzi and South African director and executive producer Beverly Bryer. The ensemble draws on the talent from the many churches and communities in and around Soweto, an urban area in the city of Johannesburg. Singing in several different languages, their program ranges from traditional to pop. Earthy rhythms, rich harmonies and charismatic performances combine to express South Africa's great hopes for the future.

In 2003, the Soweto Gospel Choir won Best Gospel Choir at the American Gospel Music Awards. The group won over audiences with the January 2005 release of their American debut Voices from Heaven (Shanachie Entertainment) which reached number one on the Billboard World Music charts. Recently, the choir won the prestigious Grammy Award in the Best Traditional World Music category for its CD Blessed. The 18 tracks on Blessed are sung in six of South Africa's 11 official languages including Zulu, Xhosa, Sotho, Venda and English.

Soweto Gospel Choir's latest CD, African Spirit - a collection of traditional South African spiritual music, South African pop, American gospel and popular inspirational songs from around the world - was released on Jan. 30th. The album is dedicated to the memory of co-founder and producer, the late Clifford Hocking, who passed away in June 2006.

Tickets are $20-$40. Tickets can be purchased by calling CSO Ticketing at (312) 294-3000 or (800) 223-7114, or by visiting either the CSO Web site at www.cso.org or the Symphony Center box office at 220 S. Michigan Ave. For group rates, call (312) 294-3040.

New World Frontiers

The Southwest Symphony Orchestra, directed by David L. Crane, is excited to announce its latest concert "New World Frontiers" on Saturday, March 10th at 8 p.m. in the Ozinga Chapel Auditorium at Trinity Christian College, 6601 W. College Drive (Rt. 83) in Palos Heights. The theme of the evening explores American frontier life heard from the ears of two distinctly different composers. Featured are Copland's beloved Appalachian Spring and his Old American Songs, in which three guest choruses join the SSO: Chicago Symphony Orchestra's Community Chorale, Chip Johnson, director; Community Renewal Chorus, Jerome Bell, director; and Trinity Christian College Choir, Helen Van Wyck, director.

Chip Johnson is a Chicago-based professional organist/pianist and choral conductor. Presently, Johnson serves as Music Director for the Angelic Choir of the Apostolic Church of God; a music teacher for the John Hope College Prep High School and most recently he was appointed by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra as conductor of the South Shore Community Chorus as part of their Musician Residency Program. Since 1990 Johnson has traveled to many concert and orchestra halls throughout Europe and performed a "first time ever" Gospel music concert at the world renowned opera house, at "a La Scala" in Milan, Italy in 1999.

Jerome Bell has directed the Community Renewal Chorus since 1994. Active as a guest conductor and workshop leader he has performed at the Copenhagen Gospel Festival and music festivals in Denmark, Norway and Sweden. For five years he was selected to participate in the Robert Shaw Choral Workshop sponsored by Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Dr. Helen Van Wyck is the director of choral studies at Trinity Christian College. She is a mezzo soprano and sings professionally with the New Classic Singers in the Chicago area and participates every summer in the Oregon Bach Festival Chorus, which won a Grammy Award in 2000.

Concluding the concert is Dvorak's epic New World Symphony inspired by the Czech composer's visit to the United States in 1893.

Tickets may be purchased in advance, (708) 802-0686, or at the door. Adult $20-25, seniors $16-20, students $5, and children under 12 are free. Groups of 10 or more may purchase tickets for $10 per person.

Reunion - A Musical Epic

The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum (ALPLM) announced that Reunion - A Musical Epic in Miniature, will return to the museum's Union Theater for six performances. The musical first debuted at the ALPLM last spring with six shows at capacity crowds.

Set on April 14, 1890, twenty-five years to the day of Lincoln's death, Reunion is a musical play about a troupe of actors who are performing a show about Lincoln and the Civil War. The musical is an attempt to tell the story of the Civil War through the eyes of those who took up the Union cause - an intersection of theater and history, weaving together songs, visual images and dialogue.

The musical's script is written by Jack Kyrieleison from a story by Kyrieleison and Ron Holgate, with traditional music from the period arranged by Michael O'Flaherty. Kyrieleison scripted the play from actual speeches, letters, diaries, military orders - all written by men and women who were there. Their experience is woven into a powerful presentation.

The musical premiered at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut (under the title "Battle Cry of Freedom") in 1996, and with its new title was subsequently produced off-Broadway in New York in 1999 and Ford's Theatre in Washington, D.C. in 2000.

Making up the cast of six are: Greg Donathan, Ed MacMurdo, Brittney McLaughlin, Kevin Purcell, Traci Shaw and Mike Wallace.

The ALPLM's Phil Funkenbusch and Ed MacMurdo will stage the play, which will run in the 240-seat Union Theater and March 2-4. Performances begin at 7:30 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays; 6 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets go on sale to the public Monday, Jan. 29. Tickets are priced at $15 for adults and $12 for children. Foundation members receive a special price of $12 for adults and $10 for children. For tickets, call (217) 558-8934.

This event is co-sponsored by IHPA, the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum, and the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library Foundation.

The Irish Sopranos

The Irish Sopranos will visit Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest, on Saturday, March 3rd with the show starting at 8 p.m. The women of the Irish Sopranos are fully experienced vocal artists with tremendous accreditation to their background, which is quite an accomplishment as all three are only in their mid-20s. Come to Gaelic Park and experience their repertoire that includes traditional songs such as Danny Boy, opera masterpieces written by Puccini and Offenbach, various selections from Andrew Lloyd Webber and Rodgers & Hammerstein musicals, and the famous signature of Andrea Bocelli, Time To Say Goodbye. Tickets are on sale now at the cost of $20 per person.

For further information or to reserve tickets, call Gaelic Park at (708) 687-9323 or visit www.chicagogaelpark.org.

"The Merchant Of Venice"

The Millikin University Department of Theatre and Dance will present William Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" in Millikin's recently restored Albert Taylor Theatre March 7 to 11. Show times are 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday with a 2 p.m. performance on Sunday.

Millikin students performing in the cast or crew of the production include Kevin Buscemi of Evergreen Park who is Bassanio in the show. Buscemi is a Musical Theatre major.

A young Venetian asks his best friend for a loan so that he might pursue a beautiful heiress. In order to supply the money, the friend enters into a dangerous agreement with a Jewish moneylender. The story that unfolds is Shakespeare's most controversial play, "The Merchant of Venice." In Merchant, Shakespeare explores the clash of differences in ethnicity, religion, class, sexuality, and gender, exploding in one of the most famous courtroom scenes in dramatic literature. A mixture of romantic comedy and serious drama, "The Merchant of Venice" remains one of Shakespeare's most provocative plays.

The Millikin production will be directed by Laura Ledford, Associate Professor of Theatre and Dance.

Tickets for the show are $11 and are on sale now at the Kirkland Box Office, by phone at (217) 424-6318 or online at www.millikin.edu/theatre/season/merchant. Kirkland Box Office hours are Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Interactive Murder Mysteries

The Bed and Breakfast Innkeepers of Galena presents its annual Murder Mystery Weekends to all theatergoers. Travel back in time with the classmates of 1971's Windy City High and relive their memories of jocks, cheerleaders, nerds, faculty, greasers and gangs in "1956-Flashback-1971, A Class Reunion" on Friday and Saturday, March 9-10.

The cost for the two-day interactive event is $65 per person and includes a Friday night reception, with dinner/theater and interactive murder mystery on Saturday. A two-night lodging reservation is required. The excitement will take place in Galena's historic DeSoto House Hotel at 230 S. Main. Period costumes always add to the fun but are not required. For more information or to order tickets, please call Jess or Kathie Farlow at 815-777-3456. For information about room availability, shopping, dining, attractions, events and more, visit www.galena.org, the Web site of the Galena/Jo Daviess County Convention & Visitors Bureau, or call 1-877-464-2536. The Bed & Breakfast Innkeepers of Galena represent a not-for-profit group of select innkeepers with the common goal of providing their guests with the very finest travel experience.

Second City To Perform

A traveling troupe of six lively and talented Second City comics will deliver an evening of cutting-edge, topical humor during their 7:30 p.m. performance on Saturday, March 10, in Moraine Valley Community College's Dorothy Menker Theater, in the Fine and Performing Arts Center, on campus, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills. Tickets are $20 for adults and $15 for students and seniors.

The Second City, founded in Chicago in 1959, is famous for its hilarious and intelligent sketches, and musical and improvisational acts. The company's satirical skits are guided by the audience and performed spontaneously, making the evening an unmapped adventure sure to lead its spectators to uproarious fits of laughter.

The Second City has produced an assortment of professional humorists, including such stars as Dan Akroyd, John Belushi, Bill Murray, Gilda Radner, George Wendt, Martin Short, John Candy, and Chris Farley, as well as current comic entertainers Rachel Dratch (currently on Saturday Night Live) and Ryan Stiles (from The Drew Carey Show and Whose Line Is It Anyway?).

This performance is partially funded by a grant from the Illinois Arts Council.

For more information or to order tickets, call the Moraine Valley Box Office at (708) 974-5500. Phone orders are subject to a $1 per order handling fee.

COOK COUNTY CAN'T SEE THE FOREST FOR THE TREES: For obvious reasons, Cook County is again short of money. Part of the solution has been to lay off key personnel, accept a donation of $13.3 million from the Forest Preserve District and propose a ten-cent tax on bullets (in addition to other equally stupid taxes). Why discriminate against gun owners, think of the money they could raise with a ten-cent tax on fishing hooks sold in the County.

If the Forest Preserve District has so much money, why do they keep coming back for increases in the property tax levy every year? With so much surplus money, perhaps the District could do something about reopening the toboggan slides, or at least move on privatizing the slides and other amenities.

At the risk of upsetting the 'tree huggers' and other environmentalists, I offer a possible partial solution to the County's money woes. The following are excerpts from my column of Oct. 23rd, 2003:

"As a possible source of much needed revenue, might I suggest those dirty words, 'selective logging.' Before everybody goes ballistic, hear me out. Notice I said selective logging. I'm not talking about clear-cutting or raping the land."

"Over the years of hiking and trail-riding in the Forest Preserves, I have marveled at the large stands of mature trees, many of them beyond maturity and destined to die off and add to the ground clutter and fire tinder material on the forest floor; what a waste of a natural renewable resource."

"The District owns about 68,000 acres spread throughout the County, a large portion covered with forests and varying stands and species of trees. Logging is big business in Illinois, finding a reputable logger, or group of loggers (some may even be politically connected) to bid on the contract to selectively log the Cook County Forest Preserves should be no problem. The job could be done without disturbing the perimeter-road-side of the forests by not cutting within 100 yards of the main roads."

"The spin-offs from the logging include: opening the overhead canopy to promote the growth of young trees and plants; a series of interior logging roads and trails for equestrians, cross-country skiers, joggers, hikers and nature lovers."

"The new logging roads would serve as fire-breaks and access roads for fire fighting equipment (a big problem with fighting those devastating forest fires out west was the lack of fire-breaks and the ability to get crews and equipment to the fires)."

"Patrolling for illegal activities would be simplified. The discovery of marijuana plant sites on District property makes me wonder how many other plots are out there. Incidentally, the sites were under surveillance, the plants were destroyed, but no arrests were made. Sounds kind of fishy to me."

"A case in point: For the past 12 years I have been deer hunting from the same tree stand on 300 acres in Southern Illinois. Three years ago, the owner of the property informed me that a timber buyer would be selective logging the property. The next year, I climbed into my tree stand before sun-up, not knowing what to expect. At day-break, I was pleasantly surprised to see that I was still hunting in a stand of woods that looked a little more open, but still had plenty of cover for deer, turkeys, squirrels and other wildlife. It didn't look that much different to me."

"Out of curiosity, I questioned the landowner how he made out on the logging deal. He was paid $326,000, the area was cleaned up and will be ready for logging again in 15 years. Not bad for only 300 acres. At that point, I couldn't help but speculate on the potential from the more heavily wooded 68,000 acres back home in the Cook County Forest Preserves."

Eric Law Expects Successful Senior Year

The Millikin University Big Blue baseball team is eagerly awaiting the start of the 2007 season, and it has plenty to look forward to. With hopes of improving from an 18-22 mark in 2006, this year's team is determined to break into the CCIW Tournament and fight for the conference championship and an NCAA regional bid. For sixth-year head coach Josh Manning, there is plenty to be excited about with a great mix of veteran players and energetic newcomers.

The 2007 Big Blue will rely on improved defense and a strong offensive lineup, but in the end the Big Blue will only go as far as its pitching staff takes it. Manning will count on a group of pitchers with a variety of experience. Seniors Adam Nowicki and Eric Law are expected to log significant innings while sophomores Mike Frigo, Jim Wilson and Tony Garcia, along with transfer Jeff Neisslie, will also strengthen the staff. Freshmen Joe Kentos, Matt Shiring, Matt Nissen, Dan Flores and Joe Frigo will also add depth on the mound. Several other pitchers, including Brian Erlenbach, Kevin Taylor, Brandon Sehenck and Marek Rupa will compete for innings throughout the year.

Behind the plate, senior captains George Fear and R.J. Spehn will lead the Big Blue. Fear comes off one of the better seasons in school history pounding out a school record of 58 hits in 2006, which also earned him first team All-CCIW and second team All-Region honors.

A group of young catchers will also work with the Big Blue pitching staff in various capacities. With an eye on a varsity starting spot in the near future, sophomores Chase Lowery, Ben Hendricks and freshman Matt Bieler all have great potential and will add considerable depth.

The 2007 version of the Big Blue will have a lot of competition for position jobs. Senior Law and juniors Matt Balhan, Tom Bastien and Ken Meyer will help man the Big Blue outfield this spring. Also looking to contribute could be freshmen Blaise Sylvester, Dan Ehlert, Mike Gerts, David Godfrey and senior Mike Gentile.

Fear and Law will ultimately battle for the career hits record all year long. A 2006 first-team All-CCIW and All-Region selection and 2006 Team MVP, Law needs to play in 35 games, needs 126 at-bats, needs to record 49 hits and seven stolen bases to tie Millikin career records. Fear needs 60 hits and 73 RBI to tie the career records after earning first-team All-CCIW and second-team All-Region honors as a junior.

The infield will have plenty of talent and competition for playing time. Transfer Kyle McBrain, sophomore James Hafer, juniors Bill Leffler and Kevin Taylor, and freshmen Andrew Bruce and Joe Frigo will play in the middle infield. Senior Chuck Arquilla, junior Brad May, sophomores Mike Frigo and Tony Garcia will play the corner infield positions.

As a freshman, Hafer started in all 40 games and recorded high numbers for the Big Blue (.347 avg. in 147 AB, 42 runs, 51 hits, 66 RBI). For his efforts, Hafer was selected to the All-CCIW second-team and was named the 2006 Big Blue Newcomer of the Year. Leffler also brings experience to the field after playing 35 games in 2006 when he hit .265. With his experience at first base, Arquilla recorded a team high 184 putouts and will look to contribute solidly again in 2007.

The expectation level for the Millikin University baseball program has been continually raised for the last six years. However, the players and coaching staff will not be satisfied until the conference crown comes to Decatur for the first time since 1975. Obtaining a top-notch education, maturing as adults and winning the CCIW are the ultimate goals of the 2007 Millikin University baseball program.

Millikin is scheduled to open its season on March 7th at Blackburn.

Mlotkowski Signs On

The Windy City ThunderBolts have signed pitcher Mike Mlotkowski for the 2007 season. Mlotkowski started last year with Windy City and made the All-Star team before being traded to Gateway in August.

The right-hander completed his first full season of professional baseball in 2006. Combined between Windy City and Gateway, Mlotkowski went 5-6 with a 4.05 ERA in 19 games. He struck out 83 batters and walked 68 in 95.2 innings pitched. At the All-Star Break, Mlotkowski was 2-3 with a 3.12 ERA.

Teammates Clemente Bonilla and Brian Beuning joined Mlotkowski on the victorious West Division squad.

Mlotkowski and pitcher Noah Russo were dealt to Gateway at the trading deadline for outfielder Kevin House. Mlotkowski ended up beating the ThunderBolts in a start for the Grizzlies later in August.

The Virginia native was a standout at Oklahoma City University before signing with the ThunderBolts. He was named the MVP of the 2005 NAIA World Series and was a 2005 NAIA First Team All-American.

The ThunderBolts have released the team's 2007 schedule and will host the Rockford RiverHawks for Opening Night at Hawk Ford Field on May 23rd. The complete schedule can be found at www.WCThunderBolts.com

Commends Michael Madigan

The IL League of Conservation Voters commends the Speaker of the House, Michael Madigan (22-Chicago) as well as members of the House, for taking an important early step in making Illinois a leader in the fight against global warming. As one of their first acts of the 95th General Assembly, Speaker Madigan and House members proved a commitment to environmental progress by creating six new committees dealing with the environment and sustainable development: Biotechnology, Ethanol Production Oversight, Least Cost Power Procurement, Mass Transit, Renewable Energy, and Smart Growth and Regional Planning.

"The citizens of Illinois deserve a public leadership willing to address the environmental problems we face and investigate new solutions, like alternative energy production and green building practices," said Speaker Madigan.

"Speaker Madigan and members of the House understand the necessity of initiatives to give this state the information on alternative energy it needs to reach sustainable and affordable solutions," said ILCV Executive Director Amanda Espitia. "The Speaker continues to lead Illinois as a pro-environment state."

While there is still considerable development to be done in the field of renewable energy sources to increase efficiency and reliability, significant steps like the creation of these committees will provide the public support necessary for this development. "This is a big opportunity for renewable energy in Illinois," said Mark Burger, President of the Illinois Solar Energy Association. "These committees will help craft innovative and comprehensive legislation to bring the benefits of renewable energy to our communities that will ultimately create new jobs for Illinois residents."

Finding alternative energy sources has been a particular concern for many voters due to skyrocketing gas prices, and this concern has been heightened in Illinois in particular with the possibility of an end to the price freeze on utility rates. A rising public voice for alternative energy has seen veteran environmentalists joined by lower- and middle-income families, who typically feel the impact of such high prices most acutely.

The ILCV will continue to advocate for legislation promoting energy conservation and mainstream renewable energy production.

Letter To The Editor

Thank you. Thank you. That is the message that I want to send to everyone whom I have met since the beginning of the year when I began walking neighbor-to-neighbor from Tinley Park and Orland Park to Palos, Worth, Lyons, and Stickney Townships collecting signatures to get on the ballot for re-election as Trustee of Moraine Valley Community College.

When I met many of you it was, before I traveled to Washington, D.C., to advocate on behalf of education - higher education. For nearly five years, it has been difficult to persuade Congress and the President to increase education funding for our students and our schools. But today, let me be the first to tell you that we now have an opportunity to obtain one of the largest increases in Pell Grants for students attending two- and four-year colleges and universities. It is refreshing to know that both Congress and the Bush Administration have offered substantial increases in Pell Grants, and whichever amount is passed will be so very much needed. I hope this is a start of a new beginning in Washington, D.C., and perhaps could serve as a motivator for our state legislators in Springfield to act on behalf of higher education. I know firsthand the importance of the Pell Grant for our students as well as the many other grants distributed every year to help finance their education. It is times like these that make serving as your Trustee, your Representative to the College so worthwhile to fight for education.

The possible Pell Grant increase is just one example of the many success stories at community colleges especially at Moraine Valley. But the best success of all is having the confidence in people within the MVCC community who have signed my petitions during the last several weeks. Your trust in me will always be remembered and for that I am grateful. And, you can be assured that I will continue to represent our interests on behalf of education and the Moraine community.

Sincerely,
s/s Mary Nolan
MVCC Trustee

"Protect Your Health, Cure Diseases And Avoid Side-Effects"

The recent chaos of Vioxx is very fresh in our memory. Many lives were changed forever while billions of dollars were spent. Protecting your health is primarily your responsibility. Acute care, surgeries, and life saving procedures are greatest gift of modern medicine; chronic diseases and preventative care can be provided safely, at an extremely low cost and without the fear of dangerous side effects with Ayurvedic Medicine.

At U.S. Vedic Med we have chosen several herbal medications, with the help of American trained health care providers, which are well tested, researched and used for over 5,000 years in Ayurvedic Medicine in India.

These herbal supplements are packed right here in US, and meet all federal guidelines to protect your health and well being. These are pure, natural and effective complements to your physical and mental well being. This herbal Ayurvedic approach may enhance your mental clarity, physical balance, body strength, vitality, bone density and immunity. They optimize quality of life to the fullest extent and yet have essentially no side-effects. These supplements should not be considered as a total replacement of present care but as a part of integrative medicine.

One of our numerous success stories is Mrs. B, a 67 year old female who was not able to walk without pain and discomfort due to severe arthritis. After treatment with one of our supplements for only five weeks, not only she can walk without pain and discomfort, but it has changed her whole attitude and quality of life. These results are a common occurrence for the users of our supplements.

This is about your quality of life. Our team of experts is here to help you and brighten your future with an amazing help while saving your hard earned dollars for the things you enjoy.

AMD Awareness Month

Many people have Age-Related Macular Degeneration (AMD), an eye disease that harms the vision in the center of a person's sight. AMD the leading cause of vision loss in people 65 years or older in the United States, affects more than 10 million Americans according to the National Eye Institute.

"There is no cure for AMD, but early detection and treatment may lessen severe vision loss and slow the progression of the disease," said William Tasman, MD, chair of EyeCare America's AMD EyeCare Program.

In honor of "AMD Awareness Month," taking place in March, EyeCare America is launching the AMD EyeCare Program. This year-round program promotes annual eye exams for people 65 and older, raises awareness of AMD, provides the latest information about treatment options and low vision services, offers free AMD educational materials.

What is AMD? AMD, also known as macular (MAK-yoo-lar) degeneration, means something is wrong with the central area of the retina known as the macula. The retina is made up of layers of nerve cells that sense light and allow you to see.

Someone with macular degeneration might be able to see a clock, but not read the numbers, or when talking to you, not recognize your features. However, AMD usually does not damage the side vision, which is what one uses to get around without bumping into furniture or other objects.

What causes AMD? Most people who get macular degeneration are over age 50. Usually they lose their central vision slowly over many years. In 10 to 15 % of affected patients, vision loss is sudden if abnormal blood vessels leak fluid or blood under the retina.

The AMD program is specifically designed to: Promote eye exams for people who have not yet been diagnosed but are at risk for AMD (Family history, age 65+, smoking, obesity); Increase awareness among those at risk for AMD about the disease and the importance of annual eye exams; Educate those diagnosed with AMD about available AMD treatment options; Inform those diagnosed with AMD about low vision resources and support services that can improve or maintain quality of life.

People can call the toll-free helpline at 1-866-324-EYES (3937) anytime, for themselves and/or family members and friends, to request free AMD educational materials or to see if they qualify for a free eye exam care from one of EyeCare America's 7,300 volunteer ophthalmologists nationwide.

EyeCare America offers multiple eye care programs for which individuals may qualify. Interested callers will automatically be screened to determine the program that provides the most appropriate eye care services. Callers who have not seen an ophthalmologist in three or more years may be eligible to receive a comprehensive medical eye exam and, in most cases, up to one year of care at no out-of-pocket cost for any disease diagnosed during the initial exam.

Eyeglasses, medicines, hospital services and fees of other medical professionals are not included.

Callers who have not had an eye exam in the past 12 months and who are also at increased risk for glaucoma, may be eligible to receive a glaucoma eye exam through our Glaucoma EyeCare Program. Those without insurance receive the exam at no charge.

African-Americans Still Face Asthma Risks

When the FDA approves medication, you assume that means the research behind it has actually proven that the drugs are safe and effective for all prescribed users, according to the Asthma and Allergy Center of Chicago in River Forest. If you're an African-American with asthma, you may want to think twice. Even though African-Americans have the highest prevalence of asthma of any racial group, and are two-to-three times more likely to die from asthma, estimates are that African-Americans have comprised considerably less than 20 percent of all participants in clinical trials submitted to the FDA for asthma medication approval.

"What we know about asthma medication reflects the risks and benefits among the patients who actually participated in the medication clinical trials," states Edward Lisberg, MD, director of the Asthma and Allergy Center. The FDA encourages but does not require pharmaceutical companies to perform studies on specific racial or ethnic groups prior to FDA approval. "In this country," remarks Dr. Lisberg, "that means what we know about asthma drugs is primarily about their risk and benefit for caucasians." Apparently, for those asthmatics at greatest risk, African-Americans, doctors apparently lack valuable information about the safety and benefit of asthma medications.

This issue has become increasingly important as more data point to the fact that race and genetics play a large role not only in who may develop asthma but also in how minorities with asthma may respond differently to asthma medications. Experiments examining white blood cell responses in African-Americans, with and without asthma, demonstrate that African-Americans' white blood cells fail to respond as well as caucasians to the main preventive class of asthma therapy, corticosteroids. According to Ronina A. Covar, MD, National Jewish Medical and Research Center, Denver, CO, this demonstrates that African-Americans have a genetic "predisposition" to be less responsive to this important class of preventive asthma medications.

Not only may African-Americans be less responsive to currently recommended asthma medications but other research indicates that certain asthma medications may actually increase the risk of dying from asthma.

CPR Training Day

Learn how to save a life through the American Red Cross of Greater Chicago's CPR Training Day program. It costs only a few hours of your time and just $5 to participate.

The Greater Chicago Red Cross aims to train thousands in this lifesaving skill through its CPR Training Day program. Participants will learn how to confidently carry out life-saving techniques in cardiac and breathing emergencies.

CPR Training Day will be held on Saturday March 10th at Navy Pier, Festival Hall B, 600 E. Grand Ave., Chicago. Two sessions are offered. The morning session is from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and the afternoon session is from 1 to 5 p.m. Only one session is required to get registered in CPR. To register visit www.chicagoredcross.org or call 1-800-337-2338. Pre-registration is required.

American Red Cross CPR Training Day is generously supported by City of Chicago Office of Emergency Management and Communications (OEMC), NBC-5 Telemundo, Clear Channel, Armstrong Medical and Comcast.

The American Red Cross of Greater Chicago serves more than 8.3 million people in Cook, DuPage, Kane, Kendall, Lake, McHenry and Will counties through the support of generous contributions of individuals, corporations, foundations, and the United Way.

Medicaid Improvements

Illinois State Medical Society (ISMS)-backed legislation just introduced in the Illinois General Assembly will better ensure Medicaid patients' access to medical care resources in Illinois. If enacted, SB 530 and its companion bill, HB 1328, would streamline reimbursement payments, within 30 days, to medical providers, as well as update Medicaid's woefully low fee schedules to at least equal Medicare rates. Many Medicaid reimbursements, especially those for specialty-specific physician care, have lagged behind inflation and ever farther behind physician practice cost increases for a decade or more.

The ISMS would like to thank the bills' sponsors for introducing this urgently needed and long-overdue measure. They are Sen. Kwame Raoul (D-Chicago), Rep. Esther Golar (D-Chicago) and Rep. Lisa Dugan (D-Kankakee).

"Doctors want to care for Medicaid patients," said Peter E. Eupierre, M.D., ISMS President, "but the financial shortfalls are making it more and more difficult to do so." He cited an almost 35 percent increase in practice costs for doctors from 1993 to 2006, far exceeding any Medicaid payment increases over the same time period. "To care for patients, doctors first have to keep open the doors to their practices, pay the staff, rent and utility bills," he said. "Medicaid's low reimbursement makes it nearly impossible to do so."

The bottom line: fewer doctors accepting Medicaid, and patients having difficulty finding care.

The state did increase Medicaid rates for certain pediatric preventive care services last year after a lawsuit was filed by patient advocacy groups claiming low reimbursement rates prevented access to care. However, the increased payment rates still only average about 88 percent of equivalent Medicare payments. According to statistics from the Kaiser Family Foundation, Illinois ranks 42nd among the states in terms of equivalency of Medicaid fee for service rates to Medicare rates. In 2006, the Illinois Adequate Health Care Task Force, which was charged by the state legislature to develop a plan giving all Illinois residents access to quality and affordable health care, recommended increasing Medicaid physician payments by at least 78 percent.

Newlyweds Really Can Say "I Do" To Home Buying

Experts say one of the best investments a newly married couple can make is buying a home.

For couples planning to marry, making the purchase of a new home part of the long-term wedding plan can be an excellent way to get used to talking openly about money. Since you are already talking about wedding expenses, you can make a smooth transition into discussing your permanent finances.

"This is a great opportunity to speak candidly regarding finances, and deciding if, in preparation to buy a home, paying down debt and improving credit scores are a factor to consider," said Ennio A. Gare'a-Miera, Vice President, GMAC Mortgage. "Start focusing on the first investment goal of owning a home by discussing your financial priorities with each other and seek the help of an experienced loan officer who can get you on the right track toward home buying."

Here are some other tips to help make home buying easier:

- Draft a budget of where you'd like to be in a year, five years or 10 years. It's not even too early to start thinking about retirement. Review your plan regularly, possibly with a financial planner, and update it as necessary.
- Commit to a realistic budget you both can afford and live by. You'll want to save enough for your closing costs, which vary depending on the financing you'll receive. Also consider saving for unexpected home repairs and maintenance. Lenders generally like to see about three to six months' of living expenses in reserve to cover unexpected expenses.
- Determine your monthly expenses and outline how to consistently save. Saving takes perseverance and discipline, especially when you are doing it together. Those who save the most are generally willing to give up minor pleasures and control spending. Start a "cappuccino fund." If you and your spouse each spend $3 a day on cappuccinos and you divert that money to savings, you could easily and painlessly save $2,190 in a year.

The most important factor on which a mortgage lender bases the terms of a mortgage is your credit score. A credit score of at least 700 is an indication of good credit and will allow you to secure a competitive interest rate.

If you need to improve your credit score, consider the following steps:

- If you have little or no credit, look for ways to improve your score, such as opening a secured credit card with your bank.
- If you have "too much" credit, work on eliminating your credit card debt. Newlyweds can't afford to fall deeper into debt than they already are.
- If you know of errors or past due accounts that have already been paid, contact the three major agencies to correct this on your report. It may be a time-consuming task, but in the end you'll be happy you took care of this before meeting with a mortgage lender.

For additional tips regarding credit and the home-buying process, you can log on to www.gmacmortgage.com. The online resource center offers a detailed section regarding your credit, a mortgage calculator and an A-Z buying guide. For Latino newlyweds, bilingual GMAC Mortgage loan officers are available by calling (888) 330-4622.

Reputable mortgage institutions can help you understand the different products and loan options available to newlyweds purchasing their first home together. A mortgage lender can provide you with the most important step of the home-buying process, a preapproval letter. This gives you an idea of the value of the home you can afford to buy.

Once you have the preapproval letter, you'll know the price range of homes you can consider, whether it's a three-bedroom home in the suburbs or a trendy loft in the city. Remember, you'll no longer be renting but making a monthly investment in owning your own home.

Taking the necessary steps to assess your situation and prepare for the home-buying process will help you achieve your goals as a couple. With your spouse, you can make home buying a priority and be in your new home even sooner than you think.

Finding A Wedding Gift That Newlyweds Will Really Use

Buying wedding gifts is no longer a seasonal endeavor - ceremonies take place in December, September and April, as well as June. In fact, October is almost as popular as June, with May following close behind. December is now the most popular month for engagements, with September and August tied for second place.

But whatever month couples choose to tie the knot or announce impending nuptials, one thing remains constant: Ninety-five percent of brides who register list their first gift preference as cookware and bakeware, according to a recent Condé Nast Bridal Group survey. Cookware/bakeware tops a list of popular registry items such as appliances, stemware, casual dinnerware, flatware and fine china.

For example, a top-selling bridal registry item that never seems to go out of style is CorningWare® French White® stoneware. The enduring fluted stoneware collection is popular in every shape, from ramekins to casserole dishes and mixing bowls.

Sixty-five percent of newlyweds expect to prepare meals at home and have friends over, entertaining as often as twice a week. The beautiful bakeware and serveware collection can be a bride's (or groom's) best friend when it comes to one-dish baking and serving. The collection recently added a three-bowl set that can cover a variety of mixing, cooking and serving needs.

Classic bakeware is not only a practical gift, but one newlyweds can use to prepare many shared romantic meals.

Here's a dish for two that's perfect for a romantic dinner but can also be multiplied for a formal dinner with guests:

Lovers Duckling In Orange Sauce

1 3-to-4-pound duckling, trimmed

of fat, rinsed and patted dry
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 1/2 cups bouillon
1 1/2 teaspoon thyme
1 sprig parsley
Salt and fresh black pepper to taste
1/2 cup orange juice concentrate
3 tablespoons orange zest
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons triple sec (orange liqueur)

Orange sauce: In a heavy saucepan, melt butter. Add flour and blend well over medium heat. Lower heat and let simmer for 3 minutes.

Heat bouillon in separate saucepan and stir into the flour mix. Stir until sauce thickens. Add herbs, lower heat and let simmer for 2 minutes. Stir in the orange juice concentrate, orange zest and lemon juice. Simmer 5 minutes and add the orange liqueur to complete the glaze.

Preheat oven to 325° F. Prick the skin of the duck all over and place breast side up in a CorningWare French White baking dish (9" x 13"). Brush duck with half of the glaze. Roast uncovered for 2 1/2 hours, basting occasionally.

When done, carve duckling, coat pieces with remaining glaze and serve promptly with white or wild rice.

Butterfly Releases

Butterfly Releases offer the viewer the chance to see beauty in flight. The viewers have the opportunity to experience the beauty of one of nature's most symbolic and beautiful creations. The butterfly symbolizes new beginnings and rebirths. What better way to celebrate the beginning of a new life together than with the releasing of butterflies at your wedding.

There is an old Indian legend that tells the story of why the butterfly was created. It is often read at butterfly releases as the guests make a wish and release their butterflies. Butterfly Releases are both magical and momentous. Every release is unique and special just as every wedding, every anniversary, every birthday, and every moment of our life is unique and special. Each of us has been given a beautiful gift of life that we must take the opportunity to experience and enjoy.

Butterflies can be released from the shipping envelopes they arrive in, with every guest having their own butterfly or with only the wedding party having their own release envelope. You may also choose to have a mass release with all of the butterflies placed in one container. Either option is special depending on the effect you are trying to achieve.

Butterflies should only be released outside during daylight hours on a sunny or overcast (not rainy) day with a temperature above 60 degrees. The butterflies should be set free no later than two hours before sunset. This allows the butterflies time to eat and find a hiding place for the night. Releases should be held in areas protected from the wind or the butterflies will quickly disappear. A warm, sunny flower filled area or garden is best. No matter how you choose to release your butterflies, a butterfly release is a beautiful, unusual, and exciting way to celebrate your new life together.

The Cost Of Getting Married

Even if you don't have cold feet about marriage, odds are you're a little nervous about the cost of your wedding.

The average ceremony costs between $20,000 and $25,000-up about 70 percent from 15 years ago, with nearly half of all couples spending more than they originally planned.

And as Echo Boomers-the demanding children of Baby Boomers-get ready to walk down the aisle, that price tag is expected to keep growing. (A sure sign that they're savvy shoppers who want the best: Echo couples now spend a total of $4 billion annually on furniture, $3 billion on housewares and $400 million on tableware alone in preparation for their new lives together.)

So how could anyone drop $20,000 on a wedding, you wonder?

Well, little things do add up. As in: $1,000 and more for the bride's gown; $500 for the groom's rented tuxedo; $900 to $1,500 for music; $800 for flowers, $350 to $500 for invitations.

But prioritizing is key, and there's nothing more important than the three rings: the bride's engagement ring (signifying the promise) and his and her wedding bands (signifying commitment).

Men usually spend about two months salary on the engagement ring alone, with the general rule of thumb for the engagement ring being 80 percent going towards the diamond and 20 percent on the setting. That's a big investment, but-unlike most wedding expenses-the right ring tends to be one of the best long-term investments you can make. And if you opt for Platinum rings and bands-and about 81 percent of brides do prefer it, according to Condé Nast Bridal Group-you certainly know you're getting value from a precious metal that will hold a diamond securely forever, no matter which of a variety of styles you choose.

The best news for would-be buyers may be that even the upscale Cartier starts at a relatively affordable Platinum engagement ring for $4,200, while prices on the popular Web site BlueNile.com are as affordable as $1,000.

"Platinum rings range in style from the sleek and shiny to the textured and funky," says jewelry and style expert Michael O'Connor. "Designers such as Gumuchian boast nontraditional, diamond-intensive Platinum bands, while other designers-such as Jeff Cooper and Novell Design Studio-jazz up their Platinum designs by creating a multitextured appearance."

But whatever ring you choose and whatever you end up spending, take heart: There will always be one wedding that costs more. Indian steel magnate Lakshmi Mittal recently dropped about $60 million dollars on his daughter's wedding, making it the most expensive ever.

Send Save The Date Cards?

You've probably heard about Save the Dates since they have become quite popular with brides, but you might not know exactly what purpose they serve.

People's lives are getting increasingly busier and more tightly scheduled so that's where Save the Date announcements come in handy. You want to make sure that your guests, especially family and close friends, keep the date of your wedding open when planning their schedules. To ensure this, you'll want to consider sending out Save the Date notices shortly after you have set your wedding date, especially if it's several months in the future or around a holiday.

Proper etiquette doesn't dictate that these advance notices have to be sent but in today's world it helps your guests in their planning so they can be sure to be with you sharing in the celebration of one of the most important days of your life. If you do decide to send them out, you are not required to send them to every one of your guests but you'll probably want to at least include close family members and friends.

Guests who will have to travel to be in attendance will find them especially helpful for giving them plenty of travel preparation time particularly if you are having a destination wedding.

It's easy to be creative when sending out your Save the Dates since there are so many different varieties and designs available.

Magnets have become a favorite selection and why not since your guests can easily stick them onto their refrigerator as their reminder. Some magnets have the option of including a photo and some actually show a calendar of your wedding date month with your date circled for easy reference.

Scratch Off Cards are a fun, unique way of announcing your wedding date. Your date will only be visible to guests after they have scratched off the appropriate area on the card similar to lottery tickets. They come in great playful designs sure to make your guests smile.

Announcement Cards can be as creative or as simple as you like. They come in varying designs, colors and themes from whimsical to more traditional. Some of them even come in creative shapes. All designs are printed with your wedding date and names and some even give the option of including the wedding location. Blank white mailing envelopes are usually included in the price no matter which design you choose. Be sure to list at the bottom of your Save the Date the added line, "invitation to follow", so guests won't assume that this is the actual wedding invitation. This is also why it's imperative that everyone who receives your Save the Date will also receive your wedding invitation.

Wedding invitations play an important role in planning your wedding, and in today's society, Save the Dates are becoming increasingly popular because of your guests' busy schedules. You want to do everything you can to make sure family and friends will be able to share in the joy of your wedding day.

Tips On Creating A Wedding To Remember

Brides everywhere know that you don't need a fortune to look like a million dollars on your wedding day.

The same holds true for the service and the reception. Experts say that with a little ingenuity and attention to detail, it's possible to put together an exotic event to remember for under $15,000.

Here are some tips:

Using a wedding planner can be a wise investment. According to Jenny Bauman of Bliss Events in San Diego, a wedding planner often knows the vendors and venues and can actually help keep a wedding on budget and on schedule.

Do the invitations yourself. Since invitations provide the first impression for a wedding, think about making your own. Some brides gather their bridesmaids together to make the invitations. It can add the personal touch and eliminate or reduce professional printing costs.

Create a signature drink that goes with the theme of the wedding. When Jaelee Jones was planning her wedding, Bauman suggested that Jones create a signature cocktail to make the day more memorable.

Jones decided to make something with Kahlua, her favorite cocktail. The drink, aptly named the Kahlua Exotic Bliss, was a combination of Kahlua, Stolli vodka, Hiram Walker raspberry schnapps, half & half and grenadine. The rich and elegant drink was a perfect cocktail to toast the happy bride and groom.

Additionally, Bauman suggested that Jones go to the Web Site www.kahlua.com to order customized gift labels for small Kahlua bottles.

The bottles were used as place cards on each table at the reception, and then as a keepsake for the guests.

"This unique and personal memento was a big hit with all of our guests. No one at the reception had ever received anything like it," said Jones. "And the best part about it was that the gift labels were free!"

Location, location, location. Even though the event location can frequently be one of the most exorbitant costs of a wedding, there are ways to reduce it.

For example, look for a venue where catered food and liquor could be brought in. This can increase your menu options and make it easier to stay within your budget.

Traditional Anniversary Presents

For those of you who just don't have a clue year to year as to what to get your spouse for your anniversary, you're in luck. There's a "proper" gift, that according to tradition, you should get your spouse on your anniversary.

Now this is just a general guide, it doesn't list exactly what gift to get, but it'll point you in the right direction.

The Bridezilla Syndrome

In a fast-paced world of wedding planning, stress levels are high, and immune systems are low. Over the course of the past 20 years, brides have transmitted what has become a bridal epidemic of our time.

The number of victims has steadily increased; and to date, there is no cure. It's been called by various clinical names: Multiple Personality Disorder, Schizophrenia, Temporary Insanity. However, in the world of matrimony, for anyone who's been exposed - fiancé, family, friends, and victims themselves -- this broadening illness has been commonly termed "Bridezilla Syndrome" or "BS."

A contagious condition, Bridezilla Syndrome has become more prominent and has plagued today's busy, wedding-planning women. In a preliminary study, the disease has spread at an alarming rate. Symptoms of victims of Bridezilla Syndrome -- better known as Bridezillas -- include reoccurring mood spells, bouts with selfishness, signs of controlling behavior, and feelings of meticulousness. Unfortunately fiancé, bridal party members, friends and family eventually fall victim to the actions and attitudes of a Bridezilla.

Research suggests that symptoms are recognized most often by the fiancé, and Maid of Honor, and are completely undetectable by the actual victim. In some cases, when a bridal party member, who having had too much to drink, confronted the Bridezilla, the result has most often been an emotional breakdown of the victim which intensified her condition. In a survey of 100 Maids of Honor, an alarming 85% said they avoided confrontations with the Bridezilla, for fear it would only exasperate the illness.

So, we must ask the underlying questions: Where is all this Bridezilla Syndrome coming from? How does one know when she's a Bridezilla?

Unfortunately the source has not been found, though it is believed it has existed since the dawn of the institution of marriage. A short-term condition (symptoms persist for about 1 to 2 years, depending on one's wedding date), Bridezillas seem to have been unfairly blamed for their actions, which some believe they have no control over, albeit their control over everything else. In fact, it's been clinically proven that a Bridezilla actually does have feelings -- feelings of selfishness, insecurity, anxiousness and stress!

Even though it's been said there is no cure for the Bridezilla Syndrome, there are ways to prevent Bridezilla infection. A survey of healthy brides, who successfully planned their weddings without contracting the Bridezilla disease, was conducted. Results showed commonalities of the actions performed to avoid the disorder. Doctors, psychologists and wedding planners strongly suggest the following preventative therapy:

- Keep Thing in Perspective - remind yourself that the wedding is only one day in your life. When things get out of control, close your eyes and remember the reason why you are planning this wedding in the first place.

- Don't Assume Your Groom Doesn't Want to Help - ask him what he'd like to take responsibility for; and then let him. (note: some grooms may follow the cliché and decline this offer.)

- Know That You Can't Control Everything - realize this and accept it!

- Delegate. Delegate. Delegate - If you act like you can handle everything, people will let you. Spread the duties.

- Don't Sweat the Small Stuff - people won't remember whether or not your invitations had those cute little tissues enclosed.

- Treat The People You Cherish with Love - the wedding is one day; your family and friends are forever.

- Allow Others to Vent - give your fiancé, family, and bridesmaids, permission to tell you when you're going off the deep-end.

- Take the Heat - give yourself permission to hear them.

- Do Something for Yourself Every Day - the catch is that it must not involve the wedding.

- No Wedding Talk After 10 p.m.

Although preventative therapy is available, some brides inherently fall victim and still contract Bridezilla Syndrome. But there is hope! This is not a terminal illness. In fact, in most cases, the Bridezilla bride has been known to be miraculously cured once she has returned from her honeymoon. Doctors and psychologists theorize that the change in altitude from flying, coupled with excessive levels of the love hormone, Oxytocin counteracts the disease by boosting the immune system, thus eliminating symptoms of the Bridezilla Syndrome.

In cases of remission, the disease has been known to resurface when a person, under certain circumstances, may be planning her wedding again. According to research, those brides with a higher IQ score avoided the reoccurrence of Bridezilla Syndrome symptoms by simply eloping.

Whatever your situation, whether a Bridezilla, fiancé, friend, or family member of one, -- join in the fight! With love, hope and education, our brides of the future and their bridal parties will have a winning chance against the Bridezilla Syndrome!

Proposal Tips

(NAPSI)-It has been estimated that 85 percent of women were disappointed with the way their husbands or fiancés proposed. Fortunately, if you're one of the 2.3 million men who are going to propose this year, it can be easier than you think to avoid disappointment.

Wedding planner Angie Bloom Hewitt of TLC's "For Better Or For Worse" offers some simple tips for a practically perfect proposal:

- Make A Plan-Keep in mind that she will be telling this story for the rest of her life and you want her to be proud of it. So think through all the details of when, where and how.
- Match Her Personality-Match her personality and her interests with the proposal, not yours. If she's shy and private, don't propose in public.
- Just because you are a sports fan doesn't mean she wants a proposal at the big game. If she loves board games, use Scrabble letters to spell out "Will you marry me?" If she loves scuba diving, write "Will you marry me?" on your diver's slate and propose underwater. If she loves mysteries, send her on a treasure hunt with you on your knees as the end. In general, remember the proposal is about showing her you understand her, care for her and want to be committed to her forever.
- Pick The Right Ring-Just as she will be telling the story of how you proposed, she'll be showing and wearing her engagement ring forever. For a lot of men, picking out the perfect ring causes a lot of anxiety, but honestly, it is easy if you enlist the right help. The professionals at Kay Jewelers have an independently certified diamondologist in each store who is trained to know everything about diamonds and can help you select something you know she'll love. A good suggestion is The Leo Diamond, the first diamond to be independently measured and certified for its superior brilliance. You can hold up a Leo Diamond next to a conventional diamond and see the difference immediately. Visit your Kay Jewelers store or www.kay.com for more details.
- Don't Hide The Ring In Food-While you may be tempted to hide the engagement ring in food, there are three good reasons not to do so. First, it is passé-done and overdone. Second, it poses hazards, from choking to teeth cracking. Finally, you've just picked out a beautiful, sparkling ring. You want to dazzle her when she first sees it.
- Videotape the Proposal-If possible, capture the proposal on videotape. She will likely be so emotional that many of the event's details will slip by her. Videotaping is a great way to save the memories for posterity. And, a videotaped proposal can be easily incorporated into the wedding reception, rehearsal dinner events or even your wedding video.

Grooms Cake Making A Comeback

Having its roots in Southern tradition, the groom's cake has been around for quite some time and is making a fashionable comeback on the wedding scene. Traditionally, a groom's cake was sliced and boxed for the unmarried girls attending the wedding to take home and place under their pillows in hopes that the man they dreamed of would be their future husband.

It's a personal choice when to serve the cake - either at the rehearsal dinner, as an alternate dessert with the wedding cake, or as a late night dessert for the wedding party. Just because primarily groom cakes tend to be a fruit cake or a chocolate cake shouldn't dictate what the bride and groom should have. Obviously being named "Groom's Cake" it should be a flavor and theme that the groom enjoys. The following are some examples of how that was achieved:

The cake can either be ordered by the bride as a surprise for her groom, the groom can order it himself, or the bridal couple. Most importantly if the cake is to be displayed, near the wedding cake, its design and presence should not compete with the wedding cake. The wedding cake should always have top priority in design and place of honor.

If the cake is to be pre-boxed and not served at the reception but to be taken by the guests as favors, then the following two sites offer some alternative possibilities. One is presented at http://www.marthastewart.com/weddings/flowers/wf108_000_0005.asp?category=cakes where the slices are individually boxed and then placed to simulate a tiered cake on a cake stand. This stylish design from Martha Stewart.com makes a wonderful display. Another idea is from Gail Watson, <http://www.gailwatsoncake.com/groom-scakes.html>, a premier New York cake designer, she offers the idea of individual petite four cakes in place of a full size cake. These petite fours can then be boxed for the guests.

"Wedding Superstition" From Brides Around The Nation

Did you know that it is good luck to get married when the second hand of the clock is going upward? Did you know that it is bad luck to see the bride in all her glory before she walks down the aisle? The following is a list of "wedding superstitions" compiled from brides around the nation.

Hang Gift Bows over Door

The couple should hang all of the gift bows in a bunch over the front door for a year. It brings good luck.

Rain and Tears

If it rains on your wedding day, you'll shed many tears during your married life.

Tears of Pearls

The bride should wear pearls on her wedding day to ensure she would not cry.

Over the Threshold

When a newly married couple enters their home, the groom should carry the bride over the threshold because if the bride should stumble entering the home, it is a bad omen.

Tying Tin Cans

Tying tin cans to the back of the newlyweds' ear is good luck because the noise will frighten away evil spirits.

Rose Petals

Do you know why flower girls drop flower petals as they walk down the aisle? So the new couple will have lots of chances to have babies!

Top layer of your Wedding Cake

In the United Kingdom it is traditional to save the top layer of your wedding cake for the christening of your first child.

Smashing Glasses

When you and your husband toast your new life together you must smash the glasses that you toast with. This way the glasses are never used for a better purpose.

Lucky Day to Marry

The Victorians believed it was lucky to marry on a day during the week the groom was born. But the luckiest day to marry was on the groom's actual birthday.

The White Wedding Gown

White dresses have nothing to do with virginity. In ancient times cloth was very expensive to bleach and more than one bleaching was required. The whiter the cloth, the more affluent the bride's family. Some symbols of virginity/purity are the bride's hair worn down at the ceremony, orange blossoms, or a wreath of flowers worn on the head.

Throwing Rice

It was said throwing rice at the new couple was to "feed" the evil spirits and distract them, thus keeping the new marriage safe.

Top Layer of the Wedding Cake

The top layer of the wedding cake should be saved for the couple's first anniversary. It should be wrapped in plastic wrap, then paper towels, then freezer paper, then taped with freezer tape and frozen to ensure that it will not ruin. You can put the cake in the freezer for an hour or so to set the icing before wrapping if you want. In the first anniversary, remove the cake from the freezer, let thaw, and enjoy the memories of your wedding day.

"Bow"-quet

Make sure you hold on to the bows and ribbons that you untie at your bridal/wedding shower. Thread the ribbons through a paper plate (any color) and decorate the plate with all the bows to make "flowers." On the day or night of your rehearsal, utilize your "bow"-quet in place of your real floral bouquet for good luck.

Tears of Pearls

A superstition from Mexico has it that the bride cannot wear pearls on her wedding day for the pearls are the tears she will cry in her marriage.

No Knives, Please

In the Jewish tradition it's bad luck to receive knives as a wedding gift. In case someone should give knives, the bride should transform the exchange into a financial transaction by giving a penny or nominal sum for the knives.

Stand-in Bride

The bride is never supposed to practice walking down the aisle during her rehearsal or it will bring bad luck. The most popular alternative is to ask a close friend not in the wedding party to be your "Stand-in Bride."

Tears of Happiness

If a bride cries on her wedding day, those shall be the last tears she ever sheds over her marriage.

Penny Loafer

Put a penny in your shoe for wealth in your marriage.

I'm on the left and you're on the right

The bride is on the left side of the groom in Christian marriages so that the groom could have easy access to his sword to defend his bride from rival suitors.

Virgin Mary Figurine in the Window

If you want a sunny wedding day, it was a good idea to place a figurine of the Virgin Mary in your window the week before the date. This was to help guarantee that the day would be sunny and wonderful in many ways.

A Special Kiss

It's good luck for the bride to be kissed by a chimney sweep on her wedding day.

The Veil

The veil is to disguise the bride from evil spirits.

The Bridesmaid's Dress

Dressing the bridesmaids is to fool the evil spirits - so they won't know who is the bride and who is not.

Throwing Rice

Throwing rice is supposed to be a way of wishing fertility and prosperity to the bride and groom.

The Second-Hand of the Clock

Rumor has it that couples should marry when the second-hand of the clock is going up instead of going down. For example, 2:30 p.m. or 10:45 a.m.

Full Moon

Superstition has it that if there is a full moon 1-2 days before the wedding, then your married life will be filled with luck and good fortune.

Estate And Antique Jewelry

Tired of looking at the same engagement rings and wedding bands everyone has? Do you want something original? Well, then, estate jewelry might be for you.

Estate jewelry is defined in two ways, according to William Noble, owner of William Noble Diamonds in Dallas, TX. It's any pre-owned jewelry bought one year ago to 200 years ago or it is any antique or period jewelry such as art deco, Victorian or Edwardian period. Don't get confused, though. There is a difference between antique jewelry and estate jewelry according to Ruth Fortunoff, VP of Fortunoff. "Antique jewelry is 100 years old or older. Estate jewelry is anything in-between and usually previously owned."

So why is someone else's cast-off better than a brand new engagement or wedding ring? Well, when you buy an estate piece you're buying a little bit of history. "For those who adore nostalgia and a link back to a bygone era, an antique diamond engagement ring could be the right choice," said Richard A. Winick, a partner at New York's Manny Winick & Son, Inc. Estate jewelry is also known for its top-notch workmanship and a one-of-a-kind look. Sometimes older pieces are even more valuable than newer ones.

Like any jewelry, it is important to examine your estate ring carefully. Ask the history of the piece:

- Has it been altered or changed since the original construction?
- Are any of the stones treated?
- What period or part of the world is it from?
- Any famous ownership?

Ken Gold, owner of Stardust Antiques in New York, suggests checking all the settings since resizing a ring, as well as daily wear, can often make stones loose. Remember, since this ring is previously owned, it may appear worn - this is frequently a sign of authenticity. Also according to Gold, older stones (prior to the 1920s) were cut flat. So make sure the culet (the stone's bottom) isn't pointed (aka a brilliant cut). If it is, the stone, if not the ring, is fairly modern.

Most importantly, you should love the ring. Don't buy it solely for its value - how many of us end up selling our engagement or wedding rings anyway? As Winick says, "Remember this is an investment not only of the pocket-book, but of the heart as well."

Although you can find estate sales through posted auctions, you might want to consider purchasing your ring from a reputable wholesale, retail or antique jewelry store where you can benefit from the advice of an experienced jeweler. After all, "estate sale bargains can be no bargain at all if the jewelry turns out to be something other than as described or represented," says Winick.

Robert E. Hynes Dies

Robert E. Hynes, brother of former Cook County Assessor and State Senator Thomas Hynes, died of a heart attack on Friday, Feb. 16th at his Palos Heights home. Mr. Hynes was a partner in the Loop law firm of O'Keefe Lyons and Hynes and was a tax lawyer for 40 years.

He served as close advisor to his brother Thomas Hynes and was the uncle of Illinois Comptroller Daniel Hynes. Mr. Hynes was born in Chicago on April 5, 1944 and was one of five boys in his family. His parents immigrated to the United States from Ireland in the 1920's. The family was raised in the Brainerd Community of Chicago's South Side. He attended St. Killian Elementary School and Leo High School. He attended Loyola University and obtained his bachelor's degree in 1965 after which he attended law school at night.

At this time he married Legoria, his wife of 42 years. Legoria had been his childhood sweetheart and she lived across the street from him. He received his law degree from Loyola University in 1969 and admitted to practice law in Illinois in 1969. He was an agent with the Internal Revenue Service, then became an assistant general counsel at the Illinois Department of Revenue. He was also general counsel for the Cook County Assessor.

He eventually went into private practice. He became a partner with O'Keefe Lyons and Hynes three years ago. He lived in the Beverly neighborhood where he lived for 25 years before moving to Palos Heights.

According to family members, Mr. Hynes was involved with many charities and organizations; he also funded scholarships at Mount Carmel High School and at Loyola Law School.

Mr. Hynes is survived by his wife Legoria; his children Kevin, Brian (Roberta) and Michael (Isabel) Hynes; six grandchildren; his brother Tom (Judy), Tim CFD (Sharon) and Jack (Sara).

Mass was said at St. Cajetan Church, Chicago, on Wednesday, with interment at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

Aglow International

The Oak Lawn Chapter of Aglow International will meet on Thursday, March 8th at Mama Luigi's Restaurant, 7500 S. Harlem in Bridgeview.

The featured speaker for March will be Adelinc Kramer. She has been a member of the Oak Lawn Community Church for over 40 years. She is an ordained Elder, Prayer Ministry Chairman, TEAM Calling Ministry Director, Lay Coordinator, and was a member of the choir for many years. She will speak about PADS and give information and statistics about our community and the plight of the homeless. She has spoken at our light-house chapter in the past, about her experiences as a hospice worker.

Dinner tickets are $13 and are available at 6:30 p.m. at the door. Dinner is served promptly at 7 p.m. Reservations are required by March 5th. For additional information and reservations, call June at (708) 424-1656.

Aglow International is an inter-denominational organization of renewed Christian women with over 2,600 fellowships, which regularly hold meetings, retreats, and conferences on six continents.

Aglow holds bible studies and publishes leadership training materials, books and tracts, reaching out to women in prisons and hospitals, teenage girls with intercessory prayer groups and support groups. Aglow's mission is to lead women to Jesus Christ and provide an opportunity for Christian women to grow in their faith and minister to others.

Unveil Sign For Local Ronald McDonald House

Ronald McDonald House Charities® of Chicagoland & Northwest Indiana (RMHC- CNI) announced the sign unveiling for the fourth Ronald McDonald House in the Chicagoland and Northwest Indiana chapter.

RMHC- CNI unveiled the sign at the site of the future House on the northeast corner of 93rd and Kostner in Oak Lawn. The sign was placed on the lot of the new house until construction is complete.

"Unveiling the sign for the fourth House is taking us one step closer to opening the doors for awaiting families in need," said Doug Porter, CEO RMHC-CNI. "It is truly a privilege to add another House to our chapter."

The new Ronald McDonald House will be a home-away-from-home for the families of young patients that are hospitalized at Advocate Hope Children's Hospital.

The house will be 22,000 square feet, with 16-bedrooms. The Oak Lawn location is ideal for patients traveling long distances from southern Illinois and surrounding states. It will facilitate families of critically-ill children in the Advocate Hope Children's Hospital with a restful place to sleep and shared living space that allows families to cook, relax, and meet other families in their same circumstances.

RMHC-CNI chose the architectural team of Constantine Vasilios, LLC and ArchitectureFun as the architects for this project. Leopardo Construction has been chosen as the general contractor.

"We are enthused for completing the beginning stages of the new House," said Mary Agnes Laguatan, Director of Programs and Services for RMHC-CNI. "Not only will the new House benefit families, it will enrich the Oak Lawn community at large."

The groundbreaking for the new house is scheduled for late this spring with an opening day planned for mid-2008.

Women's History Month Celebration

Moraine Valley Community College will celebrate Women's History Month 1960s style to coincide with the college's yearlong 40th anniversary celebration, which begins March 1st. Free events, including a Moraine Valley Woodstock and a health day featuring a video and a talk by a doctor, are scheduled throughout March that will highlight the feminist movement while also focusing on topics important to women today. All events are open to the public and will be held in the Marge and Bob Bobb Student Life Center, Building C, on campus, 9000 W. College Parkway, unless otherwise noted.

Dig out those tie-dyed shirts and bell-bottom jeans and come to the Women's History Month kickoff event, a Moraine Valley Woodstock, on Tuesday, March 6th from noon to 2 p.m. Members of the award-winning Moraine Valley Speech Team will perform speeches delivered by famous women of the feminist movement, while a DJ spins music from the 1960s. Pizza and canned Coca-Cola, popular food from that decade, will be served.

Women's History Month Health Day will be Thursday, March 8th from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The day starts with an 11:30 showing of the PBS documentary "The Pill," which discusses the impact the birth control pill had on American society in the 1960s. At 1 p.m. the Moraine Valley Speech Team will present a short, duo interpretation called "Breasts," a comedy/tragedy play about breasts, breast cancer and mammograms. Dr. Shana Sewel, in conjunction with Moraine Valley's Peers Educating Peers Club, will follow the play at 1:15 with a presentation on "HPV, the Vaccine and Cervical Cancer Prevention."

Senator Christine Radogno Is Named Spokesperson For Human Services Committee

State Senator Christine Radogno (R-Lemont) was recently named Republican spokesman for the Senate Human Services Committee, and will also join the Senate Executive and Public Health Committees in addition to her ongoing appointment to all three Senate Appropriations committees.

Radogno previously served on the Health and Human Services committee, and noted that she is eager to continue to work on issues that impact the public's access to health care as well as related issues, including welfare reform and senior health care coverage.

"Providing reliable, accessible health care coverage is one of the key responsibilities of state government, and I am glad I once again have the opportunity to serve the people of Illinois in this capacity," said Radogno. "The General Assembly will be considering a number of controversial and divisive health care issues in the coming months, and I look forward to working with my legislative colleagues to fashion responsible, sensible health care policies."

In addition to her duties on the Human Services and Public Health committees, Radogno will also serve for the first time on the Senate Executive Committee, which considers a wide-range of high-profile issues, including changes to the state's constitution and state government policies.

"I'm eager to begin working with the Executive Committee, which is often called to make decisions on Illinois' most pressing and contentious issues," Radogno explained. "While I have not been a member of the Executive Committee before, I am excited to learn more about different areas of state government, and have a hand in shaping a diverse range of public policy."

Additionally, Radogno will continue to serve on all three Senate Appropriations committees, which review the budgetary recommendations of the Governor. Often, lawmakers on Appropriations committees also attend hearings to receive detailed information for use in the committee's consideration of proposed state revenue allocation.

Named Illinois State Scholars At St. Rita

Illinois State Scholar is recognition given to the top 10% of the Senior Class of 2007 in Illinois. Recipients who receive this distinction do so based on class rank and the composite score on the ACT/SAT exams. The twenty-four Illinois State Scholars at St. Rita High School represent 13% of their senior class.

Telephone Tax Refund

The telephone tax refund is a one-time payment available on 2006 federal income tax returns, designed to refund previously collected federal excise taxes on long distance or bundled service. It is available to anyone who paid such taxes on landline, wireless, or Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) service. The excess charges were from Feb. 28, 2003 to Aug. 1, 2006. The refundable refunds would be in the amounts of $30, $40, $50, and $60 depending on one's filing status and exemption amounts. Those who file a federal 1040 for 2006 can request a credit along with their refund amount - this means cash in hand. Those who are not required to file a federal return, can file a 1040EZ-T to obtain the credit.

Jackson Hewitt Tax Service of Oak Lawn is available to answer any and all questions regarding this credit that all individuals who paid for phone service after 2003 are entitled to. Also, Jackson Hewitt Tax Service of Oak Lawn with four convenient locations, will fill out the 1040EZ-T form for free for those not required to file a federal 1040 for 2006.

Stop in at any of its locations and get the money that you are entitled to. Oak Lawn on 95th St. at 6056 W. 95th St. next to the McDonalds, 2 blocks west of Southwest Highway; Oak Lawn South at 10939 S. Cicero Ave., across from K-Mart; Chicago Ridge Mall - across from Panera Bread; and 8717 S. Harlem - next to Brown's Chicken. Jackson Hewitt has over 6,000 offices throughout the United States providing full service individual federal and state income tax preparation. Jackson Hewitt has been serving Oak Lawn for 15 years. Wedding Dress Styles To Match Your Romantic Mood

Dress Styles: A-Line/Princess - The A-line dress features a shape that is fitted around the bodice and flows out to the ground, resembling the outline of an uppercase A. The dress flows fluidly from the bust to the hem with an unbroken line. Due to its classic and simple style, the A-line dress is appropriate for any occasion, from a quiet backyard gathering, to a traditional church ceremony.

The princess cut is the most dramatic variation of the A-line dress. This style emphasizes the clean lines of the A-line by utilizing vertical panels that run from the neckline to the hem. The princess style provides elongating lines that create a slimming effect since your eye focuses on the length created by these long, smooth seams.

Dress Styles: Column - The column dress has a narrow shape that flows straight down from the neckline to the hem. This dress, also referred to as a sheath, tends to hug the body and show any and all of your curves. The column is appropriate for all types of weddings, especially casual occasions on the beach, or intimate evening events at a banquet hall.

The column silhouette works well with many different skirt lengths. The classic look barely grazes the floor, but you can mix it up with a knee length skirt for a casual afternoon wedding, or add a bustle and train for winter church wedding. Because of the simplicity of this style, the length of your dress can add character and formality to your gown.

Mermaid - The mermaid silhouette contours to the body from the chest to the knee, then flares out to the hem. This is a very sexy look that highlights the curves of a woman's body. For this reason, you must be confident and comfortable in your skin to pull off this dramatic style.

The mermaid cut is not for everyone. This daring design is best worn by slender figures, both short and tall. Since the mermaid dress is made to hug the body and show every curve, it is not well suited for those brides with full figures. However, if you are on the voluptuous side and want to accentuate your curves, this is the perfect dress for you. The most important thing to keep in mind when considering a Mermaid style dress is whether or not you will feel comfortable wearing it on your big day.

North American Wedding Traditions

North America encompasses many cultures and many wedding traditions. Mexican wedding traditions have been influenced by Spain, France, and by their own ancient and rich cultural traditions stretching as far back as the Aztecs. The melting-pot wedding traditions in the United States have been influenced by virtually every country and every culture on Earth, making for a rich and varied amalgam of traditions. Canadian traditions have been influenced strongly by both English traditions as well as French traditions.

This makes North American Wedding traditions some of the most flexible and varied in all the world. No matter what your dream wedding may be, it is sure to find a welcome place in grand scheme of North American wedding Traditions.

In Mexico, for example, it is customary during the vows for a white ribbon or for a rosary, called a "lasso," to be draped around the necks of the newlyweds to symbolize their joining together. It is also customary for the groom to present his wife with thirteen gold coins during the ceremony, symbolizing the groom's commitment to support his new wife. As the couple leaves the church it is customary for red beads to be tossed at them as a means of insuring the new couple good luck.

At a Mexican wedding reception it is customary for the guests to form a heart-shaped circle around the wedding couple as they engage in their first dance as husband and wife.

A paper maché piñata, often shaped like a heart and filled with candy, is suspended from the ceiling and the children take turns swinging at it with a stick until it is broken and the candy is shared among all the guests.

In Victorian times American brides customarily wore white gloves which were symbols of both modesty as well as a symbol of romance. Even today many brides wear white gloves as a romantic gesture.

Today's wedding ceremony in the United States can be a rather elaborate affair, especially among the affluent, but small backyard weddings are also common. No matter what the setting it is becoming more and more common for American couples to write their own wedding vows, expressing their love and commitment for each other in their own words and expressing their own unique feelings.

Traditionally wedding ceremonies in North America end with the couple exchanging wedding rings - the circular ring, with no beginning and no end symbolizing ever-lasting love - and the traditional wedding kiss, to seal their union in front of friends and family.

As the newlyweds leave the ceremony tradition calls for rice to be tossed at the couple as a symbol of fertility.

Wedding gifts are also a customary North American wedding tradition. Wedding gifts are a way for friends and family to help the young couple set up their new home together and to help smooth the path of their new life together.

North American wedding traditions embrace virtually any ethnic or cultural tradition practiced anywhere in the world. So no matter what the wedding of your dreams might look like, if you can envision it, you can realize it within the ideal of the North American wedding tradition.

The Legend Of The Wedding Cake

Beginning in early Roman times, the cake has been a special part of the wedding celebration. A thin loaf was broken over the bride's head at the close of the ceremony to symbolize fertility. The wheat from which it was made, symbolized fertility and the guests eagerly picked up the crumbs as good luck charms. This tradition evolved and spread to England in the Middle Ages where the guests of a wedding would bring small cakes and stack them together. During the Middle Ages, it became traditional for the couple to kiss over a small cluster of cakes. Later, a clever baker decided to amass all these small cakes together, covering them with frosting. Thus, the modern tiered cake was born.

The three-tier wedding cake is based on the unusual shape of the spire of Saint Bride's Church in London. The bride and groom make the first cut of the wedding cake to signify sharing their life together. Every guest then eats at least a crumb of the cake to ensure good luck. And if a single woman sleeps with a piece of wedding cake under her pillow, she will dream of her future husband.

The wedding cake, to be shared by the newlyweds and their guests, signifies the "breaking of the kinship." The bride's knife signifies that the new wife is ready to accept the responsibilities of her role as keeper of her own household.

As reported in a February, 1840 edition of The London Times, Queen Victoria's wedding cake was more than nine feet in circumference. A second tier arose from this "placau," supported by two pedestals. On the second tier was a sculpture of the mythical heroine Britannia gazing upon the royal pair frozen at the moment of their exchanging vows. At their feet were two turtle doves (symbolizing purity and innocence) and a dog (representing faithful attachment). Completing the scene were various sculpted Cupids, one of them writing the date of the wedding with a stylus on a tablet.

Solemn Pledge

The word "wed" is derived from the ancient Greek word for "pledge." And that's exactly what a wedding is, no matter what country it takes place in, no matter what culture it's part of. To wed is to pledge yourself to another. There are few acts we perform that are more pure or more beautiful than the act of marriage.

Marriage is the most solemn pledge we make in our lifetimes. Traditionally the wedding pledge is made in front of family and friends who take special pains to stand up and witness our pledge. The wedding pledge is to be true and faithful and loving to another human being. To wed is both the most basic of all human pledges, and at the same time the most sublime.

Marriage carries with it the most solemn of promises, but it also embodies the potential for the greatest joy of human existence - the pure joy that flows from two hearts beating as one. There are few joys in life as deep or as long lasting as the joy that springs from the well of true love and a lasting marriage.

We even have a term for it: soul mates. Two people, individual but at the same time inextricably a part of each other, so in-tune with the wants and the needs and the desires of the other that often words are not necessary. A mere glance between two lovers speaks volumes.

In almost all cultures the marriage ceremony ends with the bride and groom exchanging a kiss. The wedding kiss transcends cultures, it bridges tribes, it is one of the very few things that bind all of us together as human beings. From ancient times to the modern day, from the deepest jungles to the tallest skyscrapers, the wedding kiss symbolizes for all people everywhere the physical uniting of two souls.

Marriage is a bringing together. It is a bringing together of two people, of two families, or two tribes, or two villages, or even two countries. Marriage is that powerful. Marriage is not something to be entered into lightly. Marriage is a pledge meant to last a lifetime.

Yet it is one of the unceasing marvels that we are able to express something as basic as love and marriage in so many wonderful and touching ways. Such is the wonder of human existence. The ceremonies and the traditions may be different, they may seem strange or outlandish or they may touch feelings in us that we never knew we had, but there is something about marriage that is instantly recognizable no matter what the language.

It has often been said that love transcends everything, that it knows no barriers. If you are looking for a unique or thoughtful way of showing your love, then perhaps you have come to the right place. Here you will find many ways to "tie the knot." Perhaps you will discover a charming wedding tradition that you can make all your own. If you have decided to make the pledge, then be prepared to embrace love and marriage in all its splendors, and the world will be yours.

Something Old Something New

This good luck saying dates back to Victorian times and many brides try to arrange their wedding attire accordingly.

Something Old represents the link with the bride's family and the past. Many brides choose to wear a piece of antique family jewelry or a mother's or grandmother's wedding gown or handkerchief.

Something New represents good fortune and success and her hopes for a bright future in her new life. The wedding gown is often chosen as the new item.

Something Borrowed is to remind the bride that friends and family will be there for her when help is needed. "Borrowing" is especially important, since it is to come from a happily married woman, thereby lending the bride some of her own marital bliss to carry into the new union.

Something Blue is the symbol of faithfulness and loyalty. Often the blue item is the garter. Brides of ancient Israel wore blue ribbons on the border of their wedding cloths to denote, love, modesty and fidelity. These are ideals still associated today with that color. Blue also denotes the purity of the Virgin Mary and is the most popular of all colors. In ancient Israel brides wore a blue ribbon in their hair to symbolize their fidelity.

A Silver Sixpence in her Shoe is to wish the bride wealth. Some brides still place a penny in their shoe during the marriage ceremony.

This bridal custom is the most purely symbolic custom of all and its meaning has remained unchanged throughout the years.

Are You And Your Spouse Financially Compatible?

by John Addison

(NAPSI)-A successful marriage will leave enough room to accommodate each person's individual taste and style. Just because one person likes Jimmy Buffet and the other is a fan of Warren Buffet doesn't mean a marriage is headed for trouble.

However, when it comes to how you handle money--both individually and as a couple--compatibility is critical if a marriage is to thrive.

When you commit to a marriage, you also commit to a lifelong dialogue about money. Experts say differing attitudes about money--not just how much you have--are often at the root of many serious marital conflicts.

The following Money Magazine quiz can give you some insight into your and your spouse's financial values. Answer them individually.

questions incorrectly--or your spouse gave answers different from yours on three or more questions--it's a good idea to have a serious discussion about your finances.

If you and your spouse are finding it difficult to agree on your financial goals, you may want to speak to someone who may be able to help. The financial professionals at Primerica have created a guide that shows you how to take control of your financial life. 1. Are you proud of how your spouse handles money?
2. Do the two of you agree about your financial goals?
3. Do you both agree with the family's investment strategy?
4. When you make financial decisions, does the same person always have the last word?
5. Do you fight about the monthly bills?
6. Have you and your spouse agreed to consult each other about major purchases or investments? Does the word "major" have a specific dollar amount attached?
7. Do you both know your family's net worth without having to dig through statements?
8. If one of you lost your job, could you adjust your budget without extended arguments?

Experts say the answers to all questions except 4 and 5 should be "yes." If you answer three or more of the What's Your Ironing Personality?

Americans are ironing more than ever and have revealed their "ironing personalities" by exposing what they're pressing and what they're wearing or not wearing while ironing. The results may surprise you!

A recent survey found that Americans iron everything from puppets, pillowcases and pet paraphernalia to T-shirts, tennis shoes, term papers and towels. Additionally, in some homes, ironing boards have been replaced by such items as buckets, bathtubs, barstools and bleachers.

At least one resident from each city confessed to ironing in the buff. Respondents to the recent 15-city survey conducted by Rowenta, the garment care expert, fell into one of three "Ironing Personalities":

Ironing Aficionado: A perpetual presser who irons a large variety of items, from boxers to socks to curtains;

Peer Pressure Presser: An ironer who sticks to the basics, yet has a firm grasp on the importance of the task;

Seasonal Steamer: An infrequent presser who dusts off the iron for special occasions, pressing only what's necessary.

Social Security Columns

By John Flynn

Social Security District Manager

As you're preparing your cards, you may also want to join the millions of users who have fallen in love with Social Security's online services. Here's our own sampler of things you can do at www.socialsecurity.gov.

See if you qualify for Social Security benefits. You can use our online screening tool to see what benefits you might be eligible for from any of the programs Social Security administers. Then you can use our benefit planners to calculate your benefit amounts, whether you're considering retirement or disability or the benefits available to your family if you die.

Apply for benefits. You can apply for Social Security retirement, spouse or disability benefits right over the Internet. If you are applying for disability benefits you'll also need to complete the disability report, which is also available online. Need to take a break or look for some records to answer the questions? That's just fine with us: you can leave and then come back to complete it. After you have applied, you can return to the web site later to check for status.

Find the office closest to you. There is much you can do online, but sometimes you may want to visit a representative face-to-face. If that's the case, your first step is to visit our online field office locator. Just type in your ZIP code and find the Social Security office closest to you.

Get a Password. If you already get Social Security benefits, there's even more you can do online when you have a password. Anyone who gets benefits can get a password. With a password, you can check the information and benefit amounts in your Social Security records and change your address, telephone or direct deposit account information without leaving the comfort of your home.

A Wrong Number Can Delay Your Tax Return

If you expect a refund on your federal taxes, you can avoid a delay by making sure all names and Social Security numbers are recorded correctly on your tax return.

When processing tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) checks all names and Social Security numbers for accuracy. When IRS discovers an incorrect Social Security number on your tax return, they send you a letter explaining the discrepancy. To fix the problem, you'll need to give IRS the correct Social Security number before you can expect your tax refund.

If you don't have a number or you need one for a dependent, call or visit Social Security. You'll need to show your age, citizenship or lawful alien status, and verify your identity. To learn more about the sort of information and documents you may need to submit, visit Social Security's Card and Number web site at <http://www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnumber/>.

You should also check the Social Security number on your W-2 statement and pay stubs to make sure it matches the one on your card. If it does not match, tell your employer immediately and also contact Social Security.

You also can visit your local Social Security office, or call 1(800) 772-1213, TTY 1(800) 325-0778.

GENERAL

Q. I'm 55 years old and have worked since I was 18. So I have well over the 40 credits I need to qualify for Social Security. Why do I have to keep paying Social Security taxes if I already qualify for maximum benefits?

A. As long as you are working, the law requires Social Security tax withholding for almost all wage earners. Only some government employees and career railroad workers are exempt from Social Security taxes because they pay into a separate retirement fund. In addition, you should not confuse the eligibility rules with the benefit calculation rules. Although you need only 10 years, or 40 credits of coverage, to be vested in Social Security, your retirement benefit is based on your highest 35 years of earnings. In other words, if you were allowed to drop out of Social Security after meeting the 10-year vesting rule, you would receive a very small Social Security benefit when you reach retirement age, because we would have to add 25 years of "zero" earnings into your retirement calculation.

Q. Can you settle a bet I have with a friend? She told me I need 40 credits from Social Security to collect retirement benefits. But I'm sure I read 10 years of work is the requirement. Who's right?

A. Both of you are right, because 40 credits and 10 years of work are roughly the same thing. In 2007, you get one Social Security credit for each $1,000 you earn, but you can only earn up to four credits in a year. Obviously, people with breaks in their work history will take longer than 10 years to earn the 40 credits they need for Social Security.

RETIREMENT

Q. My brother and I are both retired and get Social Security benefits. We worked side by side in the same factory for years, but he gets a higher Social Security payment. Why does he get more?

A. Unless you are twins and made exactly the same amount every year of your careers, you wouldn't get the same benefits as your brother. Social Security benefits are based on your age and your lifetime of earnings - generally the top 35 years. In order to get the same benefit as your brother, you and he must have been the same age, had the same earnings for each year and would had to have started and stopped working at the same time.

DISABILITY

Q. It has been about a month since I applied for Social Security disability benefits and I still haven't heard anything. How long does a decision usually take?

A. The amount of time it takes for a decision on a disability claim varies. The nature of your disability and how quickly we are able to get medical evidence from your doctor or medical sources can make a difference in how long it takes. Generally, to get an initial decision on your case, it takes about three to five months. If your claim is initially denied, there are several steps in the appeal process that you can pursue.

Q. My 3-year-old son is autistic. My husband and I have been told that he may be eligible for disability benefits from Social Security. How would he qualify for benefits? My husband and I both work full-time and pay Social Security taxes.

A. Social Security administers the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program that does pay disability benefits to some children. SSI is a needs-based program, so if your family is having a hard time making ends meet, your son might qualify for a monthly SSI payment. And if he gets SSI, he might also get Medicaid coverage. The only other way your son would qualify for payments is as a dependent on either your or your husband's Social Security record. When either you or your husband retire - or if either one of you becomes disabled and begins drawing a Social Security disability payment - he could collect because he's your dependent child.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME

Q. My parents recently moved into a retirement community and they are signing their house over to me. Can I still get Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or will home ownership make me ineligible?

A. You can own a home and still receive SSI as long as you live in the home you own. In most cases, when determining SSI eligibility we don't count the home you own and live in or the car you use as resources.

What Every Parent Should Know About

Most people think of Social Security as a part of their retirement plan, but Social Security is also a family protection plan with benefits for children too. About 4 million children receive approximately $1.9 billion each month because one or both of their parents are disabled, retired or deceased. Those dollars help to provide the necessities of life for family members and help to make it possible for those children to complete high school.

So it's important that parents are aware of who can get benefits based on their Social Security earnings record - and when.

The easiest way to check just what "family" benefits are available is to go to our "Parents' Place" page on the Internet at www.socialsecurity.gov/kids/parent1.htm. Also here you will find information on Baby's First Social Security Number, Who Can Get Benefits, How Much Work You Need for Benefits for Your Children, Benefits for Grandchildren, Benefits for Disabled Children...and more.

For example, if you visit the web page on How Much Work You Need for Benefits for Your Children, you will find that "The amount of work you need to qualify for Social Security benefits depends on how old you are when you retire, become disabled, or die. The younger you are, the less work you need." The web page goes on to explain that parents under the age of 24 need as little as one and one-half years of work under Social Security for their children to receive Social Security benefits. The amount of work needed increases with age, but no one would need more than 10 years of work to be insured for all benefits.

If you visit the web page on Benefits for Grandchildren, you would learn that "More and more parents are finding themselves raising grandchildren. Social Security will pay benefits to dependent grandchildren if benefits are not payable on the work record of a parent." The web page goes on to explain that generally the biological parents of the child must be deceased or disabled, or the grandchild must be legally adopted by the grandparent to receive benefits.

If you do not have access to the Internet, you can find out basic information about Social Security that all parents should know by calling Social Security toll-free at 1(800) 772-1213, TTY 1(800) 325-0778. Just ask for the publication, Benefits for Children.

The Importance of Social Security Survivors Benefits

On Sept. 11th, the nation commemorated the fifth anniversary of the terrorist attacks on America. The nation suffered devastating losses on that day. Social Security employees, for example, handled more than 5,000 individual claims related to Sept. 11th. Although some were disability claims from people who survived the attacks, most were for survivors' benefits for the spouses and dependent children of those who died.

Looked at from another perspective, about 97 percent of persons aged 20-49 who worked in 2005 have survivors insurance protection for their young children and the surviving spouse caring for the children.

To see what your family could receive, check your Social Security Statement, which is sent each year to every worker age 25 or older. The Statement gives an estimate of survivors' benefits that could be paid, as well as an estimate of retirement and disability benefits and other important information.

If you would like more information about Social Security survivors' benefits, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/planners/index.htm or call Social Security at 1(800) 772-1213, TTY 1(800) 325-0778, and ask for the publication, Survivors Benefits.

Introduce New Bilingual Education Materials

First Lady Patricia Blagojevich and the Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) introduced a new set of Spanish-language educational materials for teachers to use in the classroom. The materials unveiled focus on Illinois' trees. The activity book is the ninth book offered through the IDNR with both an English- and Spanish-language version. A 10th activity book is expected to be available sometime next year. The posters are the first to be completed in a Spanish-language version.

"Educating our children is one of our top priorities in Illinois. It is also important to provide children with new and exciting ways to learn," said the First Lady. "I know these materials will be a great help to many teachers and to thousands of Spanish-speaking students in classrooms throughout Illinois."

The following items are now available through the IDNR Division of Education:

Datos de Los Bosques de Illinois (Illinois' Forest Facts) Students can learn about trees, leaves, fall colors, tree products and other tree-related topics with this 24-page activity book that is designed for use with students in grades K-3.

Colores de Otoño de Illinois (Illinois Fall Colors) The beautiful leaf colors of an Illinois autumn are presented in this poster along with information about where and when to see the best fall colors, why leaves change colors and other tree-related resources available for teachers.

Arboles de Illinois (Illinois Trees: Seeds and Leaves) Leaves and seeds of 15 common Illinois trees are illustrated on the front of the poster, while the back side contains information about each species and offers tips on tree identification.

Each of the items may be obtained through the IDNR online order form at <http://dnr.state.il.us/lands/education/classrm/edmatset.htm>. English-language versions are also available. All materials incorporate the learning standards that are in place in Illinois schools. Lesson plans for teachers interested in using the materials in a classroom setting are also available from the Illinois Department of Natural Resources.

In addition to bilingual educational materials, the IDNR Division of Education offers educational programs and materials for educators at all levels. ENTICE (Environment and Nature Training Institute for Conservation Education) workshops offered through the department can be used for Continuing Professional Development Units (CPDUs). In 2005, the IDNR began offering online courses through the University of Illinois at Springfield (UIS) as part of the Master of Teacher Leadership degree program. Teachers can also take the UIS courses for CPDUs at a reduced cost. The IDNR also offers a variety of activity books, CD-ROMs, and posters, focusing on Illinois' biodiversity for educators to use in the classroom.

In May 2005, First Lady Patricia Blagojevich introduced the first Illinois Department of Natural Resources educational materials to be translated into another language. The series of children's books translated into Spanish focused on the state's wildlife.

Offers Free Course

Registration is open for a free 12-session NAMI educational program for families and friends of individuals with serious mental illness.

The "Family-to-Family" training course will begin on Sunday, March 11th, at the Calvary United Protestant Church, North Orchard Dr. at Lincoln Highway (U.S. Route 30) in Park Forest. Classes begin at 4:30 p.m. and go to about 7. The course is taught by trained NAMI members who have experienced mental illnesses in their own families. All materials used in the course are furnished at no cost to participants.

Held on successive Sundays, the course is offered by NAMI South Suburbs of Chicago, an affiliate of the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) and is taught by NAMI members who have experienced mental illnesses in their own families.

Prior registration is required as the number of participants is limited. Those interested in attending this comprehensive training program should contact John Rowley at (708) 798-3862.

Nation-wide, thousands of family members have attended Family-to-Family courses since they were developed and have benefited from the up-to-date information presented. Some of the topics covered are: family responses to the trauma of mental illness; diagnosis and dealing with schizophrenia, major depressions and mania; depression and bipolar subtypes; panic disorder; obsessive compulsive disorder; borderline personality disorder; co-occurring brain and addictive disorders; the biology of the brain and emerging scientific discoveries; problem solving; review of medications; understanding the inner experience of having a mental illness; communications skills; self-care; rehabilitation services; and advocacy and fighting stigma.

NAMI South Suburbs of Chicago is a local, volunteer-run, not-for-profit, self-help, grass-roots organization that advocates for a truly comprehensive system of mental health care for all those who have such illnesses.

Seeking Host Families

YFU-USA is a private, non-profit educational program dedicated to preparing young people for their responsibilities and opportunities in a changing, interdependent world. YFU is certified by CSJET standards. Youth For Understanding is one of the world's oldest, largest, and most respected international exchange programs. Since 1951, YFU offices around the world have exchanged approximately 200,000 students. In one year alone, approximately 4,500 students will participate in our programs worldwide. Through the exchange experience, YFU students gain skills and perspectives necessary to meet the challenges and benefit from the opportunities the fast-changing global community has to offer. The Heartland District covering the Midwest and Colorado placed 522 students with local Host Families.

YFU USA conducts exchanges with more than 50 countries around the world. Each exchange is coordinated by a worldwide network of national YFU organizations all dedicated to providing the highest quality international educational experience for exchange students and their host families. With nearly 2,500 volunteers in communities across the United States, YFU USA is fully equipped to support every student and host family.

The students are coming to the Heartland for the full school year, however, we offer hosting opportunities of 12 weeks, one semester or up to the full school year. We will identify a new family for students coming into a 12-week placement in the same school district so they will not have to change schools. It seems to be much easier to find families once a student has arrived and becomes known in the community and/or school.

Hosting an international exchange student can be an enriching experience for the entire family that will last a lifetime. By opening your home and heart to a student from overseas, your family will gain a new global perspective, many memories, and - quite possibly - a new family member! When you volunteer to host an exchange student, you agree to:

- *Welcome your new son or daughter as a member of your family.
- *Help your student adapt to your family and to U.S. life and culture.
- *Provide a safe and loving home environment including a bed, a place to study, and three meals a day.
- *Attend orientation events, read the preparation materials, and maintain regular contact with your local volunteer.
- *Understand policies and encourage your student to adhere to those policies.
- *Familiarize your student with your community and its resources.

To find out more about becoming a Host Family or to volunteer for YFU-USA, the web site is www.yfu-usa.org or call the Heartland District office at 1-866-493-8872.

I'm still not allowed to go back to work or to overdo my activities but I did attend my first social function (got out for something other than physical therapy) on Friday. I attended Mayor Murawski's Presidents Ball at the Odyssey Country Club. About 600 people attended this annual gala event. It was a great evening with good food, great orchestra and best of all I got to visit with many wonderful people.

The Ed Fitzgerald 2nd Support the Troops benefit will be held on Sunday, March 4th from 1 to 6 p.m. at 115 Bourbon Street, 3400 W. 115th St. A $20 donation includes food, wine and beer, live entertainment, raffles, split the pot and a silent auction. The fee for children 6 to 12 is $10 (payable at the door) and children under 5 are free.

All funds from this benefit are used to send boxes of needed items to the troops in the Middle East.

The late Ed Fitzgerald was instrumental in helping raise money for postage, which has helped send over 3,800 packages to our troops since 2003. This benefit will not only honor our troops but also a great man who fought for our country.

Ed worked tirelessly with Jean Dansky, St. Christina Church and many volunteers to send packages to our troops. Jean's grandson, Kevin Sullivan, who was serving in the U.S. Army in the Middle East, told of the need for supplies such as basic toiletries and other items. The items are sent directly to the soldiers who cannot get them while in the field. Jean said Kevin is now home safe but there are other soldiers still out there.

Volunteers make sure each box contains necessary items plus well wishes from home, tins of homemade cookies, etc.

If you would like to donate items, bring them to this event or contact Jean at (773) 239-4982. Among some items needed are T-shirts, socks, hard candy, condiments, beer jerky, packages of Kool-Aid which helps flavor the water, phone cards and toiletries.

The packages cost $25 to $30 to send so this benefit is very important.

Jean, her husband Larry and grandson, Frank Tortorelli, make monthly trips to the post office to mail the packages of items they collect.

As thousands of American soldiers remain overseas fighting for our country in Iraq, author Galliano D'Alessandro shares the story of his son's tour of duty in Vietnam in his new book Agent Orange.

Born into a military family, Nicky D'Alessandro was raised listening to his grandfather's stories of World War I and his father's stories of World War II. It came as no surprise to his father when Nicky enlisted in the military.

Hoping to avoid the turbulence in Vietnam, Nicky elected to serve in Europe. However, after months in Europe he decided to complete his commitment with a tour of duty in Vietnam. After an impressive record with the United States 1st Air Cavalry, Nicky became ill the last week of his duty in Vietnam. Consequently, he was moved to Hope Ship Hospital, Tokyo Hospital in Japan and finally returned to the United States where he was treated at Walston Army Hospital in Fort Dix, New Jersey; Philadelphia VA Hospital and Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, DC.

D'Alessandro's proud recollection of his son "warms the heart and touches the soul." Recounted through phone conversations, letters and stories shared by his son, the book portrays the life of an American soldier in Vietnam, which is as relevant today as it was 30 years ago.

The book is published by AuthorHouse. For information, visit www.authorhouse.com.

Praises Lipinski's Plan For Iraq

Early this year, Congressman Dan Lipinski announced a proposal entitled, "A New Path for America's Iraq Policy." In this proposal, Congressman Lipinski called for President Bush to seek broad international engagement to provide stability and reconstruction in Iraq, as well as to address political, economic, and religious issues in that country. That plan is already receiving praise from Lee Hamilton, co-chair of the Iraq Study Group.

Hamilton served in the House of Representatives for over 30 years until 1999. He has since been a member of several national security advisory boards. Most recently, Hamilton was a co-chair of the Iraq Study Group, a 10-person panel that released a bipartisan set of 79 recommendations for American policy in Iraq.

In a letter to Congressman Lipinski, Hamilton wrote, "I commend you for your excellent proposal. I agree with you completely on the importance of broad-based pressure from a variety of international sources to push Iraqi leaders in the direction of national reconciliation."

Hamilton went on to add, "I appreciate your careful analysis of why we cannot simply pull our troops out as soon as safely possible and leave it to the Iraqi people to work out a solution. As you point out, our stakes in the region are great. As dire as the situation is today, it could get much worse."

Congressman Lipinski's plan, which was introduced in the House of Representatives as H.Res. 152, calls on the President to (1) Encourage achievement of important goals in national reconciliation, security, and governance by arranging a peace conference for Iraq's ethnic and religious factions. This conference could be similar to the one that led to the Dayton Accords which ended the conflict in Bosnia. (2) Bring the world community together to seek solutions in Iraq, including calling an international conference to put together a peacekeeping force and an international reconstruction program. (3) Require the Administration to give Congress detailed reports on the situation in Iraq. Complete and accurate information is necessary for Congress to make informed decisions regarding Iraq's reconstruction funding and deciding when American forces can be safely redeployed.

"I appreciate Lee Hamilton's words of support for my proposal," said Congressman Lipinski. "As a member of the Iraq Study Group, he has an excellent understanding of the challenges facing Iraq. If these recommendations are followed, I believe American troops can begin redeployment in 2007, leaving a secure, stable Iraq."

Purchase Complex For State Police Facility

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced that the state has reached a landmark agreement with American General Life Insurance Co. (AIG American General), a member company of American International Group, Inc. (AIG), to acquire its current office buildings and to retain the company's operations and at least 400 jobs in Springfield. In the coming months, AIG will invest $25 million as it constructs a new facility that will serve as a life insurance processing and service center.

Purchasing AIG's current facilities - commonly known as the Franklin Life complex - will allow state property management experts to consolidate many Illinois State Police functions being managed throughout the capital city, and transition additional agencies into the remaining space as an important initiative that will increase efficiency and reduce administrative costs. This acquisition will increase the state's portfolio of owned space by nearly 375,000 square feet and up to 1,500 employees will be located at the facility.

As part of the agreement to purchase the complex, AIG American General agreed to maintain a presence in Springfield for its life insurance business. The company will construct a 115,000 square foot building for its use at a site on the southwest side of Springfield. AIG considered consolidating at locations out of state.

After the state and AIG American General complete the real estate transaction in March, Illinois State Police (ISP) employees will begin to transition to the complex from up to eight separate offices that are currently located throughout Springfield, which is expected to increase the efficiency of the agency and eliminate ongoing leasing costs.

Under terms of the agreement, the state will pay $13.25 million for the facilities; AIG American General will pay nearly $300,000 in upgrades to prepare the facility for state occupancy. The purchase will take place entirely in FY 2007 using FY 2007 appropriations.

Houlihan Recognized As Friend Of The Neighborhoods

For his understanding of diverse communities, his lifetime commitment to public service and his ability to address the economic challenges of our times, James M. Houlihan was named this year's Friend of the Neighborhoods at the 13th annual Community Neighborhood Development Awards on Feb. 20th.

"Jim has devoted his life to serving Illinois residents," said Andrew Mooney, Senior Program Director of LISC/Chicago, the co-founder of the CNDA. "He has fought tirelessly for the preservation and maintenance of affordable housing in our county, and through numerous innovative measures, his work has strengthened the fabric of our communities."

Whether it comes from his degrees in philosophy and theology or his deep commitment to family, longtime activist and now County Assessor Jim Houlihan has led a storied political life that has remained deeply rooted in his strong moral sense.

In 1997, Jim brought his commitment to neighborhood development, civil rights and social justice into his position as Cook County Assessor where he worked to restructure both the office and the assessment system to create greater fairness and transparency. Recognizing that well maintained and affordable housing is an integral part of a healthy community, Jim has worked tirelessly to protect the affordability of both rental and owner-occupied housing.

While Jim has won numerous accolades for his work, perhaps his most widely known and successful effort was his 2003 proposal for the landmark 7% Expanded Homeowner Exemption. The Exemption was created to offset the impact of rising property values on the tax burden of working families. It has been lauded by neighborhoods whose residents would have found their long-term homes otherwise unaffordable.

Among Jim's many other innovations has been a direct mail campaign to ensure that all seniors are aware of their exemption options including two measures aimed at keeping elderly residents from being displaced as a result of shifting real estate markets, an aggressive outreach program to communities and community organizations and the creation of an on-line database that allows every resident to view their own property and compare it to other ones in their area and throughout the county as a whole.

The Cook County Assessor's office is responsible for the evaluation of 1.7 million separate parcels of real estate in order for them to be appropriately taxed. The sheer volume of that workload requires much to be determined through computer-assisted statistical models; however, Jim puts a human face and a human touch to this process that truly distinguishes him as a genuine Friend of the Neighborhood.

Blagojevich Applauds East West Gateway

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich applauded a vote by the East-West Gateway Council of Governments in favor of the Martin Luther King Bridge coupler plan that will provide four additional lanes of traffic across the Mississippi River.

East-West Gateway voted 12-10 in favor of building a four-lane bridge immediately north of the current Martin Luther King Bridge.

"East-West Gateway took a big step in the right direction when they voted in support of our plan to build lanes across the Mississippi River," Gov. Blagojevich said. "We've offered an affordable plan to achieve our goal of relieving congestion across the Mississippi River without charging drivers tolls. I look forward to meeting with Governor Blunt in the near future so we can work together to make this bridge a reality."

"I applaud East-West Gateway for voting to build new lanes across the Mississippi River. We must move forward to ensure that the people in this region don't have to suffer the headaches and frustration of bottlenecks and traffic. This is a quality of life issue for citizens in the Metro East. We owe it to them to act and do so without charging them tolls," said Illinois State Rep. Jay Hoffman (D-Collinsville).

Illinois has agreed to pay $261 million toward the cost of the $525 million project. The Federal government would contribute $239 million, and East-West Gateway agreed to cover the remaining $25 million of the cost.

PUBLIC AWARENESS NOTICE TO COMMERCIAL BUSINESS OWNERS

There have been recent government law changes regarding electricity deregulation in Illinois.

Madigan Files Suit Against Fraudulent Towing Companies

Attorney General Lisa Madigan announced that her office has filed a lawsuit against three Cook County towing companies alleging various violations of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Practices Act and the Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act.

Madigan filed the suit against: Road America Automotive, Inc., doing business as Premier Auto Collision, Inc.; Premier Auto Collision, Inc. doing business as Target Towing & Recovery, Inc.; and Target Towing and Recovery, Inc., doing business as Road America Automotive, Inc. All three companies operate out of the same business address at 3055 W. 131st St. in Blue Island. The suit also names as an individual defendant Tareq A. Alhindi, the president of Road America Automotive, Inc. Since 2005, Madigan's Consumer Fraud Bureau has received 18 complaints against the three defendant towing companies.

The lawsuit alleges a pattern of conduct through which the defendant towing companies defraud consumers. According to the lawsuit, tow truck drivers employed by the three companies often arrive at the scene of traffic accidents without being summoned by either the participants in the accident or by the police.

When they arrive at the scene, the tow truck drivers approach the drivers of the damaged cars and offer to tow the cars. The tow truck drivers often mislead accident participants by falsely claiming to be affiliated with motor club services. Moreover, the tow truck drivers fail to fully disclose the high towing, storage fees and other miscellaneous fees that the defendant companies charge for the towing service.

"These towing companies take advantage of consumers when they have been in an accident and are most vulnerable," Madigan said. "We are working to protect consumers from this egregious conduct."

The lawsuit details how the defendants often falsely tell motorists that the cost of the towing fee will be covered entirely by the consumers' insurance companies. According to the complaint, after consumers have authorized the tow, the defendants tow disabled vehicles to lots owned by the defendants and refuse to release the vehicles until full payment is made. Consumers are charged excessive towing, storage, and other miscellaneous fees ranging from $340 to $1,650. Even though consumers are told that their insurance will cover the towing charges, many insurance companies deem the towing charges excessive and refuse to cover the entire cost. As a result, consumers are often forced to pay the excessive fees and incur substantial out-of-pocket costs.

"I encourage consumers to act carefully and be wary of companies that seek your business during stressful situations," Madigan added. "Consumers should also keep the name and number of a few reputable towing companies in their glove compartment and should carefully read and review all forms prior to giving their authorization."

Madigan's lawsuit asks the court to prohibit the defendants from engaging in the business of towing and towing-related services in Illinois. The lawsuit also asks the court to rescind the contracts that the defendants entered into by using unlawful practices and to order the defendants to pay restitution to the impacted consumers. The lawsuit seeks a civil penalty of $50,000 and additional penalties of $50,000 for each violation found to have been committed with the intent to defraud. Finally, Madigan's lawsuit asks the court to order the defendants to pay the costs of the prosecution of this case.

Assistant Attorney General Cecilia Abundis is handling the case for Madigan's Consumer Fraud Bureau.

Understanding Credit Scoring

There's a lot of confusion around credit reports and credit scores - what they're used for, how they're calculated and why they're so important if you want to buy a car or house. Lenders, insurers and even employers review your credit history to decide if you're a worthwhile risk, so here's some background information that may help demystify the whole credit scoring process.

Credit bureaus. There are three major credit bureaus: Equifax (www.equifax.com), Experian (www.experian.com) and TransUnion (www.transunion.com). Each tracks how many and what types of credit cards and loans you have, how long your accounts have been open and whether you've paid your bills on time.

Credit report. Upon request from you or a potential lender, a credit bureau will compile a credit report - basically a snapshot of your credit history at that moment. You can order one free credit report a year from each of the three bureaus. (Order through www.annualcreditreport.com; otherwise you'll pay a small fee.) They are required by law to investigate any disputed item and correct inaccuracies.

It's wise to order a free report from one of the bureaus every four months; that way, you'll keep regular, year-round tabs on what's being reported about you. Another tip: If you're planning to borrow to make a major purchase, order your credit reports beforehand so you'll know what lenders will see about your credit history.

It's vital to know what's in your credit reports so you can spot fraudulent activity or errors before they damage your credit standing. For more information on what to do if you suspect identity fraud, go to Practical Money Skills for Life, a free personal financial management site sponsored by Visa USA (www.practicalmoneyskills.com/security).

Credit scores. Credit bureaus use information in your credit report to create a three-digit credit score. The higher your score, the better your credit rating is. The most commonly used credit scores are called FICO scores, named for Fair Isaac Corporation (FICO), which developed the proprietary software.

Five factors are used to determine your FICO score: payment history, amount owed, length of credit history, newly opened credit accounts, and types of credit used. Scores take into consideration information in all five categories, both positive and negative, but may weigh them differently depending on your individual circumstances.

When you apply for credit or a loan, lenders evaluate one or more of these bureaus' scores along with their own criteria (which may include income, length of employment or other factors), to determine if you are a worthy credit risk. Your overall credit score may affect not only whether or not you get the loan, but also the amount, term length and interest rate.

The differences between excellent, good, fair and poor credit scores can really add up. For example, someone with a top-notch FICO credit score - say above 720 - might qualify for a mortgage rate one or more percentage points lower than someone with poor credit. For a typical 30-year, $200,000 mortgage, this could add up to an extra $50,000 in interest payments over the life of the loan.

For more information on how credit reports and credit scores work - and to purchase a copy of your score - go to www.myfico.com. Remember, it's always a good idea to know what's in your reports ahead of time so you can correct errors before they harm your credit rating.

Cold Weather Killer

Each year, nearly 5,000 people in the United States are treated in hospital emergency rooms for carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning. This number is, however, believed to be an underestimate of those poisoned because many people exhibiting the symptoms of CO poisoning mistake these symptoms for the flu or are misdiagnosed.

CO poisoning can kill without warning, as your family sleeps. CO gas has no warning properties - you can't smell it, see it, or taste it - even at harmful or life threatening levels. And, since so many deaths occur as the result of defective or poorly operated home heating devices, CO has been termed the "silent cold weather killer."

CO is a colorless, odorless, toxic gas. It is produced by the incomplete combustion of solid, liquid, and gaseous fuels. Appliances fueled with gas, oil, kerosene, or wood may produce CO. If such appliances are not installed, maintained, and used properly, CO may accumulate to dangerous and even fatal levels in cars, homes, or poorly ventilated areas like basements.

CO is produced when fuels are burned, therefore, any fuel-burning appliance in your home is a potential CO source. Electrical heaters and electric water heaters, toasters, etc., do not produce CO under any circumstances. Under normal circumstances, CO should not be detectable in the typical home or workplace.

When fuel-fired appliances are kept in good working condition, they produce very little CO. But improperly operated or improperly vented appliances can produce elevated - or even fatal - CO concentrations in your home. Likewise, using kerosene heaters or charcoal grills indoors, or running a car in a closed garage, can cause levels of CO high enough to result in CO poisoning or even death.

Common sources of CO include the following wood- or gas-fueled appliances: room heaters; furnaces; charcoal grills; cooking ranges; water heaters; automobiles run in closed garages; fireplaces; portable generators; and wood-burning stoves.

Any person or animal in spaces shared with a device capable of generating CO should be considered at risk of CO poisoning. CO exposures especially affect unborn babies, infants, and people with anemia or a history of heart disease. Breathing low levels of the chemical can cause fatigue and increase chest pain in people with chronic heart disease.

Although not always experienced, the initial symptoms of CO poisoning are similar to the flu, but without the fever. They include: dizziness, fatigue, headache, nausea, and irregular breathing.

It is critical to note that death from CO poisoning can occur with some or all of these symptoms never being experienced, in which case the overexposed victim simply falls asleep and never regains consciousness.

Dangerous levels of CO can be prevented by proper appliance maintenance, installation, and use. Timely inspections of potentially CO-producing equipment, and the use of CO toxic level concentration alarms, are also key to avoiding a CO fatality.

Fund Chicago Search And Rescue Team

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) recently met with Dept. of Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff to ask him to consider Chicago's eligibility for a federally funded search and rescue team. Durbin also discussed the impact of the fiscal year 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats.

"Chicago is the third largest city in the country, yet year after year, we are not included in the 28 cities that receive federal funds for urban search and rescue teams. The State of Illinois has done a tremendous job in funding its own urban search and rescue team, but I expressed my frustration to Secretary Chertoff over the lack of federal support," said Durbin. "Our state deserves to have federal help in fielding these trained and equipped urban search and rescue teams when local resources are overwhelmed."

Currently, there are 28 FEMA-certified urban search and rescue teams that operate as a disaster response task force. The teams operate around the clock, and include engineers, medics and other technical experts, specially trained search dogs and an average of $4.5 million of equipment. The State currently spends approximately $1 million for training each year and has spent $3 million in equipment over the last couple of years in funding its own urban search and rescue team.

In the meeting, Durbin also expressed serious concerns about the impact of the President's FY 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats. The budget the President presented to Congress recently cuts funding for state and local law enforcement assistance by $1.3 billion, dramatically decreases funding for FIRE grants and eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program.

Durbin also raised concerns that the President's budget reduces funding for the FIRE program which provides equipment and training to fire departments in Illinois and across the country to help them prepare and respond to terrorist incidents. Last year, in Illinois, over $13.6 million was awarded to IL fire departments.

The President's budget completely eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program, which provides funding to fire departments to hire additional firefighters and first responders. Last year, $4.4 million was awarded to Illinois fire departments for hiring/recruiting additional firefighters.

No-Interest Loans Available

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich announced $1.9 million in no-interest loans to help fire departments and fire protection districts purchase much-needed fire trucks. This is the second phase of a loan program that has already helped 63 fire departments obtain new fire trucks.

The Fire Truck Revolving Loan Program, administered by the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM), provides no-interest, 20-year loans to local fire departments and fire protection districts for the purchase of fire trucks. The maximum loan award is $250,000. The loan program was created by legislation signed by Gov. Blagojevich in 2003.

Applications for the loans are available on the OSFM website at www.state.il.us/osfm. The agency also will mail applications to each fire department in Illinois. Applications will be accepted from Feb. 1 through April 15. A nine-member review committee comprising representatives of the banking industry and the fire services will review the applications. Loans will be awarded on the basis of need.

In August 2004, 63 fire departments were selected to receive the initial revolving loans. Payments on those loans go into the revolving loan fund, and will be used for this second round of loans.

Air Quality Report

Air quality in Illinois was either good or moderate 90 percent of the time throughout Illinois in 2005, according to the 35th Annual Air Quality Report, released by the Illinois EPA.

While this is a decrease from the air quality numbers in 2004, it is consistent with the air quality trends the state has experienced in the past. Air quality trends still show air pollution levels well below the standards on a statewide basis.

In 2005, Illinois as well as other Midwestern and Northeastern states experienced one of the most unusual air quality episodes in recent history. For the first time in Illinois, Air Pollution Action Days were called outside of the ozone season, May through September, with three action days being called in February due to elevated levels of fine particulate matter. Scientists determined that a combination of a stagnating regional air mass and combustion of winter fuels region-wide was the main cause of this incident.

This unusual episode provided the Illinois EPA with the opportunity to thoroughly discuss fine particulate matter, which led to additional public education about the causes and health concerns of this pollutant.

"While annual trends show the statewide levels of pollutants well below the federal standards, there are still some areas in Illinois where improvement is still needed," said Illinois EPA Director Doug Scott. "The Illinois EPA continues its commitment to improve air quality throughout the state and the region."

Journalism Awards

The Xavierite, the student newspaper of Saint Xavier University, won three awards recently at the annual Illinois College Press Association convention. The awards recognize the very best in student journalism in the state of Illinois.

The following Saint Xavier University students won awards: Anthony Gallelli, 2nd place, Open Division, advertisement campaign; Sean Reynolds, Honorable Mention, non-dailies over 4,000, headline writing; Megan Murphy and Chris Lonergan, Honorable Mention, non-dailies over 4,000, feature page design.

Rob Quicke, director of student media for Saint Xavier University, said, "I congratulate these winners who have achieved this recognition, and I am proud of the whole Xavierite staff who made 2006 such a great year."

There were more than 1,000 entries and only 300 winners. More than 400 students from across Illinois attended the awards banquet and convention. Quicke, who served the ICPSA as second vice president, also organized this year's competition. At the annual ICPSA board meeting on Feb. 17, ICPSA members unanimously elected Quicke as first vice president.

Spaghetti Dinner

Trinity Lutheran Church, 97th & Brandt Ave. (2 blocks west of Cicero), will have its annual Spaghetti Dinner on Saturday, March 3rd from 4 to 7 p.m. The cost for the tickets is $6 for adults and $3 for children. The price includes spaghetti with homemade sauce, salad with homemade dressing, fresh bread, desserts and beverages. Meatballs and Italian sausage will be sold separately.

The event is sponsored by Trinity Lutheran League, the high school youth group. It is truly the best!

Choral Presentation

All area choristers and singers are invited to join in a community choral presentation of "Requiem" by John Rutter on Sunday, April 1st at 3:30 p.m. at the Morgan Park Presbyterian Church, 110th Pl. & Longwood Drive. Accompanied by a chamber orchestra, the Requiem is a beautiful meditation appropriate for Palm Sunday, Holy Week and Easter. Rehearsals will be held on Saturdays at 10 a.m. on March 3rd, 10th, 17th and 24th. All are welcome to join in singing this sacred musical.

Seventy-Seventh Year - No. 10

(708) 388-2425

March Is Poison Prevention Month

Year after year, millions of accidental poisonings occur in America - the majority of them affecting children. Last year, the Illinois Poison Center (IPC) handled more than 107,000 exposure and information calls - 51 percent involving children age 5 and under - on everything from household products and carbon monoxide to medicines and mushrooms.

Each year, the third week in March is recognized as National Poison Prevention Week; however, the Illinois Poison Center is tackling a bigger challenge this year. In 2007, the Illinois Poison Center will recognize the entire month of March as Illinois Poison Prevention Month.

"A week-long observance of this vital health awareness initiative is insufficient. Poison prevention education needs to be a year-round activity," said Michael Wahl, MD, managing medical director, IPC. "By using the entire month of March as a means to increase awareness of this serious public health issue, we hope to reduce the incidence and injury caused by poisonings."

Illinois Poison Center outreach staff will dedicate the month of March to educating Illinois residents that they can reach the poison center 24 hours a day via a toll-free phone number, 1-800-222-1222. With the IPC's help, 90 percent of poison exposure calls from the general public are managed at the site of exposure without referral to a health care facility by providing simple first aid instructions over the phone.

According to Illinois Poison Center experts, preparing yourself and your family is the best way to avoid a potential poisoning. Take the following precautions to prevent poisonings: make sure all potential poisons are out of the sight and reach of children; keep medicines and household products in their original containers with original labels; always read labels before using medicines, cleaners and other products; teach children to ask first before eating or drinking anything; never call medicine candy or make a game out of taking it; keep the IPC phone number, 1-800-222-1222, on all phones in the house and other handy locations and store the number in your cell phone.

Established by Congress in 1961, National Poison Prevention Week, March 18-24, is an opportunity to educate communities on poison prevention and the dangers of unintentional poisonings.

Pay Cook County Property Taxes Via Internet

Cook County property owners who missed paying current property tax bills by the due date of March 1, can pay on the website of Cook County Treasurer Maria Pappas or at a Chase Bank with a 1.5 percent monthly penalty.

Pappas said that full or partial payment can be made for the first installment of tax year 2006 and for delinquent bills issued in 2006.

Pappas said the online option at www.cookcountytreasurer.com makes it easier for taxpayers to pay late. The 1.5 percent monthly penalty will be reflected in the amount showing as owed.

"If a late payment is necessary, it's easy to know what you owe and easy to pay because of our website," Pappas said.

Payment also can be made at nearly 300 Chase Bank locations, some in Dominick's Food Stores or by direct debit at 214 participating community banks which pay via Pappas' website.

To check what is owed, taxpayers should have their Property Index Number and visit www.cookcountytreasurer.com or call (312) 443-5100.

Cook County has nearly 1.7 million parcels of property on which more than $9 billion is collected in two installments yearly. The revenue goes to local taxing agencies.

Blessed With Ashes

To mark the Lenten season, St. Rita High School students were blessed with ashes during an all-school Ash Wednesday Mass. Students and faculty listed their Lenten promises and deposited the lists in a basket prior to receiving ashes and purple silicone bracelets that read, "The time is now...St. Rita Lent 2007".

Springing Forward

Starting this year, Daylight Saving Time has been changed from its traditional calendar dates to a start three weeks earlier -- Sunday, March 11 -- and a finish one week later-Sunday, Nov. 4. Daylight Saving Time is practiced in order to gain an extra hour of daylight during the early evening, resulting in the conservation of energy by substituting natural sunlight for electrical lighting.

According to The Old Farmer's Almanac, Daylight Saving Time first began in 1918 during World War I to allow for more evening light and save fuel for the war effort. Since then, Daylight Saving Time has been used on and off, with different start and end dates.

Benjamin Franklin first suggested the idea in 1784. It was later revived in 1907, when William Willett proposed a similar system in the pamphlet The Waste of Daylight. The Germans were the first to officially adopt the light-extending system in 1915, followed by the British, and in 1918 the United States, when Congress passed the Standard Time Act, establishing our time zones.

The Old Farmer's Almanac is one of several publications published by Yankee Publishing of Dublin, New Hampshire. The Almanac family of products also includes several themed calendars for 2007. Folks who can't find The 2007 Old Farmer's Almanac where books and magazines are sold can order individual copies or subscriptions at Almanac.com (where you can also find articles on a variety of Almanac topics, recipes, trivia, and a unique home-page personalization option) or by calling 800-223-3166.

Richards High School Speech Team

Although they brought home no hardware from the state finals, the speech team - led this year by a new varsity head coach - from Richards High School nevertheless enjoyed noteworthy success during the 2006-2007 season. More Bulldogs advanced to the sectional tournament, one level below the state finals, this year than in the previous 20 years combined.

"This season was a great step forward for us," said coach Michael Badger, an English teacher who also serves as drama director at Richards. "We hope to keep building a winning attitude and improve upon the success the 2006-2007 season gave to us."

From the Illinois High School Association regional meet, Richards advanced eight competitors to the sectional tournament, including the Performance-in-the-Round cast. Among the eight, four advanced to the sectional final. Students must place in the top three in their categories at the sectional tournament to qualify for the state finals.

At the South Suburban Conference meet earlier this month, Richards placed second in their division and sixth overall out of 32 schools. Molly Ruthenberg led the Bulldogs with a conference title. Other competitors winning awards at conference included Lanita Warner (fourth); Carly Heiser, Kate Miller and Sarah Quintos (fifth); Matt Weibel and Becca Calvillo (seventh); and, Sarah Quintos (eighth).

At the IHSA regional, junior Lanita Warner won first place in Verse and placed second in Dramatic Interpretation. The Performance-in-the-Round cast tied for second.

The Bulldogs started their season by winning the 18-school "Ram Yam" tournament at Reavis High School in November. Students winning individual titles at the Reavis meet included Carly Heiser (Humorous Interpretation) and Matt Weibel (Original Comedy). Speech team followed its success at Reavis by placing eighth (Thornridge), seventh (Oak Lawn), third (Shepard) and ninth (Thornwood) at various tournaments that featured between 20 and 25 schools.

"This year, we knocked on the door. It is our team's hope that next year we will knock down the door that leads to state and walk through it. I am extremely proud of the team and coaching staff for their efforts this year," Badger said.

Loretto Lenten Fridays

Our Lady of Loretto Women's Guild is having 'Lenten Fridays' at the church hall, 8925 S. Kostner, on March 9th, 16th, 23rd and 30th from 4 till 7 p.m. On the menu is cod fish dinner $6, breaded fried shrimp $7.50, including potato, salad and dessert; grilled cheese, chips and dessert $3; soup bowl $1. All meals include coffee or punch.

Take-out and delivery available (limited delivery area). For delivery, call that day - after 5 p.m. (708) 857-9344. For more information, call (708) 424-7471.

Panel Discussion

"Changing Directions" is the topic for the panel of speakers for the Pilgrim Faith Church Lenten Series on March 14th. Beginning at 7:15 p.m. a panel of members including Mike Cusack, Kary Roorda and Ron Stancik will discuss how they have changed directions in their work or life. A light supper of soup, bread, cheese and fruit will be served at 6:30 prior to the program.

A children's program for those in kindergarten through sixth grade will meet at the same time. Child care is provided for children younger than kindergarten.

The church is at 9411 S. 51st Ave. The public is invited to attend. For information, call the church at (708) 422-4200.

50th Anniversary Service

The First United Methodist Church of Oak Lawn, 100th St. & Central Ave., will be celebrating its 50th anniversary on Sunday, March 11th. It will be held during the worship service at 10:30 a.m. with former ministers and guests attending, and a dinner afterward. For more information, call (708) 423-1170.

March is here and it is time to dig out and join in the many activities coming to the Senior Center. On Monday, March 19th, Jennifer Silk will be performing her "Strings of Silk" show. It is a musical potpourri of her most popular requests and true stories about her career performing for famous people, places and events. Her violin will tug at your heart strings. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of her performance.

Wednesday, March 21st the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce will be hosting a Health and Wellness Fair at the Senior Center. Participating members will include chiropractors, nutritionists, insurance companies, senior care groups, podiatrists and so much more. The event will run from 9 a.m. to noon. There is no charge for visitors.

On Thursday, March 29th seniors will meet for Box Lunch Day. The event was created to provide an affordable, lunch and social time for many seniors in the village. A hot lunch, dessert, refreshments and bingo are provided with the help of a sponsor. Founder's Bank, a premier lender and source of Reverse Mortgages in the greater Chicago and south suburban area is the sponsor for this event. A Reverse Mortgage is essentially a loan program designed specifically for senior homeowners. It provides access to money that has been built up over the years in the form of equity. The Reverse Mortgage has no income, medical or credit requirements and no repayment is necessary as long as the senior lives in the home as their primary residence, maintains their property and keeps taxes and homeowners insurance current.

Founders Bank has many locations including 10515 S. Cicero in Oak Lawn and 7103 W. 111th St. in Worth. Representatives from Founders will be at the Oak Lawn Senior Center to explain and answer questions seniors may have. Founders is an equal housing lender and Member FDIC. The presentation begins at 10:30 a.m. and must be attended to receive a lunch. The cost to the senior is $3 and tickets may be purchased at the Senior Center, 5330 W. 95th St. Seating is limited. On behalf of the seniors thank you Founders Bank.

For more information on these or other Senior Programs, call (708) 499-0240.

Area Nursing Homes Fined

It has been reported that two area nursing homes have been fined for insufficient care.

The Manorcare of Oak Lawn, 9401 S. Kostner Ave., was fined $25,000 for the treatment of an 81-year-old woman who was hospitalized and died in July. State investigators determined that the nursing home's staff neglected to take care of a catheter that was placed in the woman's bladder during a hospital stay two months before she died from an infection.

The Countryside Healthcare Center, 1635 E. 164th St. in Dolton was fined $45,000 for failing to adequately monitor six patients' blood-sugar levels and administer insulin as directed by the patients' doctors.

Both nursing homes requested hearings on the penalties.

SHOP AND SAVE IN OAK LAWN

Madigan Alerts Consumers To Identity Theft

In response to a recent theft of consumer information at the parent company of T.J. Maxx, HomeGoods, Marshalls and A.J. Wright's stores, Attorney General Lisa Madigan urged consumers who shopped at those retailers in 2003, 2004, or 2006 to monitor their financial records and credit reports closely.

TJX Companies, Inc., which operates T.J. Maxx, HomeGoods, Marshalls and A.J. Wright, recently announced that it had suffered an unauthorized intrusion into its computer systems that process credit card, debit card, check, and returned merchandise transactions for TJX customers. Customer information – including financial information – is stored on these systems. The hacking has put customers at risk of credit card fraud and identity theft. There are 36 T.J. Maxx, 40 Marshalls, 13 HomeGoods and 14 A.J. Wright stores in Illinois according to the TJX website.

TJX learned of the breach in late December 2006 and began cooperating with law enforcement, including the U.S. Secret Service, to determine the nature and scope of the breach and to catch those responsible. The company believes that the breach affects only those customers who shopped at the affected stores in the years 2003, 2004 and 2006, although Madigan recommends that any customer who shopped at the stores between 2003 and 2006 take precautionary steps.

Although credit card and debit card numbers may have been compromised, card numbers were not linked with customers' names and addresses. Similarly, TJX believes that debit card personal identification numbers (PINs) were likely not accessed. TJX has established a toll-free helpline for consumers, which can be reached by calling (866) 484-6978. TJX also continues to post information on its website at www.tjx.com.

In addition to credit and debit card information, the intrusion compromised a limited number of drivers license numbers for customers who returned merchandise without a receipt to T.J. Maxx, Marshall's, and HomeGoods stores during the last four months of 2003 and May and June 2004. Affected Illinois consumers will be receiving notification from TJX if it appears that their drivers license numbers, names, and addresses were compromised.

Attorney General Madigan urged consumers whose personal information may have been compromised as a result of this security breach to take the following steps:

Work with your credit card companies, banks and other lenders to determine if any suspicious or unauthorized activity has occurred on your accounts.

Contact the toll-free number of any of the three consumer reporting companies to place a fraud alert on your credit report and order a free copy of your credit report. When you receive your credit report, review it carefully and look for any suspicious activity.

To place an initial fraud alert, contact Equifax at 1-800-525-6285, www.equifax.com, P.O. Box 740241, Atlanta, GA 30374-0241; Experian at 1-888-EXPERIAN (397-3742), www.experian.com, P.O. Box 9532, Allen, TX 75013; and TransUnion at 1-800-680-7289, www.transunion.com, Fraud Victim Assistance Division, P.O. Box 6790, Fullerton, CA 92834-6790.

Be on the lookout for warning signs that your information is being misused. Such signs include: receiving credit cards you did not apply for, being denied credit or offered credit at less favorable terms for no apparent reason, receiving calls or letters from debt collectors or businesses about merchandise or services you did not buy, and missing bills or other pieces of mail.

Carefully review your credit report to look for unauthorized charges.

Take advantage of your right to one free copy per year of your credit report from each of the three consumer reporting companies by calling 1-877-322-8228 or ordering online at www.annualcreditreport.com. Request a report from one of the reporting companies every four months and carefully review this report for suspicious activity.

For more information on how to protect against identity theft, Madigan urged consumers to visit her office's Web site at <http://www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov/consumers/hotline.html>. Consumers also can contact Attorney General Madigan's Identity Theft Hotline at 1-866-999-5630, TTY 1-877-844-5461.

Widespread Support For 2016 Olympics Bid

Nearly 2,000 people participated in a fundraising effort tonight in support of Chicago's bid to host the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The $9.4 million event helped raise will fund the activities Chicago will have to conduct if it makes it to the international stage of the bidding process. In total, the bid committee has raised in excess of $30 million.

Appropriately titled "You Can Make It Happen", the event is said to be one of the most successful fundraising efforts of its kind in the city's storied history of public-private partnership. It took place at McCormick Place, the proposed future site of 12 Olympic competition venues, as well as the Main Press Center and the International Broadcast Center, and featured Olympic hopefuls, ages 8 to 13, putting on displays of sport and athleticism atop elaborate staging placed throughout the ballroom.

"The level of enthusiasm for hosting the 2016 Olympic and Paralympic Games in Chicago is quite simply astounding," said Andy McKenna, co-chair of the Chicago 2016 Development Committee. "The 79 co-chairs, whose tables were valued at $100,000 each, plus the more than 300 additional companies, individuals, and organizations that bought tables or tickets, together raised more than $9.4 million."

Like the Olympic Games themselves, contributions to the hosting of this event went beyond monetary giving. Dozens of local companies and individuals donated their time and effort or provided their services at cost to help ensure the funds raised went toward the bid. These Value-in-Kind contributions were not included in the fundraising totals.

"The wide array of donated goods and services ensures that the funds raised by tonight's event are used for the appropriate purpose," said Deb DeHaas, co-chair of the Chicago 2016 Development Committee. "Chicago proved it's the 'City That Works' once again. Everyone came together to pull off a spectacular evening."

"Tonight was a huge success so I want to thank Andy, Deb and everyone else who contributed to this event," said Patrick G. Ryan, chairman and CEO of the Chicago 2016 Exploratory Committee. "While we have exceeded the minimum the USOC required us to have at our disposal, we will continue to ask for support as the process evolves. We are running a tight ship, but winning on the international stage will take a great effort, and these contributions enable that."

"It is an investment in the future of Chicago in many ways. We hope to inspire our youth, some of whom may actually get a chance to compete in 2016. And we want to leave the types of sport, urban and social legacies hosting the Games can bring."

The next step for the Chicago bid is an evaluation committee visit by the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) next week on March 6th and March 7th. The USOC will then make a final decision on the domestic phase of the bid April 14th. The International Olympic Committee will not make their final decision until October 2009.

"FCC Commissioner Looks Once Again To Help Big Media"

"The FCC is once again looking at a series of controversial FCC media ownership rule changes that would permit greater concentration of ownership in TV and print media," said Steve Maeck, an assistant professor of speech communication at North Central College and Mitchell Szczepanczyk, an organizer with Chicago Media Action. "These changes would allow the few remaining media giants to downsize their workforces, increase ad revenues and reuse the same basic content throughout their various print and broadcast outlets."

"By consolidating control over our media more firmly in the hands of a few already enormously powerful conglomerates, the rules changes would further stifle the diversity of viewpoints made available through our culture's most powerful channels of communication, further limiting the public's access to local perspectives and unconventional ideas," Maeck states in an article for the Illinois Editorial Forum.

What's shocking is that these rule changes are being reintroduced by FCC chairman Kevin Martin who helped suppress reports - which were compiled by FCC employees in 2002 and 2003 about this very issue," Szczepanczyk adds. "One of those reports found that eliminating ownership rules for radio shrunk the number of radio station owners despite an increase in commercial radio stations. A second study concluded that eliminating TV ownership rules led to reduced local TV news coverage. Evidently, senior officials at the agency ordered that all copies of the offending reports be destroyed."

"The Republican-dominated FCC - with Martin as the deciding vote - unsurprisingly approved the new rules sought by big media," Maeck states. "But the agency soon faced a massive and unprecedented public backlash. Three million people wrote letters and sent e-mails opposing the new policies. Concerned citizens held unofficial public hearings and protests nationwide. In the end, Congress voted its disapproval of the FCC's decision and an emergency court order temporarily blocked the rule changes. A subsequent court ruling demanded that the FCC start all over and revisit its media ownership policies."

The FCC has reopened the issue, but unfortunately they are seeking to change the rules to favor big media.

"It is up to the public to again weigh in on these crucial policy decisions," Maeck and Szczepanczyk conclude. "Indeed, citizen involvement is the very reason this issue is still on the table three years after its presumed completion."

Stormwater Management Plan

The Board of Commissioners of the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago (District) has adopted the Cook County Stormwater Management Plan. The plan is not a regulatory ordinance and does not set forth any rules, regulations or standards to which a municipality will be held or be required to enforce. Rather, it is a high level organizational plan wherein the overall framework for the countywide program is established. The District was required to adopt such a plan per Illinois Act (Public Act 93-1049) which gave the District stormwater management authority.

The Cook County Stormwater Plan contains the mission and goals of the program and guidelines for preparing a Detailed Watershed Plan for each of the six watersheds within Cook County. The Detailed Watershed Plans will include, among other things, an assessment of existing conditions and problems, hydrologic modeling, identification of stormwater projects, best management practices and cost estimates for potential projects.

Commissioner Patricia Young, Chairman of the District's Stormwater Management Committee said, "The District has embarked on an important mission to provide stormwater management for all of Cook County. We have received letters from 34 municipalities, and comments from 450 individuals to draft this plan. We are confident that the plan gives us a good first step in establishing a countywide stormwater management program."

The Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago collects and treats wastewater from more than five million people and the industrial equivalent of another 4.5 million people in Cook County. The District also operates the Deep Tunnel Project to collect and treat sewer overflows, and provides stormwater management for all of Cook County. The District's 2007 budget is $1 billion. The District's web address is www.mwrd.org.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

In a most interesting development Governor Rod Blagojevich recently directed the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulations (IDFPR), to immediately suspend the Illinois Predatory Lending Database Pilot Program, also known as HB 4050.

An overview of this law might suggest that a well-meaning piece of legislation pushed by House Speaker Michael Madigan has been shown to have a detrimental impact upon several minority communities in the Pilot Program. Despite the overwhelming objections from the financial industry, Speaker Madigan was able to propel HB 4050 to approval. The consequences of this action are disturbing. A recent report from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign showed that housing sales in the HB 4050 zip codes have dropped by nearly half over the fall of 2006. Comparable zip codes in which the pilot program is not being applied have seen a decline of 20 percent. The report also stated that the pilot program does not offer borrowers additional consumer protections.

Late last year the Governor asked IDFPR to consult with community members affected by the pilot program. The "Pilot Program Area" zip codes included: 60620, 60621, 60623, 60628, 60629, 60632, 60636, 60638, 60643, and 60652. Upon reviewing significant information from the afore mentioned zip codes, the data studied suggests that prior designation may be detrimental to the Pilot Program's purpose, namely, to curb predatory lending practices in areas with high rates of foreclosure or residential home mortgages.

The ultimate affect was that the Governor was getting major heat from the Rev. Jesse Jackson because according to Rev. Jackson, the law was preventing lots of poor African Americans from qualifying for mortgages. And the Governor responded to this pressure. We're sure we haven't heard the end of this unusual turnaround by the Governor.

The executive board of the Illinois AFL-CIO voted unanimously last week to elect Michael T. Carrigan as the new president of the one-million member labor organization.

Carrigan will serve out the remaining two years of the unexpired term of recently retired president Margaret Blackshire.

Carrigan has served as secretary-treasurer of the Illinois AFL-CIO since 2000. Prior to that he was the business manager/financial secretary for IBEW 146 in Decatur.

The executive board also voted to begin the process of filling the vacant secretary-treasurer position. Affiliated unions have approximately 40 days until the next scheduled meeting to identify potential candidates and introduce them to board members.

Citizens for The Active Party (Chicago Ridge) have announced that a reception to re-elect the Active Party candidates, present Chicago Ridge Village Trustees Juanita Babcock, Dan Badon and Don Pratt, will take place Thursday, March 15th, from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Garden Chalet, 110th and Ridgeland Ave., in Worth. Donations for tickets are $25 each. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres are included.

Active Party candidates Juanita Babcock, Dan Badon and Don Pratt site their past experience, knowledge and their successful community service to the residents of Chicago Ridge as part of their platform for continued progress in the Village. For more information, call (708) 692-4576.

Last week, Robert Morris College announced that its Graduate School would be named the Morris Graduate School of Management. "We want our graduate school to establish its own identity, yet indicate a connection to Robert Morris College," said Michael P. Violtt, president.

Morris Graduate School of Management offers a Master of Business Administration degree and a Master of Information Systems degree. The graduate school began in 2005 as a direct response to the needs of bachelor's degree graduates in the Chicagoland area, with a desire to earn a graduate degree from a national leader in applied education.

"Robert Morris College has a history of working to fulfill the higher education needs of our communities," Mr. Violtt continued. "Individuals are discovering that a graduate level degree can open more doors to a successful future, and RMC is offering quality, non-for-profit, graduate level programs with reasonable costs and flexible schedules."

Students can complete the program in as little as 18 months, taking two courses per quarter. They have the option of attending school full time or part time, day, evening and/or weekend. With RMC's rolling enrollment, students can begin the program in February, July, September or December.

Classes in the Morris Graduate School of Management are held at the downtown Chicago campus at 401 S. State St., the Orland Park campus at 82 Orland Square Drive (708-226-5333), and the DuPage campus in Aurora. Application information on the Morris Graduate School of Management is available through the RMC website at www.masters.robertmorris.edu or by calling (800) 225-1520.

On Wednesday, April 11th the 'Active Senior Expo,' will be held at the Holiday Inn Select Convention Center located at 18501 S. Harlem Ave. in Tinley Park (I-80 and Harlem Ave.). Show hours are 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

'Active Senior Expo' is an event dedicated to inform, educate and entertain senior citizens. It features hundreds of products and services designed specifically for seniors. Offerings include assisted living, health care, retirement communities, financial, insurance, legal estate planning, home care, travel, vision, hearing, consumer products and government programs.

Special attractions include free health screenings by Jewel-Osco, free seminars, Krispy Kreme doughnuts (while supplies last) and door prizes. Live entertainment will be presented at noon.

No registration is necessary and regular admission to the event is $2. However, free admission coupons will be widely available and attendees can obtain a free admission coupon by visiting www.activeseniorexpo.net. Parking is free.

For more information call (630) 620-6347.

Thompson & Kuenster Funeral Home, located at 5570 W. 95th St. in Oak Lawn will be hosting the second of a series of 'Senior Fitness Seminars' on March 13th at 7 p.m. These seminars include: "Have Happy Feet" conducted by Dr. David Finkelstein, Podiatric Physician & Surgeon; "Healthy Eyes Glaucoma Screening" by Dr. Sandra Bury, Optometrist; and "Medicare Concerns & Veteran's Issues" by Jerry Mulvihill & Lenore Goodfriend of Congressman Dan Lipinski's office.

Owner/director Robert Kuenster wishes to remind friends and neighbors that all Seminars & Events are held free of charge at his Thompson & Kuenster Funeral Home. Call (708) 425-0502 for further information or to R.S.V.P.

Letters To The Editor

Connecting Drug-War Dots

What we have here is a failure to connect the dots – an intelligence failure – even though all the dots appear on the same day in same newspaper.

Dot one is on page 10, section 1 of the Chicago Tribune ("Coach loses everything to addiction," Chicago Tribune, 2/15/07); dot 2 is on page one, section 2 ("Cocaine raid stuns neighbors"); and dot three is on page 4, section 1 ("Growth spurt projected for American's prisons"). (Is the Cook County Board listening? The Illinois General Assembly? Congress?) Get out your dot-connecting crayon.

One neighbor is charged with possessing 300 kilos of cocaine worth $5.7 million stashed in his garage. Connect the drug-cache dot to the story of the neighbor (a winning volleyball coach who doesn't smoke or drink) charged with armed robbery, the heist money reportedly needed to pay for his crack habit. And connect these drug prohibition stories with dot three, a private study reports that the nation's prison population is expected to jump by 200,000 inmates over the next five years. The US is already the biggest prison keeper in the world with the highest rate of incarceration of any country in the world 2.3 million people behind bars and stripes, (US Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Statistics, Prisoners in 2005, "Washington D.C.: US Department of Justice, Nov. 2006, p. 1), thanks in large part to drug prohibition.

Setting the newspaper down for a moment and connecting a dot from a recent Lou Dobbs' show, Lou says, it's incredible that 4% of the world's population consume two-thirds of the world's illicit drugs.

For those without a crayon – connect the dots with a line of cocaine, crack, heroin, meth, PCP, ecstasy, marijuana seeds or whatever drug your neighborhood offers. Don't know a drug dealer? Ask any school kid for directions.

In fact, some parents don't need to ask a student, they can ask their school principal, if they live in Bethlehem, PA. Connecting the dots to a second issue of the same newspaper, a middle school principal was arrested and charged with selling crystal methamphetamine out of his school office (Chicago Tribune, 3/1/07, "Principal accused of selling meth at Pennsylvania school"). This is against D.A.R.E. school policy and drug curriculum, principal or not.

Connecting drug-war dots from today's newspaper, draw a line from the school-principal story to the music-producer-on-trial story ("Music producer, wife go on trial," Chicago Tribune, 3/1/07). According to drug conspiracy charges, the music man conspired to move 900 grams of heroin, valued at $950,000, and prosecutors say police found six kilos of drugs in a duffel bag in a storage facility in a south Chicago suburb. These dots are not to be confused with the arrest of dozens of other people Wednesday (part of 400 people arrested the past 20 months) on drug-trafficking and money-laundering charges ("4 west suburban men held in U.S. drug-trafficking problem," 3/1/07), one of whom used a Melrose Park restaurant to sell drugs.

Proceed from the Melrose Park dot to the big dot, multi-state bust that netted more than $45 million in cash and tons of cocaine, heroin and marijuana in San Diego with Wednesday arrests of 66 persons in Illinois, Arizona and California (Chicago Tribune, 3/1/07), "Suspects in drug cartel swept up in raids").

First assistant U.S. atty. Gary Shapiro in Chicago made a drug-war dot Wednesday, speaking of the arrest of persons involved in the illegal gun trade, "When you add illegally obtained heavy-caliber firearms to the already volatile mix of gangs and drugs on the streets of Chicago, the result to say the least is an unacceptable lever of violence (Chicago Tribune, 3/1/07, "19 seized in gun-trafficking").

Al Capone said, responding to similar rhetoric from Elliott Ness a prohibition ago, "The Thompson submachine gun is a tool of our trade. My boys got a fortune in my liquor and speakeasies to protect. And we protect 'em. And let me say, I'm for prohibition and there ain't a day I don't thank Elliott and his boys for it."

Connect the dots – [Dot] [Dot] [Dot].

Dear Editor,

Jan. 22nd was a special day in the hearts and minds of many. Couples who have had the heartbreak of not being able to complete their families through the beauty of adoption now have greater hope. Women and men who have given their time at adoption agencies, crisis pregnancy centers, homes for unwed mothers, and organizations specializing in placing special needs and foster children, could now get a helping hand.

Federal Judge David Coar got it right in his ruling when he stated that he assumed "that a request for a Choose Life specialty license plate was prompted by a sincere interest in promoting adoption, that the message was protected speech." No matter how others who choose to see this as a threat to the abortion business, or as an income loss to the abortionist, who missed one more "customer," it is all about adoption. The vast majority of Americans view adoption as a positive choice for mothers in a "crisis" pregnancy.

Those who would not agree certainly do not include the adoptive parents and the child being adopted.

Eighteen states across America have this beautiful program. There are another 17 states working towards the same goal. Here in Illinois our Illinois Choose Life Board made the trip to Springfield four times playing by the rules in applying for our specialty plate. We were denied a hearing from both houses of the legislature. They kept it from even getting out of the assigned committee.

Judge Coar got it right. It never was about abortion, only a sincere effort to offer yet another choice, at a time of a difficult pregnancy. Don't let others try to frame this argument any differently. Certainly we welcome those who do not agree, to consider offering their own plate proclaiming they are pro choice. After all, they are claiming it is all about abortion. Isn't that truly the American way?

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

Fox Valley Antique Show

The 50th Annual Fox Valley Spring Antique Show to benefit Garfield Farm Museum will be held on Saturday and Sunday, March 10th and 11th beginning at 10 a.m. each day at the Kane County Fairgrounds in St. Charles. The show ends on Saturday at 6 p.m. and on Sunday at 4 p.m.

There will be 55 dealers from 14 states featured at the show that is produced by the Chicago Suburban Antique Dealers Assn. (CSADA). This year a special theme will be Antiques for the Garden.

The CSADA is a special group with a limited, selective membership that requires the highest standards of authenticity of the antiques offered, ethical conduct, courtesy, honesty and friendly professional service to the public. Many of the dealers only exhibit at shows so this is a rare opportunity to see their prized inventory. There is an abundance of 18th and 19th century American and English pieces from furniture, accessories, folk art, paintings, ceramics, glass, clothing, books, prints, pottery, textiles, and more to be found at the show.

During the show there will also be "Five Minute Lectures" by individual exhibitors for the public's education. On Saturday at 2 p.m. a talk on Botanical Prints will be given by Chelsea Galleries, Booth #47, and at 3 p.m. Donna Finegan will speak on early-mid 19th Century Clothing at Booth #35. On Sunday at 12 noon, a talk on Art Restoration will be offered by Landmarks Gallery, Booth #37, and at 1 p.m. someone from the Garfield Farm Museum will speak on Heirloom Flowers at Booth #10A.

Admission to the show is $8 per person and parking is free. Luncheon and refreshments offered by Inglenook Pantry of Geneva will be available.

For further information, visit www.csada.com or call (815) 838-0606 or e-mail info@garfieldfarm.org or call the museum at (630) 584-8485. The Kane County Fairgrounds are located on the west side of Randall Road between Ill. Routes 64 and 38.

What's Old Is New

Despite its condition in the past, the Silver Flash Restaurant at 14547 S. Kedzie in Posen has had its loyal customers. Recently, co-owners Steve Saeks and Mike Holmgren closed the business, but in eight days, the Silver Flash had undergone a welcome new change. Brightly decorated as a 1950's diner in clean white and black tiles with touches of red, the Silver Flash is back and it's better than ever!

Steve Saeks told of a diner that was opened for nine years before he and Holmgren took the establishment over. Catering to seniors with a menu that is loaded with great home style fare with breakfast, lunch and dinner at reasonable prices. "Quality food and good prices have always kept our customers coming back," Saeks said. Saeks said that he kept the same staff so that the "regulars" would still feel at home.

There are more changes planned for the future. Saeks spoke of expanding the restaurant to include a bar with live entertainment and room for banquets. "Posen doesn't have facilities like this," Steve said, "Even the mayor and the village board had to take their Christmas party outside of Posen. I would like to see the Silver Flash expanded so that village residents have a place to hold their parties and other functions." He also said that the restaurant will soon become 'Wifi', wired for internet, for patrons and their laptops, bringing the restaurant into the 21st century.

Silver Flash's grand opening was held on Saturday, March 3rd. Posen Mayor Don Schupek, Village Clerk Veronica Grabowski and members of the board of trustees were on hand to help celebrate the day. Mayor Schupek is excited that the restaurant had opened in Posen. Elected four years ago, Mayor Schupek said that Posen needs more businesses to come into town. With the re-opening of the Silver Flash and other new businesses that have come into town, Posen is beginning a new era of economic development.

According to Saeks, the restaurant serves mostly senior citizens 55 and over, but he wants to see the Silver Flash serving everyone. There are daily specials, a children's menu and, of course, a senior menu. There are theme nights such as Monday's two dinners for $11 and Thursday's Mexican Night, featuring delicious Mexican foods and Friday night's Catfish dinners; and there are more to come.

Open from 5 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, the Silver Flash serves quality home style cooking at affordable prices, has a wait staff that will greet you with a smile and quick service and excellent chefs; you will get this all when you come to the New Silver Flash. Take out orders are also available.

The Dublin City Ramblers

The Legendary Folk and Ballad Group, The Dublin City Ramblers, will perform in concert, on Saturday, March 10th, at Chicago Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest

The Dublin City Ramblers have been an Irish favorite for over 35 years with 35 albums, 10 top 10 albums and eight gold albums and several awards for Best Ballad/Folk Group. The Dublin City Ramblers have played Carnegie Hall, Albert Hall and Cork City's Opera House. The group has also played for Maureen O'Hara at a banquet in her honor and with the late Ray Charles in Paris. The Dublin City Ramblers perform great Irish folk and ballad songs such as "Fields of Athenry," "Dublin in the Rare Old Times," "Dirty Old town," "Galway Races" and "The Town I Loved So Well."

The doors of Gaelic Park open for this musical event at 7 p.m. with the show beginning at 8 p.m. Call Gaelic Park at (708) 687-9323 to reserve tickets, admission is $20. Visit the Gaelic Park website at www.chicagogaelpark.org

A Hero To Taxpayers

Americans for Tax Reform President Grover Norquist issued the following statement following Congressman Judy Biggert's courageous vote against Big Labor and for the taxpayers of Illinois.

"Congressman Judy Biggert is a true leader and deserves all the praise in the world for voting against H.R. 800. This bill would balloon the power of Big Labor, leading directly to more government employees, thus resulting in higher taxes. Judy Biggert has the guts to take on Big Labor, despite unrelenting negative attacks from enemies of Illinois taxpayers."

H.R. 800 passed the U.S. House of Representatives

last week on a nearly party-line vote. It represents the biggest power grab by organized labor in a generation. The bill would strip workers of their right to a federally-supervised, private ballot election. It would replace this personal choice with a public "card check" campaign. Under this public scheme, the worker's decision is made public to his boss, the union organizers, and his co-workers.

Outdoors by Kim Kirby (my guest columnist this week)

While it may be still too cold for some anglers to brave the waters in the Chicago area, Southwest Missouri and the Ozark Mountains are ready to receive anglers with comfort and bounty. A 'mini vacation' is a great way to jumpstart your fishing season and this is the perfect place to do it. An easy one-day drive (about 8 hours) will give you unlimited options for fishing, nighttime entertainment, and family activities after you dock for the day. The time between March and June are a perfect time to visit this beautiful area, rich in game and fish, history and solitude. Within a one-hour drive of Branson, Missouri lie lakes and rivers of spectacular beauty and most any species of fish any angler could want, and they are plentiful!

Tablerock Lake, Branson, Missouri: As probably the best known of our lakes, its reputation precedes it for good reason. It is our busiest tourism lake 'in season' and borders much of Branson's waterside resorts. Between March and June it is relatively easy to find nice, affordable accommodations on the water. It's best to make reservations before arriving. An Internet search will give you plenty of options to choose from to best fit your ideal vacation. Tablerock is a large, deepwater lake with excellent structures for all species to breed in comfort. Start your early morning around some of this lake's tall rock structures and you will find some nice perch waiting underneath. Then cast to the shoreline with a Texas Rig Chartreuse worm that will net you some great bass. Finish off your day with an evening crappie fest. They are ravenous for most any live bait and there are enough nice pan-size ones waiting so don't hesitate to throw those smaller ones back.

Bull Shoals Lake, Diamond City, Arkansas: You can't talk bass without Bull Shoals Lake in the conversation. Bull Shoals is one of the top ten cleanest lakes in the country. The Pro Am's have been held here numerous times because the bass thrive in the peace of this huge lake. You won't find much traffic on the lake as it is well away from the tourist areas; however, Diamond City has a newly built marina, impeccable campsites and a new golf course so you can feed two of your favorite activities at one time. The locals are mainly from the southwest suburbs of Chicago so you should feel right at home. You don't have to go far to find the big ones. Hug the south shoreline from the marina to 'The Devils Backbone' and you will have every species of fish available in this area at 'keeper' size.

Lake Taneycomo, Branson, Missouri: One of the original parts of the White River Chain left intact, this is a spring-fed body of water that originates at the Bull Shoals Dam and ends at the Tablerock Dam. This is trout heaven! Its cold water and fast current make for exciting trout fishing and is the perfect habitat for these beauties to thrive in. Make sure you check your Missouri DNR handbook as some areas are fly-fishing only and others are shoreline only due to the proximity and strong currents from the dams.

There are so many other wonderful spots in the Ozarks. Investigate them all in the Missouri DNR Handbook (available at the Branson Chamber of Commerce or any Missouri Wal-Mart Sporting Goods Department).

Kim Kirby with a "keeper" Northern Pike caught on a Canadian fishing trip with her Dad, Jim Kirby.

My Father's Cause. My father has devoted a great amount of his lifetime advocating quality family time in the great outdoors, whether it be hunting, fishing, hiking or camping, or whatever gets you together with your family in peace and solitude. This world moves so fast and children grow up surrounded by electronics instead of family and nature. Communication is easily lost simply because of the way things have evolved in society. As a direct result of his influence I know I can tell my father anything, even at this age. But to those of you in my generation who enjoy the sporting life, remember where you got this appreciation. Pass on your love of the outdoors but ask someone else to join you once in a while. To that end, "Hey Dad...Let's go fishing!"

De La Salle Catholic League Standing

De La Salle wrapped up the regular season with an overall record of 17-7 and a mark of 6-1 in the Catholic League South.

Members of the Meteor varsity were: Elliott Brown (Bronzeville); Terry Brown (Auburn-Gresham); Mashawn Chamberlain (Woodlawn); Zack Cline (Archer Heights); Damlen Essex (Washington Heights); Joe Ganta (Garfield Ridge); Andrew Harris (Greater Grand Crossing); Caleb Harris (South Shore); DeAndre Jackson (Plano); Booker Johnson (Lawndale); Jeremy Leonard (East Side); Joshua Letourneau (Oak Lawn); MiRon Leveston (Morgan Park); Brandon Lewis (Dolton); Jordan Little (Evergreen Park); Derek Needham (Dolton); John Villa (Garfield Ridge); William Watson (South Shore); Kyle White (Garfield Ridge); Joe Wojcik (Garfield Ridge) and Rodriguez Wright (Scottsdale).

Tom White served as De La Salle's head coach with John Brogan, Joe Carbonara, Joe Considine, Eron Leveston and Mike Walsh his assistants.

In addition to their achievements on the court, several members of De La Salle's varsity are also successful in the classroom. Leveston (No. 26), Letourneau (No. 42) and Johnson (No. 57) rank in the top half of the 151-member Class of 2007. As for the 188-member Class of 2008, Cline (No. 4), Villa (No. 12), Wojcik (No. 14), Andrew Harris (No. 20), Little (No. 39), Kyle White (No. 50), Ganta (No. 67), and Wright (No. 71) rank in the top half. An experience like no other, De La Salle offers a quality education in a co-institutional environment that transcends the classroom. Diverse perspectives, Christian values and our tradition provide students an education that lasts a lifetime.

Looking For Two Fastpitch Softball Players

The Chi-Town Express is an elite fastpitch softball organization and is looking for two players to complete their 10 and under team for the 2007 season. Players receive top fundamental instruction and will play a 50+ game schedule including 10 local tournaments this summer. Girls born in 1996 or after are eligible and we will train any girl who displays a positive attitude. Experience level is not important as Chi-Town takes pride developing the skills and fundamentals of girls who desire to play at the best. This is also an opportunity to play for Coach Mike who is regarded as one of the best in the area at developing young talent.

Interested players should send an email to chitownexpress@comcast.net or visit our web site at www.chitownexpress.com and select 'want to tryout' to fill out a confidential online tryout form.

No Radio Technology In Personal IDs

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) declared a victory for taxpayers and drivers after the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) released proposed regulations for personal identification that do not mandate the use of radio-frequency identification (RFID) technology. The REAL ID Act requires DHS to establish federal standards for state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards.

To meet the REAL ID requirement that licenses be "machine readable," DHS recommends the use of 2D bar codes, the technology that most states already use to make secure cards at a reasonable cost. No state currently uses RFID, an automatic identification method that relies on storing and remotely retrieving data using radio waves.

CAGW has released two reports, Real ID: Big Brother Could Cost Big Money and Border Security: PASS Card Fails on Cost, Privacy, criticizing RFID-based identification. The total cost of issuing new licenses with RFID chips could reach $17.4 billion and the average cost of a license would shoot from between $10 and $20 to more than $93. In contrast, the National Conference of State Legislatures estimated that it would cost $9 to $13 billion to implement REAL ID Act regulations based on current licensing techniques. RFID also threatens privacy, raising the possibility of identity thieves remotely accessing their victims' personal information with a hand-held scanner.

In December 2005, CAGW delivered more than 5,200 petitions from its members to DHS Secretary Michael Chertoff urging DHS not to include RFID chips in its REAL ID regulations. CAGW also sent a letter to Secretary Chertoff on behalf of a coalition of 21 organizations opposing RFID.

The REAL ID Act was buried in an $82 billion military spending bill and passed without any congressional debate in May 2005. On Jan. 25, Maine became the first state in the nation to demand repeal of the law and others are considering similar legislation.

"CAGW activists successfully thwarted RFID-based licenses, saving taxpayers $4.4 to $8.4 billion and heading off a grave risk to privacy. However, REAL ID remains problematic. It is an unfunded mandate on the states, and despite DHS statements to the contrary, moves the country closer to a national ID card," Schatz concluded.

Citizens Against Government Waste is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to eliminating waste, fraud, mismanagement and abuse in government.

Eye Donor Month

Five-year-old Chicago resident Anthony Diaz was born with compromised vision, a scarred cornea, which prevented light from passing through the pupil. As he matured, the sight in his left eye worsened to the point where his vision was less than 20 percent. In June of 2006, Anthony became a recipient of the incredible gift of sight when he underwent a successful cornea transplant. After his surgery, Anthony, an avid soccer player and fan, was afraid to open his eyes. It was his family who finally got him to open his eyes by turning on the television so he could see the World Cup game. Anthony is back in school and on the soccer field, and is passionate about spreading the word about the importance of eye donation.

Since 1983, March has been designated by Congress as national Eye Donor Month in order to increase public awareness of the need for eye donations. Nearly 1,700 Illinois citizens received corneal transplants last year and over 4,000 are waiting for a sight-restoring or life-giving transplant. For those who cannot be helped by a corneal transplant, the Eye-Bank offers the Gift of Hope through its Eye and Vision Research Program. The Illinois Eye-Bank and its affiliate, the Watson Gailey Eye-Bank in Bloomington, Illinois serve the northern two-thirds of the state by providing over 95% of all corneal tissue used for transplantation to Illinois residents.

Virtually every tissue and organ in the body can be used to save or improve the quality of another life. Yet the miracle of transplantation cannot happen unless someone decides to be a donor upon death. Individuals wishing to give the incredible gift of sight, through the new donor registry, can re-register at the Secretary of State's web site, www.LifeGoesOn.com

Nursing Home Violations

The Illinois Department of Public Health announced the following type "A" violations of the Nursing Home Care Act were cited during the month of September in this area. An "A" violation, which is the most serious licensure violation imposed by the state, pertains to a condition in which there is a substantial probability that death or serious mental or physical harm will result.

The statement of violation for each facility cited can be obtained by visiting the Department's Web site at www.idph.state.il.us.

Avenue Care Center, a 155-bed skilled care facility, located at 4505 S. Drexel, Chicago, has been fined $5,000 for failure to sanitize and maintain the floors, walls, ceilings, dining area, laundry room, storage rooms and numerous resident bathrooms. The facility also is accused of failing to ensure the kitchen was free from a backup of sewage and rodent droppings. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Countryside Healthcare Center, a 197-bed skilled and intermediate care facility located at 1635 E. 154 St., Dolton, has been fined $45,000 for failure to administer regularly scheduled insulin and monitor blood glucose levels as ordered by a doctor. As a result, several residents were hospitalized. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Manorcare at Oak Lawn/Kostner, a 144-bed skilled care facility located at 9401 S. Kostner Ave., Oak Lawn, has been fined $25,000 for failure to provide a resident with adequate care. The resident later was hospitalized and died. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Washington Heights Nursing Home, a 228-bed skilled care facility located at 1010 W. 95th St., Chicago, has been fined $20,000 for failure to consistently monitor and assess the condition of a resident, who later was hospitalized in an intensive care unit. The facility has requested a hearing on the Department's action.

Fall Back On Sun Protection

Daylight Saving Time will begin two weeks earlier this year, starting Sunday, March 11 at 2 a.m. An extra hour of daylight each day means more exposure to ultraviolet radiation. With more than 90 percent of all skin cancers caused by sun exposure, The Skin Cancer Foundation reminds everyone about the importance of using sun protection before going outdoors.

"After a long, cold, and dark winter, Daylight Saving Time is something we all look forward to," said Perry Robins, MD, President of The Skin Cancer Foundation. "However, it's important to remember to keep skin protected, even when the sun may not feel that strong."

Up to 90 percent of visible skin changes commonly attributed to aging are caused by the sun. So as Daylight Saving Time approaches, make sure to follow these safety tips from www.skincancer.org:

Use a broad-spectrum sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Apply sunscreen liberally and evenly to all exposed skin. Don't forget areas such as underneath the nose and chin, where skin is exposed to reflection from sidewalks and sand.

Reapply sunscreen at least every two hours, and more often after swimming or sweating.

Cover often-missed spots: lips, ears, around eyes, neck, scalp and hands. Keep lips protected with an SPF 15+ lip balm.

Wear protective clothing including a wide-brimmed hat and UV-blocking sunglasses with wraparound or large frames.

Seek the shade, especially between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Protect children from the sun and teach them sun safety.

Practice skin self-examination once every month. If you spot anything suspicious, see a physician immediately.

See your physician every year.

The Skin Cancer Foundation is the only global organization solely devoted to the prevention, detection and treatment of skin cancer. The mission of the Foundation is to decrease the incidence of skin cancer through public and professional education and research. For more information about melanoma and to learn more about how to protect your skin, visit www.skincancer.org, or call 1-800-SKIN-490.

Provides Food Safety Training

Recent food recalls, withdrawals, and alerts have led the University of Illinois to conduct further research addressing biofilms. Join University of Illinois Extension and Dr. Scott Martin to discuss the ability of some bacteria to form protective biofilms. Biofilms seem to provide a degree of protection against usual methods of sanitation.

"Currently, biofilms present challenges in keeping foods safe to eat, both for the consumer and the food industry," explains Dr. Martin. I will discuss practical ways to reduce the risks of biofilm-forming bacteria as well as future challenges they may cause."

Dr. Scott Martin is a Professor in the Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Dr. Martin will share his research. He will also cover which pathogenic bacteria form biofilms and how they are made on foods such as peanut butter, spinach, lettuce, and ground beef.

This two-hour program is an in-service training session for dietitians, home economists, public health officials and other interested professionals. It is the third in a five-part series co-sponsored by University of Illinois Extension Nutrition and Wellness Development Team and the Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition at the University of Illinois.

Two hours of in-service education credit are available from the American Dietetics Association for dietitians and other professionals who attend. A $10 registration fee is required.

The session will be held at the University of Illinois Extension District 1 office, 5527 Miller Circle Dr., Matteson, on Thursday, March 15th from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Seating is limited so reservations are required.

For more information about this session and the remaining three in the series, contact Robin Braid at (708) 720-7500.

Legislation Passes To Improve Teen Driving Laws

Legislation proposed by Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White to improve teen driving laws with the aim of reducing traffic crashes and fatalities involving young drivers was approved by the Illinois Senate Transportation Committee recently.

Senate Bill 172, sponsored by State Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago), will improve the Illinois Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) Program that governs drivers up to the age of 21. Several recent studies have shown that comprehensive GDL programs greatly reduce traffic crashes and fatalities involving teen drivers. The legislation was drafted based on recommendations made by White's Teen Driver Safety Task Force, composed of legislators, traffic safety experts, law enforcement officials, educators, judges and victim advocates.

"Traffic crashes are the leading cause of death among adolescents," White said. "Last summer, I formed a task force to address this very serious problem and our mission was clear: to develop legislation that will strengthen the Illinois GDL law and reduce fatal crashes involving teen drivers. This proposal has already gained widespread acclaim from leading national traffic safety experts who believe our legislation will make Illinois' GDL program one of the best in the nation."

The legislation includes the following nine provisions:

*Extend the permit phase from three months to nine months. This proposal will give the novice driver more time to learn under the watchful eye of parents through a variety of weather conditions common throughout Illinois.

*Shift the nighttime driving restriction from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays and from midnight to 11 p.m. on weekends for all drivers under the age of 18 and those who fail to graduate from the initial licensing phase.

The nighttime driving restriction includes exemptions for teens that are traveling to and from school activities and work.

The risk of fatal crashes involving 16 and 17-year-old drivers is three times higher from 10 p.m. to midnight than from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., according to a study by the Center for Injury Research and Policy at Johns Hopkins University's Bloomberg School of Public Health.

*Double the period — from six months to 12 months — that restricts a new driver to a maximum of one unrelated teen passenger.

The John Hopkins Study also concluded that the driver death rate for 16-year-old drivers rose sharply for each additional passenger in the vehicle. Based on studies and testimony, White's task force concluded that distractions from other teen passengers are one of the leading causes of traffic crashes involving 16-year-old drivers.

*Ticket the passengers age 15 to 20, in addition to the drivers, who violate the passenger restriction law. White's task force felt that a teenager's actions are often motivated by consequences or lack thereof. This proposal places responsibility on both the passengers and the driver to abide by the passenger limitation provision.

*Require student drivers to complete a minimum six hours of actual, on-the-street driving with a certified driver education instructor. This proposal eliminates the provision that allows students in high school driver education classes to take a proficiency exam after completing just three hours of practice driving. In addition, it removes current exemptions that allow the use of driving simulators and driving ranges as a substitute for street driving with a certified driver education instructor.

*Implement a true Graduated Driver Licensing system that requires new drivers to earn their way from one stage to the next. Under this proposal, once issued a learner's permit, a teen would be required to drive conviction-free for nine months before he or she would be eligible for a driver's license. The teen would then also have to drive conviction-free for six months in addition to reaching age 18 before moving from the initial licensing phase to the full licensing phase.

Until graduating to the full licensing phase, these young drivers would be subject to the limitations of the initial phase that includes the nighttime driving restriction and cell phone ban, among others.

*A stricter law in which the driver's license of those under age 21 would be suspended for each additional conviction following a driver's initial suspension for two moving violations in a 24-month period. This provision puts young drivers on notice that once their driver's license has been suspended each additional conviction until they turn 21 will result in another suspension of their driving privileges.

*Require drivers under age 18 who are ticketed for traffic violations to appear before a judge with a parent or guardian to receive court supervision. This legislation also requires the attendance of traffic school as a requisite for court supervision for drivers under the age of 21. This ensures that the parent or guardian is fully aware of the minor's traffic violation and understands the requirements and ramifications of court supervision.

*Establish tough, new penalties — including license revocation and vehicle impoundment — for drivers who are involved in street racing. Street racing has become a deadly phenomenon that encourages drivers to race on city streets, highways and interstates. Harsh, no-nonsense penalties are needed to combat and punish this deadly, thrill-seeking behavior.

In addition to the legislation, White recommended various procedural and administrative changes that will further improve driver education and teen driver safety. Those measures include a voluntary contract available on White's web site, www.cyberdriveillinois.com, that allow parents to establish written guidelines for their children to follow in order to keep their driving privileges. White pledged to work with the Illinois Parent Teacher Assn. and Driver Education Industry to create a guidebook to help educate parents and teens about the GDL law and to provide safe driving tips. White also said he would establish a committee headed by the State Board of Education to update Illinois Driver Education Standards and urge the State Board of Education to establish mandatory parent-child meetings with driver education instructors before students may enroll in driver education classes.

If hearing loss has become a concern for you, your spouse or a close friend or relative, you're not alone. One in 10 Americans — more than 31 million people — experience some degree of hearing loss. But because it can happen so gradually, most people don't notice anything's wrong until it's become painfully obvious. But you don't have to suffer in silence. With our FREE hearing test, we can identify any loss you or your loved one may have. If a Miracle-Ear® hearing aid can help, here's more good news:

2 FOR 1 $990

Two AudioChoice® hearing aids
for the price of one.

Valid at participating Miracle-Ear locations. Limit one coupon per purchase. No other offers or discounts apply. Discount does not apply to prior sales. Cash value 1/20th cent. Offer good on AudioChoice contour model AC7021 only. Good for up to a 35dB hearing loss. Expires 3/28/07.

Veterans And Soldiers News

By Lori Taylor Ph: 708.388.2425

Air Force Airman Jerry Davis has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. He is the son of Jim and Dianne Davis of Justice. Davis is a 2006 graduate of Argo Community High School in Summit.

Air Force Airman Erik S. Warren has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. He is the son of Julie Warren of Stickney. Warren is a 2001 graduate of Morton West High School in Berwyn.

L. Tammy Duckworth, Illinois Dept. of Veterans Affairs (IDVA) Acting Director, announced on March 1st that the annual free hunting and fishing licenses for disabled veterans are available. The 2006 license will expire on March 31st. Disabled vets must visit one of the state's Veteran Service Offices to renew or obtain the free hunting and fishing license. The State of Illinois grants these licenses to disabled veterans on a yearly basis. Licenses for 2007 are available now and will expire March 31, 2008.

I read this item in the Johnson-Phelps VFW Post 5220 (Oak Lawn) newsletter. I'm sure they won't mind if we share it with you.

Attention Korean War Veterans: After more than a year of behind-the-scenes work, the Pentagon has announced the creation of a medal honoring the hundreds of thousands of Americans who have served in South Korea since 1953.

The new medal is meant to give special recognition for the sacrifices and contributions made by members of the US Armed Forces who have served or are serving in the Republic of Korea.

The period of service to qualify for the medal begins July 28, 1954 and continues to a future date to be determined by the Secretary of Defense. To be eligible, personnel must have been assigned, attached or mobilized to units operating in South Korea for at least 30 consecutive or 60 non-consecutive days.

Those who meet that requirement may still be eligible if they were: (1) engaged in actual combat during an armed engagement, regardless of the time in the area, (2) wounded or injured in the line of duty and required medical evacuation from Korea, and (3) a regularly assigned aircrew member flying sorties into, out of, within or over the area of eligibility in support of military operations. Each day of flying sorties counts toward the 30 or 60 day requirement.

Johnson-Phelps VFW 5220, 9514 S. 52nd Ave. in Oak Lawn, will hold a blood drive on March 24th beginning at 9 a.m. The Post needs at least 25 pints of blood donated and is asking everyone to help. You will receive a custom-cooked breakfast by the Ladies Auxiliary if you are a donor.

Evergreen Park American Legion, 9701 Kedzie Ave., will hold a St. Pat's/St. Joseph's Day Party at the Post on Saturday, March 17th at 6 p.m. The cost is $35 per person. Harrington's corned beef and cabbage will be served. For more information, call (708) 422-9513.

Wrong diagnosis: An older man was shuffling along, bent over at the waist as his wife helped him into the doctor's waiting room. A woman in the office viewed the scene with sympathy. "Arthritis with complications?" she asked. The wife shook her head. "Do-it-yourself," she explained. "With concrete blocks."

Don't forget to set your clock ahead on Sunday, March 11th at 2 a.m.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Calumet-Sag Trail Plans

Join the Friends of the Calumet-Sag Trail on Tuesday, March 13, at 7 p.m. at Lake Katherine, 7402 W. Lake Katherine Drive, Palos Heights, to discover how the proposed 26-mile shared-use trail can transform the Chicago Southland.

Healthcare and wellness providers and trail advocates are forming healthy partnerships around the country to improve their communities' "health infrastructure" by building multi-use trails! The Friends of the Calumet-Sag Trail will present the Arkansas River Trail's "Medical Mile," and its example of health and wellness partnerships for the Calumet-Sag Trail at the March 13 meeting.

Lake Katherine is located two blocks west of Harlem Ave. on Route 83, and the meeting is open to the public. For additional information, call (312) 427-3325, ext. 226 or go to <http://calsagtrail.org>.

Blagojevich Announces His Historic Healthcare Plan

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich announced "Illinois Covered," his historic and comprehensive health plan to give every Illinoisan access to affordable and quality health coverage. While the Governor's "All Kids" plan, which took effect last year, extended coverage to all children in the state, approximately 1.4 million adults in Illinois are currently uninsured. A majority, roughly 75 percent, are from families with moderate incomes or higher. The Governor's plan will provide affordable coverage to the uninsured and will also help many middle-income families and small businesses that are currently enrolled in health insurance plans save thousands a year on healthcare costs. The plan will also reform the existing healthcare system to improve quality and require more accountability.

The Governor unveiled the plan at Fourth Presbyterian Church in Chicago where parishioners and healthcare advocates gathered with him to "Sound the Alarm" for the uninsured. More than 100 congregations across the state "sounded the alarm" with horns, bells or Shofars to call attention to the plight of the 1.4 million uninsured people in Illinois, and to urge state legislators to work with the Governor to implement a comprehensive healthcare plan in Illinois.

"Everyone should be able to see a doctor or deal with a medical emergency without worrying about putting their family in financial peril. We made major strides last year when we won approval for the All Kids plan so that every child in Illinois can get coverage. But we can't stop there. There are still almost a million-and-a-half adults here in Illinois who don't have health insurance. They're workers; they're parents; they're taxpayers - they're doing everything they should be doing to get ahead and care for their families, but they still don't have real access to health coverage. Maybe they have diabetes or a heart condition, and insurance companies won't take on the risk. Maybe they're self-employed or work for a small business that can't afford to offer employee coverage," said Gov. Blagojevich.

"But just because people don't have health coverage doesn't mean they don't get sick. They do - and they usually don't seek medical care until they're very sick, and the necessary treatment is very expensive. Then we all pick up the cost. It's added on to our insurance premiums and drives up other healthcare costs. It leads to personal bankruptcy. It results in loss of productivity for employers. The bottom line is that it is both morally right and economically advantageous to make sure every person can get health coverage," the Governor added.

The cost of healthcare is rising dramatically nationwide, leaving more and more people uninsured, and forcing businesses to drop or significantly cut back coverage. As a result of faster-than-inflation rate increases, the number of uninsured nationally has increased by 6 million since 2000. As more people become uninsured, the cost of providing health services to them puts significant pressure on families, the healthcare system and the state's economy.

Lack of insurance is the sixth leading cause of death in the U.S.

Medical-related bankruptcies have jumped 2,200 percent since 1981. The middle class accounts for 90 percent of these cases. And in many of these cases, the families who suffered bankruptcies had health insurance. They just couldn't keep up with the rising costs.

Roadside Safety Check

On Sunday, March 11th, the Oak Lawn Police Department in partnership with the Illinois State Police will conduct a Roadside Safety Check in the area of 111th St. and Cicero Ave. The hours of this check will be from 4 until 7 p.m.

Parents' Meeting

A parents-helping-parents meeting sponsored by the Learning Disabilities Association of Chicago will be held on Wednesday, March 14th from 7 to 8 p.m. at Scottsdale Library, 4141 W. 79th St., Chicago.

For more information call Nancy at (773) 233-1007.

A FamiliesUSA study found that the health insurance premiums for families here in Illinois increased by $1,059 due to costs incurred by the uninsured. As health insurance premiums increase and employers cut back on coverage, employers who continue offering benefits pay more.

The HR Policy Association estimates the annual cost of reduced productivity due to uninsured workers in the nation's top 200 largest companies is between $87 billion and $126 billion.

Businesses are significantly impacted by skyrocketing healthcare costs. Over the past five years, health insurance premiums for businesses have increased nearly five times faster than inflation and four times faster than wage growth. While surveys show that employees consider health insurance to be the most important benefit and a leading reason to stay with an employer, the cost of health insurance premiums for employers increased nearly 87 percent between 2000 and 2006. In one startling example, General Motors now spends more money on a per-car basis on health insurance than it does on steel.

States across the country, including Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and California are moving forward with, or studying, plans to insure all of their residents. Gov. Blagojevich designed "Illinois Covered" to address the specific and varying needs of Illinois. His plan includes a range of options - from access to new affordable insurance products, to rebates on private insurance for those who currently have health insurance, to direct state assistance - to make sure every Illinoisan has access to health coverage.

Announces Scholarship

The Libra Charter Chapter, of the American Business Women's Association (ABWA) is funding a special scholarship through the Stephen Bufton Memorial Educational Fund (SBMEF), the chapter announced. The field of study is not specified and the scholarship will be awarded in the amount of $2,000.

In order to be eligible for scholarship consideration, candidates must be women who are citizens of the United States and residents of the State of Illinois; will be college freshmen, sophomore, junior, senior or graduate level in August 2007; are attending or have been accepted at an accredited college or university in Illinois authorized to confer degrees at least at the baccalaureate level or higher; and have achieved a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 or better on a 4.0 scale.

To receive an application, interested parties should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: ABWA Libra Charter Chapter, June Eck, Education Chairman, P.O. Box 1100, Homewood, IL 60430.

Trustees of SBMEF serve as the selection board for this scholarship. Applications are due at ABWA National Headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. by March 31st. The winner will be notified in May. Each one-time scholarship is not renewable. A check will be issued jointly to the educational institution for the recipient. Funds are limited to tuition, books and fees.

Extends Application Deadline

Horace Mann Educators Corporation and The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum have extended the application deadline for the 2007 Horace Mann-Abraham Lincoln Fellowship Program. The new deadline for educators to apply for the fellowship is March 11th. Horace Mann and the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum have teamed up to offer 50 instructors a fellowship to study the life and legacy of our 16th president at the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum in Springfield this summer.

The fellowship is open to any full-time teacher teaching kindergarten through 12th grade in the United States. Selected teachers, one from every state, will attend on either June 24-29 or July 8-13. The fellowship will include round-trip transportation, lodging, most meals, and all workshops, seminars and tours.

Teachers can submit an application online via the Horace Mann web site at www.horacemann.com or www.alp.org. The application includes one's resume and the answer to two essay questions (250-word max.). The first essay addresses subject area(s) and grade level(s) taught by the applicant and how they expect this experience to benefit their students. In the second essay, teachers are asked to explain why it is essential to understand Abraham Lincoln today. Teachers of all subjects and grade levels are encouraged to apply. No special or extensive knowledge of Lincoln is required.

The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum is certified by the Illinois State Board of Education as a Professional Development Provider. Continuing Professional Development Units will also be awarded.

Adopt An Older Animal Companion

If you're looking for a good pet companion, think old -- consider adopting one with a little gray hair, maybe to match your own.

Puppies and kittens, although irresistible at first sight, can be a handful. Soiled carpet, chewing, whining, and jumping are just some of the behavior challenges new owners may confront.

"Many times, older pets are available for adoption and are in need of homes," says Dr. Lore Haug, a veterinarian in the College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences at Texas A&M University. "They can make excellent companions, but are often overlooked."

Older pets are defined as mature animals that have reached approximately two-thirds of their life expectancy. Before choosing a pet, each person should analyze his or her specific needs and desires, recommends Haug. "For example, older pets can make excellent companions for senior citizens by improving their mental attitude, overall well being and keeping them physically active," she explains.

There are many advantages to adopting an older pet. One significant advantage is that the new owner will already know the size and basic temperament of the pet.

"Many mixed-bred, and even purebred, puppies and kittens attain sizes that are unexpectedly larger or smaller than predicted. With an older animal, the mature size of the pet is already known," Haug explains.

"Even when the pedigree of a puppy or kitten is known, the adult temperament and behavior is still difficult to predict. An older pet's behavior around children, seniors and others may be more easily identified," according to Haug. "Because of desired lifestyles, cats are sometimes more suitable than dogs. Cats tend to require less exercise and are more independent in nature."

Although many older pets still demand a significant amount of time and energy (normal feeding schedule/maintenance, regular exercise, bathing, etc.), puppies and kittens generally require even more attention and commitment (behavior training, housetraining, playful interaction, etc.).

"For instance, all pets require regular exercise, but puppies generally need much more," says Haug. "Most older pets are usually already housetrained and may know simple behavioral commands. If they have not been previously trained, older pets can learn new behaviors."

One reason why older pets may not get adopted is that people feel they have more health problems and require more money to maintain. While this can certainly be true, it isn't always the case.

"Although older pets often require more preventative health care and screening, the expense of routine puppy/kitten care is typically comparable," Haug explains.

Potential adopters may also feel that older pets may have some other undesirable quality, but there are many reasons why healthy older pets are available for adoption. "There may be structural changes in the family such as a death, birth, etc. which leave an animal up for adoption," says Haug. "Moving or a change in renting policies can also force owners to relinquish pets for adoption. Other times, animals may develop specific behavioral problems unsuitable for the current owner."

Before adopting an older pet, Haug recommends a few simple steps to maximize the likelihood of a good match. "Interacting with the animal before adoption may help a new owner become acquainted with the personality and unique behavioral characteristics of the pet, but keep in mind that the pet's true character may not be apparent at the adoption facility," she says. "Additionally, the pet should receive a thorough veterinary exam before being taken to its new home if at all possible. You might consider adopting an older pet because it can bring much joy and companionship."

Toasting On St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick's Day is approaching. What better excuse to kick up your heels and enjoy some cheer? Any St. Patrick's Day celebration just wouldn't be complete without raising your glass and making a toast to good health and good friends. The question is, what should you put in the glass? The most authentic drinks, of course, might be a pint of stout beer (i.e., Guinness™) or a glass of Irish whiskey, but beyond those, there are all manner of delightful Irish, Irish-inspired, or just plain festive beverages to sip or gulp on this holiday. This year, try your hand at creating some celebratory sippers for your get-together.

If you'd like to drink as the Irish drink on this holiday, here are some suggestions. Irish kids love blackcurrant juice. It comes in cans or pouches, and the concentrated syrup comes in bottles. The most common brand is Ribena™ -- you should be able to find it at most import stores. For the adults, there are fun things you can do with stout beer. Try creating that pub favorite, the "Black and Tan," right in the comfort of your own home. The Black and Tan is simply a pint glass with two different beers, <http://allrecipes.com/advice/ref/ency/terms/5046.asp> ale and stout, layered in it. The ale (the Tan component) goes in first; fill the glass just slightly less than half full with your favorite chilled Irish ale. Now comes the slightly trickier part: Pouring the stout (the Black component) so that it floats on top of the ale rather than mixing with it. The easiest way to do this at home is to place a spoon over the glass, convex side up, and slowly pour the stout over the back of the spoon so it drizzles into the glass as gently as possible. Now, just allow the stout to settle for a minute, and then make a toast and drink up! You can also have fun with an Irish version of the <http://allrecipes.com/advice/ref/ency/terms/5428.asp> boilermaker. You'll need stout beer plus your favorite Irish whiskey and/or Irish cream liqueur. Fill a pint glass about 2/3 full with stout; fill a shot glass with either whiskey, Irish cream, or a combination of the two. Drop the shot glass into the pint glass, enjoying the bubbling and frothing effect it creates, and drink it in one gulp. (Be careful not to chip your teeth on the shot glass!) Cheers!

Admit it -- drinking green stuff is fun, no matter how old or young you are. If you're not so concerned with authenticity and just want to be festive, there are all kinds of green drinks you can serve to kids and adults, from fizzy punch with floating islands of lime sherbet to cocktails with a little crème de menthe shaken into them. Here's a handy list of ingredients that will give your drinks that delightful emerald hue you're looking for: Crème de menthe liqueur, Melon liqueur, Green Chartreuse liqueur, Green food coloring, Crushed mint leaves, Lime sherbet, Pistachio ice cream, Mint chocolate chip ice cream, Lime-flavored gelatin, Lime-flavored drink powder, Lime-flavored punch, Lime-flavored sports drink, Lime zest, Limeade.

For green garnishes, there are mint leaves, lime slices and twists of lime zest, slices of kiwi, green olives, slices of cucumber, celery stalks, or even ice cubes made from green punch!

Ireland On Parade

Ireland on Parade, the celebration of the music and dance of Ireland, returns from Chicago Gaelic Park the Irish Cultural Center located at 6119 W. 147th St., Oak Forest.

Master of Ceremonies, Martin Fahey will host the 40th anniversary of Ireland on Parade. Ireland on Parade began in 1967 at Ford City and after 11 years moved to the Glendora House where it stayed for 13 seasons before moving to Gaelic Park. Gaelic Park is proud to have hosted Ireland on Parade, now a multi-generational tradition, for 15 years. Also known as "Irish Week," Ireland on Parade is part of the 10-day celebrations at Gaelic Park in honor of Ireland's patron saint, Patrick. Participating in Ireland on Parade this year are The Jerry O'Loughlin School of Irish Dancing, The Irish Music School of Chicago and The Katie Hughes School of Irish Dancing on Thursday, March 8th, the Foy School of Irish Dancing and the Lavin Cassidy School of Irish Dancing on Friday, March 9th, the McNamara School of Irish Dancing and the Mulhearn School of Irish Dancing on Tuesday, March 13th, The Webber School of Irish Dancing and The Mullane Academy of Irish Dancing on Wednesday, March 14th, the World Academy of Irish Dancing, The Irish Music School of Chicago and The Blackbird Academy of Irish Dancing on Thursday, March 15th and The Eilish Sullivan School of Irish Dancing and The Cross Keys School of Irish Dancing on Friday, March 16th. Doors open each evening at 5:30 p.m. with the first shows beginning at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Delicious, hot food is also available for purchase each evening beginning at 5:30 p.m.

In addition, each night of Ireland on Parade, will include exhibitions of Ceili dancing and Set dancing. Music will be provided by the Irish Musicians Association, an organization which consists of local artists who are dedicated to the perpetuation of traditional Irish music. Finally, Sean O'Donnell will provide dance music each night from 8 to 10 p.m. For further information call Gaelic Park at (708) 687-9323 or visit www.chicagogaelpark.org.

Ravaged Potato Crops

The blight in the 1840s which ravaged the potato crop in Ireland, like the potato itself, was an American import. The potato had been brought to Ireland by Sir Walter Raleigh from one of his voyages to the New World. Raleigh is also credited with the introduction of tobacco to the European continent.

St. Patrick's Day Customs And Traditions

The most common traditions on St. Patrick's Day include wearing green, enjoying Irish folk music and food, and by consuming large quantities of Irish beer (sometimes dyed green); such as Murphys, Smithwicks, Harp or Guinness or other Irish liquors such as Irish whiskey, Irish Coffee or Baileys Irish Cream.

In the United States, St. Patrick's Day would not be St. Patrick's Day unless the Chicago River is dyed green. This tradition began in 1962, when Chicago pollution-control workers used green dye to trace illegal sewage discharges in the river. The workers thought it might be a fun way to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, so they released 100 pounds of green vegetable dye into the river -- enough to keep it green for a week! The idea was a hit, and continues to this day. However, only 40 pounds of dye are used today to minimize environmental damage.

Since the 1990s, Irish taoisigh (prime ministers) have attended special functions either on St. Patrick's Day or a day or two earlier, in the White House, where they present shamrock to the President of the United States. A similar presentation is made to the Speaker of the House. Originally only representatives of the Republic of Ireland attended, but since the mid-1990's all major Irish political parties from north and south are invited, with the attendance including the representatives of the Irish government, the Ulster Unionists, the Social Democratic and Labour Party, Sinn Féin and others.

In recent years it is common for the entire Irish Government to be abroad representing the country in various parts of the world. In 2003, the President of Ireland celebrated the holiday in Sydney, the Taoiseach (Prime Minister) was in Washington, while other Irish government members attended ceremonies in New York, Boston, San Francisco, San Jose, Savannah, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Diego, New Zealand, Hong Kong, South Africa, Korea, Japan and Brazil.

In Britain, the late Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother used to present bowls of shamrock specially flown over from Ireland to members of the Irish Guards, a regiment in the British Army made up of Irish people from both Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Traditional Irish Soda Bread

This bread is popular throughout Ireland. Because it is easily and quickly made it is often baked fresh for tea or even breakfast. At home we used to call the loaf made with white flour soda bread, while that made with wholemeal was wheaten bread. In other parts of the country wheaten bread is referred to as brown soda or, confusingly, soda bread!

1lb/ 1/2kg/ 4 cups plain flour
1 tsp salt
1 tsp baking soda
1 tsp sugar (optional)
1pt/ 1/2 l/ 2 cups buttermilk or sour milk

Sieve the dry ingredients into a large bowl. Scoop up handfuls and allow to drop back into the bowl to aerate the mixture. Add enough buttermilk to make a soft dough. Now work quickly as the buttermilk and soda are already reacting. Knead the dough lightly - too much handling will toughen it, while too little means it won't rise properly.

Form a round loaf about as thick as your fist. Place it on a lightly-floured baking sheet and cut a cross in the top with a floured knife. Put at once to bake near the top of a pre-heated oven, gas mark 8, 450°F, 230°C, for 30-45 minutes. When baked, the loaf will sound hollow when tapped on the bottom with your knuckles. Wrap immediately in a clean tea-towel to stop the crust hardening too much.

Wheaten bread or brown soda is made in exactly the same way but with wholemeal flour replacing all or some of the white flour; this mixture will probably require less buttermilk. Another variation is to add 1/2 cup of sultanas to the white bread - this loaf is known as Spotted Dick. <http://www.appletree.ie/cat/books/166x.htm>.

A Relaxing Game For The Irish Sportsman

Hurling is the great Irish national sport. After a hard day of raiding cattle and sword play back in the Iron Age, the lads relaxed by playing a game. The great national epic, the Táin, celebrates the skill of the ancient heroes of Ulster in battle and hurling.

In the late 1800's a national revival of the Irish language and culture gathered force. The Gaelic Athletic Association was formed in 1884 to promote both, and ever since the G.A.A. has administered the game and promoted Irish identity.

Television would have loved traditional hurling. The players, each armed with a three to four foot ash stick, would attempt to hit and hurl a ball from one village toward the distant goal in the next village. Over ditches, through hedges, around hillsides and forests, the hurlers would whack the ball and catch it on the flat rounded end of the hurley stick. Since the fellows of the opposing village would be attempting to move the ball in the opposite direction, it is not beyond the realm of imagining that hurley sticks might be used for more than just batting the ball.

The game revived in 1884 is much more civil. On a standard sized, grass playing pitch, two teams of 15 players attempt to pass and hit the ball over or through a crossbar at opposite ends of the field. The game is recognized as one of the world's fastest sports.

Gaelic Football is played with almost the same rules, but no stick is used. It is like soccer with limited use of hands allowed.

Hurling and Gaelic football are amateur games in that the players do not earn a living from playing. A country wide system of local clubs maintains clubhouses and playing fields and acts as one of the key social centers for community activities (the others are the church, parish halls, and pubs). Dedicated fund raising and local involvement has resulted in the building of some very fine stadiums. The All Ireland Finals in Dublin every year bring in crowds of 80,000 to Croke Park, the nation's largest sports stadium. The G.A.A. has a Web site, which contains the game rules and some history.

Soccer is the other big sport, with its own set of local clubs, amateur players, and volunteer referees. The best Irish players go abroad to make a living, and England and the continent get the benefit. However, national teams which compete for the World Cup are made up of players from dozens of different local and overseas teams who all claim Irish ancestry. Soccer exploded into popularity when English coach Jack Charlton convinced a number of great British players whose grandparents were Irish that they stood a better chance of gaining exposure and World Cup play if they signed up with the Irish team. This surprise team, some of whom had never even visited Ireland, swept into the finals of the World Cup. The country exploded with excitement and soccer delirium. While the present team has not ascended the same heights, soccer (or football as everyone in the world except America calls it) remains a major and important sport in Ireland.

League of Ireland is the semipro level. Players would expect to make at least 150 Euro per game. The best players in the country would make as much as 800 or 1,000 per game. These negotiations for salary are individual and never released. Maybe there are people making more, but this is doubtful.

So, in Ireland, it truly is semi-pro. There couldn't be more than a handful of players able to make a living wage from the sums paid.

League of Ireland top teams would be - In Dublin - Shelbourne, St. Pat's Athletic, Bohemians, Shamrock Rovers; Outside Dublin - Cork City, Galway, Kilkenny, Athlone Town, and then a revolving cast of one or two teams who sometimes break into the League for a couple of years.

Teams move up a level when they win their own Premier Division. They then get to play against the lowest team(s) in the next higher league. If they can beat them, then they move up.

The season is winter - from September 1st to the end of May. Rain or shine, snow or muck, play goes ahead. Conditions will be a lot more wet and cold than anyone not Irish will be used to. As well, the game is much more physical than in America. The grounding of all athletes in Ireland is the GAA, and all native Irish games involve tackling. That tends to carry over into the soccer. In fact, apparently, the lower the league, the more physical the game. Without the finesse which the semi-pros are capable of, the locals revert to their early training.

The <http://www.fai.ie> Football Association of Ireland - the FAI - is the umbrella organization for all levels of soccer. One of these years the government will finish an overhaul of the Lansdowne Road stadium in Dublin and there will finally be a suitably large home for international games. The GAA resolutely refuses to share its vast and beautiful stadium at Croke Park for playing any non-Irish sports.

Equestrian activities, particularly show jumping and horse racing, are another key sport. Ireland has the best grass on the planet, and consequently some of the best horse flesh on the globe. Every town has its equestrian centers, and a goodly percentage of farms house a few horses as well as the more mundane cows and sheep. Betting shops, called bookmakers, are all over the place. Traditional fox hunts are still commonplace and in the depths of winter when the major tracks shut down, a circuit of point-to-point races travels from town to town. Irish horse racing, like British, involves lots of jumps and miles of running. A typical race might last 10 or more minutes. Get out on a freezing January day and watch the horses splash through the slop and you'll know what it feels like to be a real Irish person: wet, cold, fortified with drink and lots of companionable talk, and surprisingly happy.

Golf. There are over 300 golf courses scattered everywhere in Ireland. Each attracts a membership of many hundreds, and visitors are usually welcome to play a few rounds during the warmer months. The standard of greens and fairway maintenance is extremely high and most of the courses earn the coveted "Championship" designation. The major Irish tournament on the international circuit is the Murphy's Irish Open, which attracts thousands of enthusiasts to watch the pros do their thing.

Rugby. Ireland enthusiastically supports amateur rugby, and international play with the other great rugby superpowers - notably South Africa and New Zealand - is followed by large numbers of Irish people. There is again a system of amateur clubs, but these are centered on a few counties such as Kerry and Dublin. For the most part, Rugby is a telly sport, but an exciting and bone crunching one.

Motor rally hillwalking and cycling are the other common sports. Every town in Ireland has local clubs involved in these sports. In early July 1998, the Tour De France, the second largest sporting event in the world after the Olympics, began in Ireland. In three days the bicycle racers covered hundreds of miles and some very scenic routes between Dublin and Cork.

In sum, there's plenty for the sports minded to enjoy in Ireland. And Satellite TV and the Web make it possible to keep tabs on some favorite overseas team.

4-Leaf Clovers Can't Be Irish "Shamrocks"

The thought of "Irish shamrocks" evokes visions of the green landscape of the Emerald Isle as surely as does St. Patrick's Day itself. But identifying a particular plant as the shamrock is a dubious practice, botanically speaking. If you have your heart set on making such identification, you had better start looking for some 4-leaf clovers, because you'll need lots of luck! But ironically, 4-leaf clovers themselves are quite distinct from Irish shamrocks, for reasons that history makes clear.

The term "shamrock" derives from the Irish word, seamrog, which translates to "little clover." Rather vague, considering that there are many kinds of clovers -- and even more plants that can pass as clovers to the layman. Consequently, in St. Patrick's Day celebrations a number of plants serve as Irish shamrocks. But there is no "real McCoy" that can claim to be the authoritative shamrock. Even among the denizens of Ireland itself, there is no consensus that duhs one particular plant as the true Irish shamrocks, as Tippiwicket Cottage reports in a 1988 survey concerning shamrocks. The survey conducted at the National Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin, Dublin, revealed that when the Irish wear the "shamrock," it can be any one of four plants. Three of the plants are clovers, while the fourth is a clover-like plant known as "medick." All four are in the Pea family:

Various members of the Wood Sorrel family (such as Oxalis acetosella) are also sold as shamrocks for St. Patrick's Day. These clover lookalikes are more easily cultivated as houseplants than is real clover, making them popular for interior decorating during St. Patrick's Day celebrations. But the wood sorrels are not even related to the four plants listed above. One would be quite justified at this point in asking, "What's the story here, how can such a diverse group of plants all be considered Irish shamrocks?" And there is indeed a story that accounts for the confusion.

What medick, the wood sorrels and the true clovers all have in common is a trifoliate leaf structure, i.e., a compound leaf with three leaflets. The number 3, of course, is significant in the Christian religion because of the doctrine of the Trinity. Irish legend has it that the missionary Saint Patrick demonstrated the principle behind the Trinity using a shamrock, pointing to its three leaflets united by a common stalk. But there is no way of determining with certainty the exact plant referred to in the legend. This much we can say about Irish shamrocks, however. By definition, for a clover to represent the Trinity, it would have to bear 3 (and only 3) leaves. So for all the good luck they allegedly bring, 4-leaf clovers technically can't be considered shamrocks (not in the sense that St. Patrick made the latter famous, at least).

But the foregoing does explain the ease with which multiple "shamrock" representatives are accepted. A candidate's trifoliate leaf structure can override its family history, including geographical anomalies. For instance, some of the wood sorrels widely used in the U.S. as Irish shamrocks are of South American or Central American heritage, which hardly conjures up images of the grassy slopes of the Irish countryside!

Dyeing Of The River

A modern day miracle occurs each year as part of the St. Patrick's Day Parade celebration when the Chicago River turns an incredible shade of Irish green. This spectacular transformation ranks right up there with the parting of the sea by Moses and the Pyramids of Egypt.

For over 40 years the Chicago River turns green for the St. Patrick's Day Parade celebration. One would ask how this is different from the rest of the year when the river is always a murky shade of green. The difference is both significant and breathtaking because the color green is identical to the greens of Ireland from where it got its name The Emerald Isle.

In 1961, Stephen Bailey was approached by a plumber who was wearing some white coveralls; they knew this only because they could see some of the original color. These coveralls had been mostly stained or dyed a perfect shade of green, an Irish green to better describe it. It was when Stephen Bailey asked how the coveralls got this way, that they discovered that the dye used to detect leaks into the river turned green, not just any color green, but the perfect color green.

Today, this miracle belongs to Mike Butler and his crew, which he claims to always have a little help from a leprechaun who seems to just appear at this time each year.

If you were watching this for the first time you would think this is a mistake or a bad joke. You see the dye is orange and its initial color on the surface of the river is orange and you would think to yourself what heathen would do something like this. After a moment or two you then see the true color magically appear.

Two miracles appear that day, the river turns a perfect shade of green, something that many other cities have tried but have not been successful at doing, and the second miracle by starting with the color orange giving the impression that the river will be orange only to convert the river to that true Irish green. We believe that is where the leprechaun comes in.

As the late Stephen Bailey has said, the road from Chicago to Ireland is marked in green. From the Chicago River to the Illinois River, then to the Mississippi, up the Gulf Stream and across the Atlantic you can see the beautiful green enter the Irish Sea, clearly marking the way from Chicago to Ireland.

South Side Irish Sunday

On South Side Irish Sunday, March 11th, a full day of activities is planned at Chicago Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest beginning with the Monthly Mass and Breakfast at 9 a.m., followed by a delicious Irish breakfast. The traditional Irish breakfast includes bacon, sausage, soda bread, and black pudding. The cost is $6.

Doors will re-open at 1:30 p.m. and the entire facility of Gaelic Park will be alive with activity. Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for kids 12 and under, and includes all of the entertainment in the Emerald Room, Tara Room, Celtic Room and the Carraig Irish Pub.

Entertaining in the Emerald Room is The Larkin & Moran Brothers at 1:30 p.m.; Arranmore at 5:15 p.m.; the Dennehy School of Irish Dance at 7 p.m. and Siachain at 8 p.m. In the Tara Room is Kennedy's Kitchen at 1:30 p.m. and Larry Nugent and Martin Doyle at 5:45 p.m. In the Carraig Pub Gerard Haughey will perform at 1:30 p.m. and Mulligan Stew at 6:30 p.m. Lastly, in the Celtic Room, children's entertainment is featured beginning at 2 p.m.

A delicious hot food buffet which will include corned beef and cabbage dinner, shepherds pie, fish & chips, and much more, will be available for purchase starting at 2 p.m.

The Stage Irishman

The stage Irishman is said to be a cliché of fiction, but Ireland is full of sly Barry Fitzgeralds and crisp, swaggering James Cagneys, and every neighborhood has its Brendan Behan, eager to confide a few thousand choice words that just occurred to him. The Irish fondle a word and rub it and polish it in a sentence. "In these beautiful mountains, heaven is a foot and a half above the height of a man," a Kerrywoman says. A priest watches an elderly and ailing parishioner hobbling weakly from the church and says, "He's walking slow but he's going fast." An old man in a crowded pub holds up a pint glass of Guinness and says, "If this be a ghost that I see here in my hand before me. I hope it reappears again soon." Prichett, in his essay on the Irish character, tells of seeing a huge political sign, "Vote for Duffey," on a wall near Dublin and next to it, added by the opposition in letters running for more than a hundred yards, "And Ireland's dead will rise and curse you."

Two strangers carry on a conversation in a hotel dining room with a white-haired, red-faced Irishman seated alone at a nearby table. When they leave, one says that it was a pleasure to talk with him.

"I would say the same to you, sir," the elderly Irishman replies, "but it would sound repetitive."

More Irish Proverbs

Irish proverbs have been adopted by virtually every ethnic group in the United States. A brief listing of some of these contributions which have enriched our lives follows:

"Comfort is not known if poverty does not come before it."

"Every invalid is a physician."

"Where the tongue slips, it speaks the truth."

"It's almost as good as bringing good news not to bring bad."

"Keep a thing for seven years and you'll find a use for it."

"A new broom sweeps clean, but the old brush knows all the corners."

"There is pain in prohibition."

"He who is bad at giving lodgings is good at showing the way."

"One person with a plan helps as much as two people can."

"Nearest the heart comes first out."

"What's got badly, goes badly."

"However long the road there comes a turning."

"The devil is good to his own in this world and bad to them in the next."

"While the cat is out the mouse will dance."

"The thing that often occurs is never much appreciated."

"A blessing does not fill the belly."

"Always touch a new-born baby, or when it grows up it will lift its hand against you."

"The worst, most damaging witness is a former friend."

"A constant beggar gets a constant refusal."

"A dimple in the chin, a devil within."

"He who can follow his own will is a king."

"It's the first drop that destroyed me; there's no harm at all in the last."

"Neither make nor break a custom."

"Beauty won't make the pot boil."

"A little help is better than a deal of pity."

Quoted in Patricia Houghton, A World of Proverbs (Poole, Dorset: Blandford Press, 1981); Mary M. Delaney, Of Irish Ways (New York: Barnes & Noble, 1973); The Irishman, San Francisco, October 1985; Sean Gaffney & Seamus

Irish Dog Show

The Irish distaste for drinking in the quiet of the home used to make the annual St. Patrick's Day dog show in Dublin one of the year's most popular sporting events. Until the law was changed a few years ago, pubs were closed on St. Patrick's Day, a holy day in Ireland, but one bar at the dog show was allowed to stay open during that event. Consequently, the show was stormed by crowds of non-dog lovers, from all over Dublin. One year Brendan Behan, fighting the crush around the bar, stepped on the paw of a terrier on its way to the judging circle. The burly dramatist glared at the contestant's owner and said, "Now isn't this a silly place to bring a dog?"

Some Anecdotes About Irish Sportsmen

Anecdotes about Irish sportsmen from Henry D. Spalding's 1978 Encyclopedia of Irish Folklore and Humor, The Lilt of the Irish, including the following:

Joc McNulty, Cultural Attache' of the Irish Republic in Washington, D.C., tells about the first time he took his wife on a hunting trip in the Maine woods. They were in good rabbit territory, and other hunters were about, so McNulty cautioned his wife about the necessity of extreme care when firing her rifle. He and his missus were separated by some twenty yards or so when he heard a shot. Running to his wife's side, he found her smiling broadly and pointing to the bushes.

"I must have hit something, she announced triumphantly, 'Just listen to that language!'"

Years ago, Jimmy Dykes, the famous baseball player and manager, enjoyed telling this story on himself. When he first joined the A's back in 1918, he struck out four times in his first game. On his next turn, Connie Mack used a pinch hitter, Jimmy sulked on the bench, but the understanding Connie soothed him. "I suppose you know why I took you out," said Mack. "Why?" asked Jimmy, in a harsh voice. "Because the American League record for striking out is five times in one game," explained Mack, "and I didn't want you to tie it in your very first big league game!"

"Pop" Moriarty, football coach at a small Catholic college in the hinterlands of Minnesota, had seen his charges trampled eight Saturday afternoons in a row, the last time by a humiliating score of 55 to 0. He called them to a meeting on the following Monday. "Next week, we'll be having our last game of the season," he began bitterly. "But, we might as well forget all the trick plays I tried to teach you dimwits. We're going back to basics. Now, for lesson number one: this object I am holding in my hand is called a football. Do you understand that? I'll spell it for you: f-o-o-t-b-a-l..." He was interrupted by an urgent cry from the back row: "Hey Pop, not so fast!"

Irish Born Authors Named Nobel Laureates

The Nobel Prize for Literature was first awarded in 1901 and in the 96 years since, six native Irish or men of Irish heritage have been selected as Nobel Laureates... a remarkable achievement for a nation the size of Ireland. Those named Nobel Laureates were Irish born William Butler Yeats (1923), George Bernard Shaw (1925), Samuel Beckett (1969), Australian native Patrick White (1973) and Seamus Heaney (1995).

Many other Irish authors were considered for the prize and a number of Irish writers may have been slighted by the nominating committee. These include James Joyce, Brendan Behan, Mary Lavin, Frank O'Connor, Sean O'Faolain, Liam O'Flaherty, and William Trevor. American Irish writers who were potential laureates include John O'Hara, Flannery O'Connor, James T. Farrell and others of note.

Local libraries, including the Beverly, Mt. Greenwood and Walker Branches of the Chicago Public Library, and the Evergreen Park Public Library, have many of the above authors works in the stacks, as well as a long list of other Irish and Irish American writers of note. Check with your neighborhood library for biography, fiction, non-fiction and poetry by the Irish.

The Blarney Stone

The Blarney Stone is a stone set in the wall of the Blarney Castle tower in the Irish village of Blarney. Kissing the stone is supposed to bring the kisser the gift of persuasive eloquence (blarney). The castle was built in 1446 by Cormac Laidhiv McCarthy (Lord of Muskerry) -- its walls are 18 feet thick (necessary to thwart attacks by Cromwellians and William III's troops). Thousands of tourists a year still visit the castle.

The origins of the Blarney Stone's magical properties aren't clear, but one legend says that an old woman cast a spell on the stone to reward a king who had saved her from drowning. Kissing the stone while under the spell gave the king the ability to speak sweetly and convincingly.

It's tough to reach the stone -- it's between the main castle wall and the parapet. Kissers have to lie on their back and bend backward (and downward), holding iron bars for support.

Chicago St. Pat's Day Parade

The Chicago St. Patrick's Day Parade begins at 12:00 noon, Saturday March 17th, which falls on Saint Patrick's Day this year! The parade has been held the Saturday before the actual calendar date of Saint Patrick's Day. This allows families to participate in the festivities without having to remove their children from school. We know this causes confusion and problems for those of you visiting our city, specifically for this grand holiday. In 2007, Saint Patrick's Day falls on a Saturday, allowing us to celebrate on the actual date.

The parade starts at Balbo and Columbus. The parade units will proceed north on Columbus Drive and the viewing stand will be located in front of Buckingham Fountain.

Dyeing the Chicago River is scheduled for 10:45, Saturday March 17th and can be best viewed from the upper level bridges at Michigan Ave or Columbus Drive.

Spaulding Reports Facts On Irishman

The following 'facts' about an Irishman, reported by Henry D. Spaulding, were made by Jim Murray, a sportswriter for the Los Angeles Times in 1976.

"It will come as a great surprise to all of you - to say nothing of Saint Patrick, I am, sure - but tomorrow night, on the natal day of all Irishmen, I am to be honored by the Masquers Club of Hollywood as (get this!) 'Irish Man of the Year.'"

I can understand their admiration. Being Irish and not making a muck of things by my age calls for a testimonial of some kind, an achievement kind of like overcoming a clubfoot.

They'll be needing to know a few things about the Irish if they want to keep from making fools of themselves. An Irishman is a guy who:

- May not be sure there's a God, but is damn sure of the infallibility of the Pope.
- Won't eat meat on Friday, but will drink gin for breakfast.
- Believes everything he can't see, and nothing he can.
- To paraphrase Cleveland Amory, is someone who's very good at weekends, but not very good in the middle of the week.
- Is against abortion, but in favor of hanging (or vice versa).
- Has such great respect for the truth, he only uses it in emergencies.
- Is irrational in important things but a tower of strength in the trivial.
- Get married for life, but not necessarily for love.
- Can argue either side of a question, often at the same time.
- Sees things not as they are, but as they never will be.
- Believes in leprechauns and banshees and considers anyone who doesn't to be a heathen.
- Can lick any man in the house he is sole occupant of.
- Cries at sad movies, but cheers in battle.
- Considers funerals a festivity, but weddings sad events to be put off as long as possible, preferably forever.
- Says he hates the English, but reserves his greatest cruelty for his countrymen.
- Is not afraid of dying - in fact, he might prefer it.
- Gets more Irish the farther he gets from Ireland.
- Believes that God is Irish, or, at least, Catholic.
- Believes in civil rights, but not in his neighborhood.
- Is against corruption, unless it's a Democrat.
- Loves religion for its own sake, but also because it makes it so damnably inconvenient for his neighbors.
- Considers a bore to be someone who keeps constantly interrupting.
- Scorns money, but worships those who have it.
- Considers any Irishman who achieves success to be a traitor.

"It grieves me they had to settle for a mere sportswriter, but that's what's happened to the ancestral land of poets, saints and scholars. They've all become harbor commissioners. You see, you usually have to get an Irish author young. Before he dies of the drink, that is. If an Irishman says he's a writer, give him a sobriety test. If he flunks, he's a writer."

Brother Rice Salutes Chicago's South Side Irish

Irish Symbols

Shamrocks

According to Christian legend, St. Patrick used the three-leafed clover to illustrate the doctrine of the Trinity to his pagan audience in Ireland. However, this story did not appear until more than 1,000 years after St. Patrick's death.

In ancient Ireland, the Celtic people revered the shamrock as a sacred plant because it symbolized the rebirth of spring. By the 17th century, when the English began to seize Irish land and suppress Irish language and religion, the shamrock became a symbol of Irish nationalism.

Leprechauns

The diminutive creatures we know as leprechauns were known in ancient Irish as "lobaircin," meaning "small-bodied fellow." Belief in leprechauns probably stems from Celtic belief in fairies, tiny creatures who could use their magical powers for good or evil. In Celtic folklore, the lobaircin were cranky fairies who mended the shoes of the other fairies. They were also mischievous and delighted in trickery, which they used to guard their fabled treasure.

The cheerful friendly version of the leprechaun known to us today is based in large part on Walt Disney's 1959 film Darby O'Gill and the Little People. It quickly evolved into a symbol of St. Patrick's Day and Ireland in general.

Corned Beef And Cabbage is the traditional meal enjoyed by many on St. Patrick's Day, but only half of it is truly Irish. Cabbage has long been a staple of the Irish diet, but it was traditionally served with Irish bacon, not corned beef. The corned beef was substituted for bacon by Irish immigrants to the Americas around the turn of the century who could not afford the real thing. They learned about the cheaper alternative from their Jewish neighbors.

History Of Wakes

John McCarthy in The Home Book of Irish Humor reports: A considerable slice of Irish social life revolves around those festivities known as 'wakes,' which are held entirely apart from Christian funeral services, and surpass in community interest even the movies or politics. In the wild country of County Donegal, whole villages will participate in a wake. As soon as news of a relative's death reaches members of the clan, they pack supplies of foodstuffs, spirits and stout to last several days, assemble at a convenient meeting place and, in a group, proceed to the cottage of the deceased. There they spend the entire first night in keening. Keening is one of those ancient Irish customs, dating back into pre-Christian times, which has outlived the Christian inun-dation. Crowded around the coffin, the relatives weep and wail weirdly and in perfect unison, and the effect upon listeners is soul-searing. The first time you catch it, even as far off as I did one summer night, you are hard put to reconcile it with any sound you have heard before. It's so primitive, so eerie, so pagan that you almost believe the Druids are hold-ing a ceremony high up in the hills.

The deceased's friends make their calls the next few evenings. All the people in the home village and nearby towns consider themselves friends. As they enter the house, they go directly to the casket, get on their knees and say a few prayers. Immediate members of the family are lined up close to the coffin. Following his prayers, the caller pays his respects to them, then adjourns to a back room, where he settles himself for a night of genuine sociability. The women gather in one room, the men in another.

In Ireland, the mister is still the privileged person. Therefore, in the rooms reserved for men there will be food, whiskey and stout aplenty, batches of new clay pipes and lots of tobacco. After a few kind words about the lamented host of the house, the lads fill their pipes and go to work on the food, spirits and stout. Tongues un-loosen. And the wake is on! Every topic known to mankind is discussed; every personage in Irish public and private life is verbally trotted forth and his reputation literally torn to shreds. Not until the sun comes up does it occur to anyone to stop yarning and go home. Even then, they go reluctantly.

The History Of Irish Dance

The early history of Irish dance reveals a constant shifting of population through migration and invasions. Each of these peoples brought their preferred types of dance and music. There are only vague references to the early history of Irish dancing, but there is evidence that among its first practitioners were the Druids, who danced in religious rituals honoring the oak tree and the sun. Traces of their circular dances survive in the ring dances of today. When the Celts arrived in Ireland from central Europe over two thousand years ago, they brought with them their own folk dances.

Around 400 AD, after the conversion to Christianity, the new priests used the pagan style of ornamentation in illuminating their manuscripts, while the peasants retained the same qualities in their music and dancing.

The Anglo-Norman conquest in the twelfth century brought Norman customs and culture to Ireland. The Carol was a popular Norman dance in which the leader sang and was surrounded by a circle of dancers who replied with the same song. This Norman dance was performed in conquered Irish towns.

Three principal Irish dances are mentioned often in sixteenth century writing: the Irish Hey, the Rince Fada (long dance) and the Trenchmore. One of the first references to dance is in a letter written by Sir Henry Sydney to Queen Elizabeth I in 1569. "They are very beautiful, magnificently dressed and first class dancers," Sydney wrote of the girls he saw dancing enthusiastic Irish jigs in Galway.

Sydney went on to describe the dance formation, observing the dancers in two straight lines, which suggests they were performing an early version of the long dance.

During the mid-sixteenth century, dances were performed in the great halls of the newly built castles. Some of the dances were adapted by the sixteenth century English invaders and brought to the court of Queen Elizabeth. One of these dances was the Trenchmore, which was an adaptation of an old Irish peasant dance. From this period onward another style of dance called the Hey was popular where female dancers wound in around their partners, in a forerunner of the present day reel.

When royalty arrived in Ireland, they were greeted at the shore by young women performing native dances. When King James landed at Kinsale, County Cork, in 1780, he was welcomed by dancers. Three people stood abreast, each holding ends of a white handkerchief. They advanced to slow music and were followed by dancing couples, each couple holding a handkerchief between them. The tempo of the music increased and the dancers performed a variety of lively figures.

Irish dancing was accompanied by music played on the bagpipes and the harp. In the houses of the Anglo-Irish aristocracy, the master often joined with servants in some of the dances. Dancing was also performed during wakes. The mourners followed each other in a ring around the coffin to bagpipe music.

South Side Irish Parade

This year the Beverly Breast Cancer Walk will be honored as the Grand Marshall of the South Side Irish Parade. The Beverly Breast Cancer Walk began 7 years ago when Carol Moriarty, her sister Nancy Mulcahy, and her good friend Lisa O'Brien decided it was time to make a difference in their own community. They organized the first Beverly Breast Cancer Walk on Mother's Day 2000, by walking with 30 women through their beautiful Beverly neighborhood on Mother's Day morning. Two years later, primarily due to Carol's positive treatment experience at Little Company of Mary Hospital, they decided to fulfill their mission and serve cancer patients in their own community. They began donating 100% of the funds collected to the Integrated Therapy Department (ITD) at Little Company of Mary Hospital's Cancer Center. ITD used the funds to help provide free educational programs, support groups, and services to the community's cancer patients and survivors.

The outpouring of support for the Walk has been overwhelming. It has quickly become a local phenomenon and is a clear testament to the power of perseverance, teamwork, and the belief in one's cause - all due to the tireless volunteer efforts of several determined women, each touched in one way or another by the harrowing effects of breast cancer.

In 2000, the Walk included 30 women and raised $1000. In 2006, the Walk included over 5,500 women, men, and children and generated over $160,000 for the Little Company of Mary Hospital's Cancer Center.

The 8th Annual Beverly Breast Cancer Walk will be held on Mother's Day, May 13, 2007. This year the walk will benefit the newly-created Little Company of Mary Comprehensive Breast Health Center. The goal is to use the funds to purchase a digital mammography machine and also continue to help provide programs and services for cancer patients in the community.

This year there will also be a special honoree; the Beverly Area Planning Association (BAPA) is honored for all the work it has done and will do for the Beverly Area.

Don't Believe Everything You Hear

Interesting St. Patrick's Day trivia are those myths and legends known affectionately as blarney in Ireland. They include: St. Patrick did not drive the snakes out of Ireland. They probably never had snakes on the Emerald Isle in the first place.

"When Irish Eyes are Smiling" isn't a popular Irish ballad. It was composed by an American.

St. Patrick is not the quintessential Irishman. He was born in Wales. In fact, he wasn't even particularly Christian until after his six-year exile in Ireland.

The shamrock isn't a real plant. Rather, the plant is a type of clover that grows in Ireland.

Leprechauns aren't cute little sprites. They're evil, mean-spirited little creatures that perform treacherous deceptions to keep you away from that pot of gold.

The national symbol of Ireland is the Celtic harp, not the shamrock.

Have a Great Parade!

History Of The South Side Irish Parade

This is the story of how the South Side Irish St. Patrick's Parade began. As with many stories told by the Irish, exaggeration is inevitable, however, this story is completely true. The parade was the vision of two best friends, George Hendry and Pat Coakley. Both were raised on the South Side of Chicago, George in the St. Sabina Parish and Pat in the Little Flower parish in the Auburn neighborhood. The two did not meet until their early thirties, when both moved to the Morgan Park community with their young wives. There they became neighbors, best friends and in 1979, co-founders of the South Side Irish Parade.

In the winter of 1979, sitting around the Hendry's kitchen table enjoying a few beers, George and Pat fondly remembered their experiences at the original South Side Irish Parade (aka the Southtown Parade) that was held on 79th Street. That parade moved downtown in 1960. It was at this time, while they were reminiscing, that George and Pat felt the obligation to create "something" for their children and the children of their friends and "green" neighbors. Nearly twenty years had passed, but now the South Side would rise again with a new parade in a new location for a new generation.

So on a rainy Saturday, March 17, 1979, George and Pat, with the help of their wives, Mary and Marianne (Mernie), gathered 17 children from the West Morgan Park community to march in the first South Side Irish St. Pat's Parade. The children were the only marchers: Kevin Norris dressed as St. Patrick; Tim Kelly dressed as a leprechaun; Eileen Hughes was the parade's first and only queen; a few Boy Scouts, including Jack and George Hendry and Pat and Kevin Coakley, carried the American flag; and the parade's original float, a baby buggy covered with a box decorated with shamrocks and the 26 county flags of Ireland, was pushed around the 10900 blocks of Washtenaw and Talman. The children were given the moniker "The Wee Folks of Washtenaw and Talman". The theme of the parade was "Bring Back St. Pat", which was George and Pat's way of saying bring back to the South Side the parade they had cherished as children. Notices of the parade which were placed in mailboxes along the "route" invited neighbors to stand on their porches and wave to the marchers. Immediately following the parade, the children were invited to the Hendry's basement for Kool-aid and Twinkies. Later that evening, the adults continued the party in the Coakley's basement until the "wee" hours.

Others noticed this small gathering and celebration in the community and so in 1980, the parade moved from the sidewalks to the side streets and began at Kennedy Park. Three hundred participants marched past friendly neighbors watching from their front yards and windows. Marchers included families with wagons, children on decorated bicycles, dogs, and a bag piper. The St. Cajetan School's band sat in chairs in front of the Kennedy Park field house and played for the gathering crowd. The parade meandered through the neighborhood and ended at the Beverly Bank parking lot, where Terry McEldowney sang Irish songs for the crowd.

It was hard to believe, but the parade was gaining in popularity and George and Mary and Pat and Mernie decided it was time to take the parade to THE STREET. On Sunday, March 15, 1981 the parade would march down Western Ave. for the first time, where it continues to march today. Then-Mayor Jane Byrne would only provide a permit for the southbound lane of Western from 103rd Street to 115th Street, while live northbound traffic whizzed by in the opposite lane. The Chicago Police were ordered not to provide crowd and traffic control, but parade volunteers and a few crossing guards assumed the responsibilities and the parade marched on safely. The 1981 parade was a parade of "firsts" - traditions that continue today and without which the parade just wouldn't be the parade. This was the year that St. Cajetan Church, the official parish of the parade, would celebrate with a Mass honoring St. Patrick. Following the parade, a party commenced in St. Cajetan's Memorial Hall. It was named the Post-Parade Party, and the parade trilogy and unofficial motto, which referenced the three successive aspects of each Parade Day, was born: "Pray, Parade, and Party". Today, many families in the area celebrate the day by attending a special Parade Mass, then gather along Western Avenue to watch the parade, and finally head home to host parties for family and friends. A number of neighborhood families also use this gathering day as an excuse for an annual family reunion. Another 1981 first for the parade was the use of a Grand Marshall. That year, three neighborhood children, Bess Hendry, Annie Coakley and Sean Crowe, were the parade's first Grand Marshalls. All three were chosen to signify that the parade would be first and foremost a family affair.

With the success of the 1981 parade, it was apparent that George and Pat needed some help. They asked a few friends and local parishioners to get involved, and a committee was formed. Without the help of Fr. Marty O'Donovan, Mike Hayes, Jim Davorén, Bob Rafferty, Paul Poynton, Sean McCarthy, Bill Letz, Jack McNicholas, Dick Norris, Bill

Gainer, Jim Sheridan and Bill Wallace in those earlier years, the parade wouldn't be the success it is today. Currently, there are 26 committee members handling everything from logistics, float entries, sanitation and sponsorship to related events, PR/Media, marshals, bands and merchandising. Today, the South Side Irish Parade is considered the largest neighborhood-based St. Patrick's Day parade outside of Dublin. It grew from 17 children marching around the block 27 years ago to an event that hosts over 15,000 marchers and 250,000+ spectators each year.

Each year after 1981, the official parade route has been from 103rd & Western to 115th & Western, and each year a Grand Marshall is chosen, often a charitable organization that is dedicated to children. Each year since 2004, the parade has also designated another organization as a Special Honoree, thus enabling the parade to highlight and honor two unique organizations each year.

The South Side Irish St. Patrick's Day Parade was created for Pat and George's children. Children, family, faith and heritage are what this great parade is all about! PMB 452 • 3400 W. 111th St. • Chicago, IL 60655 • 773-393-8687 southsideirishparade@yahoo.com

St. Patrick Was Sold Into Slavery At Sixteen

His father Calpornius held both civic and clerical offices when Patrick was born to him in the late fourth century (c. A.D. 390). Although the family lived in the village of Bannavem Taberniae, in Roman Britain, Patrick would one day become the most successful Christian missionary in Ireland, its patron saint, and the subject of legends.

Patrick's first encounter with the land to which he would devote his life was an unpleasant one. He was kidnapped at age sixteen, sent to Ireland, and sold into slavery. While Patrick worked there as a shepherd, he developed a deep faith in God. One night, during his sleep, he was sent a vision of how to escape. So much he tells us in his autobiographical Confession.

In it Patrick describes his British youth and his conversion, for, although he was born to Christian parents, he did not consider himself Christian before his captivity. Another purpose of the document was to defend himself to the very Church that had sent him to Ireland to convert his former captors. Years before Patrick wrote his Confession, he wrote an angry Letter to Coroticus, the British King of Alclud (later called Strathclyde), in which he condemns him and his soldiers as compatriots of the demons, because they had captured and slaughtered many of the Irish people Bishop Patrick had just baptized. Those they didn't kill would be sold to "heathen" Picts and Scots. Although personal, emotional, religious, and biographical, these two pieces and Gildas' Bandonius' Concerning the Ruin of Britain (De Excidio Britanniae) provide the main historical sources for fifth century Britain.

Unlike the work of the same name by the theologian, Augustine, Patrick's Confession is short, with few statements of religious doctrine. Upon Patrick's escape from his approximately six years of slavery, he went back to Britain, and then to Gaul where he studied under St. Germain, bishop of Auxerre, for twelve years before returning again to Britain. There he felt a calling to return as a missionary to Ireland. He stayed in Ireland for another thirty years, converting, baptizing, and setting up monasteries.

Irish Proverbs Throughout The Ages

Most Irishmen are born philosophers. Intrigued with life, the Irish love to come up with reasons why things happen as they do. Also in their philosophy is a strong tinge of fatalism - what occurred was bound to occur regardless of what one may have done in advance to avoid it.

Coupled with this ingrained philosophical attitude, the Irish have a natural picturesque style of saying simple things. Out of these colorful Celtic sayings down through the years, have come not a few pertinent proverbs such as:

You'd be a good messenger to send for death (said of a slow person).

Let him cool in the skin he warmed in.

'Tis a good story that fills the belly.

The man that's up is toasted,

The man that's down is trampled on.

He comes like the bad weather (i.e., uninvited).

'Tis the fool has luck.

He that loses the game, let him talk away.

Falling is easier than rising.

A bad wife takes advice from every man but her own husband.

Never take a wife who has no faults.

Big head and little sense.

Sweet is wine, bitter its payment.

A closed hand gets but a shut fist.

It is not all big men that reap the harvest.

Not worried till married.

Three without rule - a wife, a pig, and a mule.

Better a drop of whiskey than a blow of a stick.

The four drinks - the drink of thirst, the drink without thirst, the drink for fear of thirst, and the drink at the door.

All the world would not make a racehorse of a jackass.

Death is the poor man's doctor.

There's no good crying when the funeral is gone.

A hen carried far is heavy.

A crow thinks its own young white.

Have your own will, like the women have.

An old cat does not burn himself.

A candle does not give light till lit.

Don't praise your son-in-law till the year's out.

Better be idle than working for nothing.

Do not show your teeth when you cannot give a bite.

Trust him as far as you can throw a cow by the tail.

Where there's women there's talk, and where there's geese there's cackling.

More beard than brains, as the fox said of the goat.

An empty house is better than a bad tenant.

He knows as much about it as a dog knows of his father.

He'd say anything but his prayers.

A vessel will only hold the full of it.

An empty vessel makes most sound.

Forgetting one's debts does not pay them.

Origin Of Irish Coffee

Irish Coffee was invented either in the Shannon Airport bar in Western Ireland, or at the Buena Vista Café, San Francisco. The weight of evidence lies with Shannon.

The story is that on St. Patrick's Day 1946 a bartender, coming to work at the airport after observing the hallowed eve, poured a shot of whiskey into his coffee to ease his post-operative condition. He liked it. He tried it on some of his customers. They liked it...And so on.

Seven years later, Stanley Delaplane, travel writer and columnist with the San Francisco Chronicle, became one of those customers. When he got home he gave the recipe to an accommodating barkeep at the Buena Vista. The Buena Vista started promoting the drink, so successfully that pride and the mists of time wiped out the memory of Delaplane's gift. At any rate, the 'B.V.' now claims sole authorship and at last report was selling an Irish Coffee set, stemmed glasses, a recipe and San Francisco's version of the Irish Coffee Story, as well as a rather inferior Irish Coffee.

The ingredients for Irish Coffee: boiling water; 5 ounces of hot, strong coffee made from fresh ground beans with a drip filter, preferably with untreated spring water; 1 teaspoon brown sugar; 1 1/2 ounces Irish whiskey; softly whipped cream. Absolutely nothing else. The proper vessel is a clear stemmed glass of eight-ounce capacity. One with a handle is preferable; it makes holding the hot glass easier and eliminates unsightly smudges.

Put a spoon in the glass to keep it from cracking and carefully fill it halfway with boiling water. Remove the spoon and pour out the water. Quickly pour in the coffee, the fresher and hotter the better. Next the brown sugar. While white sugar was in the earliest Irish Coffees, it has been found that brown sugar better augments the bur-nished, boggy flavor of good Irish barleycorn. And now the whiskey, which brings up another argument, however. The question is moot, as all Irish whiskies are now made by Irish Distillers Ltd.

Lastly comes the cream. The Shannon recipe calls for plain, unwhipped cream. This would be all right if we could still find real cream in our markets, the kind that used to pop the cap off the bottle in winter, thick enough to eat with a fork. We can't and so we whip what we have, but lightly. We are looking for a consistency thick enough to float neatly on the coffee, soft enough to let the coffee be quaffed through the cream, thus cooling and enriching the hot brew. This can require experimenting; cream so thick that it floats like a wee iceberg away from the lips when a sip is taken, or rides up into your nose, is one of the commonest flaws in Irish Coffee. You have it just right when the first taste leaves you with a thin, evenly distributed, white mustache.

St. Patrick And The Snakes

Various legends have grown up concerning St. Patrick, the most popular of the Irish saints.

St. Patrick was not well-educated, a fact he attributes to early captivity. Because of this, it was with some reluctance that he was sent as missionary to Ireland, and only after the first missionary, Palladius, had died. Perhaps it's because of his informal schooling in the meadows with his sheep that Patrick came up with the clever analogy between the three leaves of the shamrock and the Holy Trinity. At any rate, this lesson is one explanation for why St. Patrick is associated with a shamrock.

St. Patrick is also credited with driving the snakes out of Ireland. There were probably no snakes in Ireland for him to drive out, and it is very likely that the story was meant to be symbolic.

Since Patrick converted the heathen, the snakes are thought to stand for the pagan beliefs or evil. Where he was buried is a mystery. Among other places, a chapel to St. Patrick at Glastonbury claims he was interred there. A shrine in County Down, Ireland, claims to possess a jawbone of the saint, which is requested for childbirth, epileptic fits, and to avert the evil eye.

While we don't know exactly when he was born or died, this Roman British saint is honored by the Irish, especially in the United States, on March 17 with parades, green beer, cabbage, corned beef, and general revelry. While there is a parade in Dublin as the culmination of a week of festivities, Irish celebrations on St. Patrick's Day itself are predominantly religious.

St. Patrick's Day In Ireland

Many Irish people wear a bunch of shamrock on their lapels or caps on St. Patrick's Day, while children wear tri-colored (green, white and orange) badges. Girls traditionally wore green ribbons in their hair (many still do).

Unlike its American counterpart, St. Patrick's Day in Ireland has primarily been a religious festival. Until the 1970s, pubs were required by law to close on March 17. However, since 1995 the Irish government has sought to make St. Patrick's Day an opportunity to showcase Ireland and Irish culture to the world.

The St. Patrick's Day celebrations in Dublin have thus been extended to a week-long event called St. Patrick's Festival, encompassing a spectacular fireworks display (Skyfest), open-air music, street theater and the traditional parade. Over one million people attended the celebrations in 2004.

The Irish Dance Master

During the eighteenth century, the dancing master appeared in Ireland. He was a wandering dancing teacher who traveled from village to village in a district, teaching dance to peasants. Dancing masters were flamboyant characters that wore bright clothes and carried staffs. Their young pupils did not know the difference between their left and right feet. To overcome this problem, the dancing master would tie straw or hay to his pupils' left or right feet and instruct them to "lift hay foot" or "lift straw foot".

Group dances were developed by the masters to hold the interest of their less gifted pupils and to give them the chance to enjoy dancing. The standard of these dances was very high. Solo dancers were held in high esteem and often doors were taken off hinges and placed on the ground for the soloists to dance on.

Each dancing master had his own district and never encroached on another master's territory. It was not unknown for a dancing master to be kidnapped by the residents of a neighboring parish.

When dancing masters met at fairs, they challenged each other to a public dancing contest that only ended when one of them dropped with fatigue.

Several versions of the same dance were to be found in different parts of Ireland. In this way a rich heritage of Irish dances was assembled and modified over the centuries. Today, jigs, reels, hornpipes, sets, half sets, polkas and step dances are all performed. Solo dancing or step dancing first appeared at the end of the eighteenth century.

The costumes worn by Irish dancers today commemorate the clothing of the past. Each school of dancing has its own distinct dancing costume. Dresses are based on the Irish peasant dress worn two hundred years ago. Most of the dresses are adorned with hand-embroidered Celtic designs, copies of the Tara brooch are often worn on the shoulder. The brooch holds a cape that falls over the back. The clothes worn by men are less embellished but steeped in history- they wear a plain kilt and jacket, with a folded cloak draped from the shoulder. Male and female dancers today wear hornpipe shoes and for reels and jigs soft shoes similar to ballet pumps are worn.

Today there are many organizations promoting Irish dance. The Feis has been an important part of rural cultural life. Children, teenagers and adults compete in separate competitions for Feis titles and prizes. There are group and solo competitions where dancers are graded by age from six to seventeen and then into the senior categories.

There are dancing championships in all four provinces, and winners of these provincial competitions qualify for the All Ireland Championships. The World Championships are held in Dublin at Easter where dancers from England, Ireland, USA, Canada, Australia and New Zealand compete for the World title.

The Irish word céili originally referred to a gathering of neighbors in a house to have an enjoyable time, dancing, playing music and storytelling. It refers to an informal evening of dancing. Céilis are held in large towns and country districts where young and old enjoy together group dances. The céili can be traced back to pre-famine times, when dancing at the crossroads was a popular rural pastime. These dances were usually held on Sunday evenings in summer when young people would gather at the crossroads. The music was often performed by a fiddler seated on a three-legged stool with his upturned hat beside him for a collection. The fiddler began with a reel such as the lively "Silver Tip", but he had to play it several times before the dancers joined in. The young men were reluctant to begin the dance but after some encouragement from the fiddler, the sets of eight filled up the dancing area.

The worldwide success of Riverdance and more recently Lord of the Dance has placed Irish dance on the international stage. Dancing schools in Ireland today are filled with young pupils keen to imitate and learn the dancing styles which brought Jean Butler and Michael Flatley international acclaim.

There are many opportunities to watch and enjoy Irish dancing. It is still a regular part of social functions. Dancing sessions at céilis are usually preceded by a teaching period where novices are shown the initial steps. During the summer months, céilis are held in many Irish towns. Visitors are always welcome to join in and with on the spot, informal instruction, anyone can quickly master the first steps and soon share the Irish enthusiasm for Irish dance.

St. Patrick's Day Traditional Customs

In Irish Gaelic:

Lá Fhéile Pádraig (LAW AY-luh PAW-rihg) = St. Patrick's Day or Beannachtaí na Féile Pádraig oraibh! (BAN-uhkh-tee nuh FAY-luh PAW-rihg O-rihv) = Happy St. Patrick's Day to You All!

Traditional customs for the proper celebration of the day, even though Ireland has tried its best to discard its historic culture in favor of progress, industrialization and American commercialism, but customs are important to give meaning to life and joy to the soul so here they are:

1. Wear an emblem in honor of the saint, a custom which dates from as early as 1681, and the account of Thomas Dinely. Generally a green ribbon the shamrock or a St. Patrick's cross (circle or square of paper decorated with green ribbon and bits of priests vestments by girls and small children; for boys a paper cross in the style of the Celtic illuminations carefully decorated).

2. Go to work and demand the "Patrick's Groat" take leave of your capitalistic master and go to town and spend it all. (very few of the zealous should be found sober at night account (Dinely 1681!)).

3. Men should make a cross of a twig of wild willow and pin it to the thatch inside the house or above the door.

4. You may also wear a harp shaped badge.

5. Wear the "Trifolium repens"-white clover (Identified as such by Caleb Threlkeld in 1727).

6. After church go to the pub to drink the "pota Pádraig"-St. Patrick's pot. Many acts of devotion should be followed by an equal number of acts of copious libation...

7. Say this quaint line when doing so:

Ordain a Statute to be Drunk
And burn Tobacco free as Spunk
And (fat shall never be forgot")
In Usquebah, St. Patrick's Pot
(Farewell 1689)

8. Actually it is doubtful if anyone knows what a shamrock is (Early 20th century-Nathaniel Colgan asked around Ireland and found that it could be-Trifolium repens, (white clover), Folium minus- (leser trefoil), Trifolium pratense (purple clover), Medicago Lupulina (Black Medick) So take your pick!

9. Give treats and gifts to friends and children.

10. Put shamrock which has been worn on the day into the last glass of drink-then toast to the health of all and pick the wet drowned shamrock out of the glass and toss it over the left shoulder.

11. Using a burnt stick make a cross on the sleeve of each member of the household.

12. You have to eat meat and you do not need any special dispensation to do so. Jocelin notes that as early as 1100 AD people ate meat in Lent due to an account of St. Patrick doing so and then being forgiven the meat turning to fish in the boiling water.

13. You must begin your planting soon after St. Patrick's day- (peas are best planted on the day. (Source-Kevin Danaher- The Year in Ireland Mercier Press Cork, 1972).

Shamrocks For Kids

Mercy Home needs you. Help kids this St. Patrick's Day week while having a great time. Please consider helping us distribute Shamrocks for Kids pins at the South Side Irish Parade, the Downtown St. Patrick's Day Parade and at select locations throughout the Loop.

For more information on becoming a volunteer, or call (312) 738-7578.

Mercy Home's annual Shamrocks for Kids campaign increases awareness about the plight of abused and neglected children by reaching out to thousands of individuals in the Chicago Metropolitan area and encouraging them to wear Shamrocks for Kids.

The campaign includes Shamrocks for Kids 'tag days' - putting hundreds of volunteers on the streets of Chicago during the St. Patrick's Day season to collect donations for Shamrocks for Kids pins.

By wearing your shamrock this St. Patrick's Day season, you will be showing thousands of kids that you care and will be helping Mercy Home help more innocent children that are left hurt, homeless and alone.

Happy St.
Patrick's Day

Planning Annual Golf Outing

There may still be snow on the ground, but members of the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce Golf Committee are meeting regularly to plan its annual Golf Outing.

This year's event is scheduled for Wednesday, July 11th at Stony Creek Golf Course, 5850 W. 103rd St. The fee of $100 per person includes 18 holes of golf, lunch, dinner and drinks. Other packages include golf only for $60 per person, or $45 for dinner only. The Chamber again will offer a Miniature golf tournament beginning at 4 p.m. The cost is $60 per person for miniature golf and dinner, or $15 for golf only.

Golf registration begins at 11 a.m., followed by lunch at 11:30 a.m. and a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m. An open bar will begin at 5:30 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner at 6 p.m. Advanced reservations will be taken on a first-come, first-serve basis beginning April 1.

The committee currently is soliciting sponsorships and raffle prize donations. Sponsorships begin at $150 for a hole and go up to $2,500 for the major event sponsorship. Raffle prizes are needed for the Grant Raffle and Special Raffle.

For more information on sponsorships, or to make a donation, contact the Chamber office at (708) 424-8300 or office@oaklawnchamber.com.

Founded in 1946, today the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce consists of more than 325 members. The Chamber of Commerce works to represent and advance the Oak Lawn business community, striving with constant integrity, fairness and cooperation to promote and improve the economic atmosphere, business climate and image of Oak Lawn.

Address SCHIP Funding Immediately

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently joined governors from across the nation in calling on the U.S. Congress to act immediately to address the expected funding shortfall for the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP). Gov. Blagojevich and 12 other governors from around the nation urged Congressional leaders to move quickly to cover the current SCHIP shortfalls and revise outdated funding formulas that punish states like Illinois that have worked aggressively to expand access to healthcare to more citizens. Last month, Gov. Blagojevich sent a letter to Illinois' Congressional Delegation urging them to reauthorize SCHIP and work to bring more SCHIP funding to Illinois.

"SCHIP was created to help states meet the healthcare needs of children that are living just above poverty, and still struggling to get by. In Illinois, we've been extremely successful in using our SCHIP funds to help more than 290,000 children and their working parents get access to healthcare - that's 290,000 people who can now go see a doctor before a sickness turns into an expensive and dangerous medical emergency," said Gov. Blagojevich. "It is time for the U.S. Congress to keep up their end of the bargain to working families across the country. Congress must act now to fully fund SCHIP and to revise the funding formulas to support states like Illinois that are working hard to help every family get the care they need."

Library Employee Service Awards

The Oak Lawn Public Library recently recognized 15 employees for their years of service in five-year increments.

Long-term service awards were given to: Nancy Rende of the Reference Services Dept. for 30 years of employment, and Carol Arndt of the Patron Services and Reference Departments for 20 years.

Employees who have worked at the library for 15 years include: Anne Curran, Patron Services Dept.; Mary Dunneback, Reference Services Librarian; Al Fournier, Building Services Dept.; Janet Goetz, Technical Services Dept.; Linda Olsen, Administration; and Louise Pfeiffer, Periodicals Dept.

Ten-year anniversaries were marked by: Peggy Butcher, Administration; Cindy Kelly, Periodicals Librarian; Jennifer Lechert, Reference Services Dept.; and Harriett O'Malley, Patron Services Dept.

Staff recognized for five years of service were: Dawn Koegel, Patron Services Dept.; Sarah Schroeder, Youth Services Librarian; and Thomas Kochinski, Youth Services Librarian.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

I have read in your newspaper, the Village's Oak Lawn Outlook, etc. since being elected, the Unity Party of Mayor Dave Heilmann has succeeded in saving millions of dollars wasted by the former administration by getting a new insurance carrier, finding brokerage commissions from $150,000 to $20,000, restructured health care plans saving $640,000 over the next two years, reducing costs incurred in expense accounts and travel expenses that were budgeted at $140,000, finding that Waste Management had not paid back the Village the amount due from the recyclables, wasting time and government money by challenging candidates filing to get on the ballot, etc. (however, not a word was said in 2004 by the Unity Party about the mayoral and clerk challenge but perhaps it was because their party candidates were not challenged).

The Republican Unity Party mayor and trustees have been quoted as to saving millions. They also say that they have a balanced budget in 2007. The budget was unanimously approved by the Democratic Coalition and Republican Unity Party for 2007 in December of 2006 even though there is a budget deficit of $3.7 million as reported in the (Reporter, Dec. 14, 2006) newspaper. Also reported is that the shortfall of $3.7 million is being taken out of existing village funds but the fund is not identified. Could that be the fund that taxes vehicle gas at 3 cents a gallon and rolled back to 2 cents for the Village while the gas station owners get the other 1 cent for bookkeeping involved? We are still paying 3 cents extra on every gallon of gas that we buy for our vehicles as the tax was not eliminated, just rolled back. I think that 3-cent tax was to pay for street work - does that mean that fund is being used for other purposes than the original idea of street repair? Further, I do believe we get additional funds from the national and/or state government for street/road work. I'm not suggesting that funds are being co-mingled, however, it would help to have some clarity on this issue.

However, with that said, the Unity Party has announced that they have saved millions of dollars, which in my humble view should cover any deficit for 2007. But that is not the case as they have budgeted for an additional $3.7 million to spend. Our expenditures have gone from $88.1 million in 2006 to $97.6 in 2007 which is an increase in spending of $9.5 million in one year. What are we spending all of that money on? Are we experiencing a better quality of life in the Village because of this spending? Further, the revenue for 2006 was $86.3 million and the revenue for 2007 is projected at $93.9 million. That is an increase of $7.6 million in revenue over last year. They have not raised taxes, but have collected an additional $7.6 million from somewhere. Where did this money come from?

I'm sure that the trustees have a plan and know what they are doing. We, the residents, would like to understand the plan and communication will be improved when the Board of Trustee meetings are televised on the government channel.

Going back, Mayor Heilmann is quoted concerning the millions in waste (Sept. 2005 in the Chicago Tribune), "My God, we're talking about a lot of money," and "I hope we will save money each year as we go forward," Heilmann said. "We're trying to establish good sound numbers so we can go forward with the budget." In the same article the following is stated: "In their report, they and Clerk Jan Quinlan - also newly elected, - wrote that in the past, village officials solved financial woes by passing tax and utility rate increases rather than attempting to cut expenses."

Is history repeating? Is it time to elect independent trustees who are not part of a party? Does party loyalty sometimes take precedence over the residents' interests in making policy? Would independents take a fresh look at things? Could it be better than it is? Just wondering!

The recordings can be heard online or downloaded to an iPod or MP3 player. They also can be accessed using Apple's iTunes Music Store.

Currently, five discussions held since the start of the fall 2006 semester are posted on the library's Web site. The most recent was on Valentine's Day and was entitled Is Love Really All We Need? How Does Society Shape Our Relationships? A panel of Moraine Valley Sociology, Biology, Art History, Literature, and Communications faculty members offered their unique perspectives on the origins of love and relationships. Upcoming events that will be posted include discussions on the war in Iraq and gay/lesbian/transgender issues, and a lecture on Soviet-era gulag camps. A full list of events is available at morainevalley.edu/library/libraryevents.asp.

Girls Scouts Celebrate 95 Years Of Fun

The 95th anniversary year of Girl Scouting kicks off nationally on March 12 when Girl Scouts of the USA CEO Kathy Cloninger hosts a ceremony in New York City and launches a series of nationwide events.

Girl Scouts was founded by Juliette Gordon Low in Savannah, Georgia on March 12, 1912.

The South Cook County Council will host its own celebration with a mall event in the south suburbs on the March 10th. Girl Scouts from Bridgeview, Oak Lawn, Burbank, Chicago Ridge, Worth, Crestwood, Blue Island and Palos Hills will be at Westfield Chicago Ridge Mall at 95th and Ridgeland, from 1 to 5 p.m. Activities will highlight the Girl Scout Movement's tradition of building leadership through action that makes the world a better place.

Mayors across the south suburbs have joined in congratulating Girl Scouts by proclaiming March 11-17 as "Make the World a Better Place Week" in honor of the organization's founding 95 years ago, ongoing opportunities for girls, and continuing value to local communities.

Anniversary events across the country this spring will include: "Girl Scouts Make the World a Better Place Week," March 11-17, featuring good deeds by 3.6 million Girl Scout members around the country; the spring release of a new Girl Scout Research Institute research review on girls and leadership; a sing-along for more than 100,000 Girl Scouts on the National Mall in Washington, D.C. on June 9, with some South Cook County Girl Scouts attending.

Juliette Gordon Low founded Girl Scouting with one troop of 18 girls, and since then more than 50 million girls have built leadership skills through Girl Scouting. Research shows that Girl Scout alumnae now represent 70 percent of women serving in Congress, 64 percent of women listed in "Who's Who in America" and 53 percent of women business owners.

Illustrious alumnae include Sandra Day O'Connor, the first female to sit on the Supreme Court of the United States;

Madeleine Albright, the first female Secretary of State; Eileen Collins, the first woman space shuttle commander; Dr. Drew Gilpin Faust, the first female president of Harvard University; and Katie Couric, the first woman to anchor a network evening newscast.

Among local women of achievement who have Girl Scouting in their background are State Senators Debbie Halvorson and Maggie Crotty.

"The success of Girl Scouting is no accident. When Juliette Gordon Low founded Girl Scouts in 1912, she understood that girls need leadership skills and a supportive environment to develop their potential as capable individuals," said Girl Scouts of South Cook County volunteer president Maureen Jamrock of Dolton.

"We all have Juliette Gordon Low to thank for much of the advancement that has been achieved by girls and women in the past century. Her attitude about what girls and women could achieve was far ahead of her time, and still influences us. Today almost 10,000 Girl Scout members in 49 south suburban communities are proud to take part in the world's best leadership experience for girls."

While many people associate Girl Scouting with camping for fun only, Low wanted girls to experience the beauty and the challenges of the outdoors so they might develop self-reliance and resourcefulness. She encouraged girls to prepare not only for traditional homemaking, but also for future roles as professional women in the arts, sciences, and business, and for active citizenship. One of America's first female aviators, she introduced a Girl Scout aviation badge back in 1916 - four years before women won the right to vote.

Astronomy, crime scene investigation, live theater, healthy living activities, good relationships, hip hop dance and many other diverse topics have been offered to local Girl Scouts recently, and community service by groups and individuals continues to be an essential element of the program.

DeNardo Announces Bid

On Tuesday, March 5th, Robert DeNardo, announced his candidacy for the Oak Lawn Park District Board of Commissioners, promising to bring fiscal accountability to the board.

"Oak Lawn is a great community to live in and getting involved in our community is a way that I can help improve the quality of services residents receive and protect taxpayer dollars," said DeNardo. "In the military, I learned about discipline as well as dedication and I want to use my experience to continue serving the residents of Oak Lawn."

DeNardo will bring the focus of the campaign on protecting taxpayer assets, restoring openness to local government, and continuing quality recreation programs for residents.

The Oak Lawn Park District offers many valuable services and recreational opportunities but it lacks proper oversight of taxpayer assets and dollars, DeNardo said. He cited recent examples of missing funds and undocumented "deals" at the ice arena that used tax dollars to profit private individuals. DeNardo also said as a Commissioner he would end the costly and frequently abused practice of allowing former and current commissioners' lifetime free passes for district facilities and programs. Taxpayer dollars will be better invested in programs or used to pay down park debt. DeNardo noted that "oftentimes Commissioner's and their families use the park's facilities at peak hours when paying residents are trying to use the facilities."

"I view my job as being a steward of public dollars and I will work hard to stop funds from disappearing," DeNardo added. "I believe it is important that residents and commissioners ask questions to ensure that taxpayer dollars are being invested wisely and benefit the whole community."

DeNardo will continue to work with residents to reopen lines of communications and listen to their concerns. Memorial Pool is a perfect example where residents wanted to work with park commissioners to find viable solutions to the problems there but were quickly ignored by the board's 3-2 decision to destroy the pool.

"It is my belief that our government works best when we shed light on the public's affairs," said DeNardo. "Unfortunately resident's ideas and concerns are oftentimes ignored and dismissed by the park district. The role of the park board is to serve the residents, and we need to listen to those we serve."

DeNardo said he will make it a priority to continue quality recreational programs for residents. He will add emphasis to programs that help youth have many recreational options to stay out of trouble and lead productive lives.

"Besides listening to residents and protecting taxpayers, it is important we invest in our parks and programs to make sure residents fully benefit from what the district has to offer," DeNardo said. "As a young person it is important to me that teenagers have ample opportunities to get involved in productive recreational opportunities. I will continue getting feedback from residents and I look forward to making their voice heard on the park board."

Lane Closures

The Illinois Department of Transportation announced that it is starting advance utility work on a reconstruction project that will replace the bridge carrying Cicero (IL Rt. 50) over the North Branch of the Chicago River.

The project's official start date is April 2, but lane closures will be taking effect in the next few days for removal of old underground utilities. Cicero Ave. just north of the Edens Expressway will be reduced to one lane in each direction during the project, which is scheduled for completion at the end of October.

IDOT urges motorists to use alternate routes if possible, including Pulaski or Central avenues.

Drivers are urged to closely watch the signs and beware of construction equipment and workers when passing through the work zone.

The contractor for the $3.4 million project is Illinois Constructors Corp.

Judges Needed For April 17th Election

Cook County Clerk David Orr is looking to recruit hundreds of new election judges to work during the April 17th Consolidated Election.

"It is important that we have a full complement of judges to make sure the election is carried out honestly, fairly and accurately," Orr said. "Having enough judges also makes the day run more smoothly."

Election judges open polling places, certify that voters are registered and qualified to vote, explain election procedures, issue ballots and activate cards for the touch screens, operate election equipment, and transmit votes at the end of the day.

Election judges receive $150 for their work. That includes $100 for working Election Day and $50 for attending a 27-hour training session prior to the election. Judges begin work at 5:15 a.m. and work until the votes are transmitted after polls close at 7 p.m.

To qualify as an election judge, you must be a registered voter and live in Cook County. People interested in serving on Election Day can call (312) 603-0970 to sign up or by completing an online application at www.voterinfonet.com. The completed application can then be faxed to (312) 603-9779 or dropped off at the Clerk's office, 69 W. Washington St., fifth floor, in Chicago.

Oak Lawn Village Board Hears Complaints Regarding

Back Yard Flooding

At a brief Oak Lawn Village Board meeting, the board discussed complaints received from residents concerning back yard flooding. Complaints had been received about the issue and trustees were asked if anything can be done about the flooding. It was stated that there is a fund designed to help the issue, but had not been used as yet. It was also stated that even if sewers were put in, it might only accelerate the problem since sewers would put a strain on the sewer system by allowing too much water to enter too quickly. It was asked that the problem be looked into as the 'rainy' season and flooding were here.

It was also asked if there was something that could be done about the alleys in the village. Trustee Olejniczak asked about funds that were applied for nearly two years ago which were not yet received. These funds were specifically to be used for drainage problems and were coming from the federal government. It was reported that the funds were hung up waiting for definitions on how the funds were to be used by communities.

It was reported that the program to use a collection agency for ambulance bills was working for the village. Fire Chief Folliard reported that he had asked for a read out of a 12 month period that the program was used and found out that nearly $820,000 over the year before was collected. It was stated that Oak Lawn tax payers were exempt from collection. The village only collects insurance payments from residents.

It was reported that a letter had gone out to residents of Crawford Gardens stating that temporary barricades were being constructed. The barricades were going to be up on March 23rd.

The board accepted a grant totaling $9,909 from the federal government which will be used for the summer bicycle patrol units. The bike patrol will be used mainly in the parks but will extend into the residential community gatherings. This year the patrol will also educate the village youth in regards to the dangers of drugs, alcohol and cigarettes.

Voter's registration ends on March 20th for the April 17th election. Early voting for the election begins on March 26th from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays through April 12th and on Saturday, March 31st and Saturday April 7th from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. It was stated that if anyone has a problem getting to the Village Clerk's office to register, call the office and someone will come out to get them registered.

The board also approved a request from police department for a 25 cent raise for the village's crossing guards as well as two requests from the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce to hold a Shop Oak Lawn Sidewalk Sale and a Pet Parade on June 16th in the south parking lot of the village hall.

Crime Alert

There was an attempted "Gypsy Scam" at a home near 107th and Kolmar whereby two men posed as workers and attempted to gain entry into the home. The older homeowner allowed them in but became suspicious and told them to leave, after which she called the police.

Nothing was taken and no one was injured. Area residents, & especially senior citizens, are asked to keep an eye out for this type of activity.

Scholastic Bowl Team Wins Conference

The varsity Scholastic Bowl team from Richards High School recently clinched the championship in the Red Division of the South Suburban Conference, while the frosh/soph team placed second.

Varsity finished its season with a record of 7-2. The Red Division includes Argo, Reavis, Oak Lawn, Evergreen Park, Lemont, and Richards. Senior Ryan McMillin, a commended student in the National Merit Scholarship Corporation competition, led all scorers in the 13-school South Suburban Conference this season.

Coached by social studies teacher Paul Faeh, Scholastic Bowl includes Amjed Affaneh, Sarah Brett, Mike Dvoracek, Elizabeth Hudson, Katie Kennedy, Jasser Khairallah, Stacy March, Ryan McMillin, Amanda McMurrie, Krisnakumar Nair, and Kyle Ryan.

Scholastic Bowl is an academic competition in which teams of students representing different schools answer questions relating to science, math, social sciences and other subjects in a format resembling the game show "Jeopardy." Points are awarded for correct answers. The team accumulating the most points wins a meet.

Happy St. Patrick's Day

Student Loan Relief For Young Lawyers

Bipartisan legislation authored by U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) to create a loan repayment program for attorneys who commit to careers in the criminal justice system was the subject of a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing.

Durbin's bill would establish a student loan repayment program for law school graduates who agree to serve as criminal prosecutors or public defenders. Witnesses at the hearing included two prosecutors from Illinois - Paul A. Logli, the State's Attorney for Winnebago County and the Chairman of the Board of the National District Attorney's Association, and Cook County Assistant State's Attorney Jessica Bergeman.

"Today prosecutor and public defender offices are having serious difficulty hiring and retaining good lawyers because students are leaving law school with mortgage-sized student loan debts. And starting salaries in a prosecutor's or public defender's office are three to four times smaller than starting salaries in private law firms," said Durbin. "When prosecutor and public defender offices cannot attract new lawyers or keep experienced ones, their ability to protect the public is compromised. The federal government has a responsibility to help make public service law an affordable option for talented, experienced lawyers who want to work in the criminal justice system."

Durbin's legislation, the "John R. Justice Prosecutors and Defenders Incentive Act of 2007," is named for the late John R. Justice, former president of the National District Attorney's Association and a champion of efforts to encourage law graduates to work in public service. The bipartisan legislation is co-sponsored by 15 senators including the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT) and the committee's senior Republican, Sen. Arlen Specter (R-PA), and is considered a top priority for criminal prosecutors and defenders.

With the average law graduate carrying a staggering amount of student loan debt - an average of $78,763 for those who attended private schools, and $51,056 for public schools - Durbin's bill would establish a student loan repayment option for full-time state and local prosecutors and state, local and federal public defenders who agree to serve for a minimum of three years. Federal prosecutors are already eligible for loan relief through existing federal programs.

Durbin cited the contrast between the loan burdens carried by today's law school graduates and the entry-level salaries for prosecutors and public defenders as evidence of the need for relief. More than 80% of law students borrow to pay for their law degree, and the amount borrowed by many students exceeds $100,000. Many law graduates also carry unpaid debt from their undergraduate studies. At the same time, the median entry-level salary for state prosecuting attorneys and public defenders is around $45,000.

From an employer's perspective, low salaries and high debt make it extremely difficult to recruit and retain attorney's in prosecutor and public defender offices. The Department of Justice has found that almost one-third of prosecutor's offices reported problems with recruitment and retention of staff attorneys.

Durbin's proposal is modeled after a student loan repayment program currently available to federal employees. Like the federal employee program, attorneys eligible for loan repayment could have up to $10,000 per year of student loan debt repaid. Loan repayments are capped at a maximum of $60,000 per individual.

Durbin's legislation is supported by the National District Attorneys Association, the National Association of Prosecutor Coordinators, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, the American Council of Chief Defenders, the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, the National Juvenile Defender Center, the American Bar Association, and the Conference of Chief Justices.

It is expected that Durbin's bill would be voted on by the full Judiciary Committee in the next two weeks, and if approved, should be sent to the Senate floor for consideration sometime next month.

Preventing Illegal Drug Use

Illinois Department of Human Services (IDHS) Secretary Carol L. Adams, Ph.D. on March 13th urged radio and TV stations to air new public service messages from the Partnership for a Drug-Free Illinois aimed at educating parents on the newest dangers of illegal and prescription drug abuse and what they can do to protect teens. The announcements are being released just a few weeks after two Bartlett High School students overdosed on over the counter medication in hopes that incidents like this can be prevented in the future.

The Partnership is an initiative of Prevention First, the Illinois affiliate for the Partnership for a Drug-Free America. The public service announcements (PSAs) distributed to radio and television stations statewide include messages about prescription and over the counter drug abuse, methamphetamines, heroin, steroids and inhalants. They also provide parents with suggestions for how to talk to their teenagers about drug issues.

The two Bartlett High School students overdosed on cold pills and were treated at a local hospital. The incident was an example of a growing concern over prescription and over-the-counter medicine abuse among young people.

According to statistics compiled by the Partnership for a Drug Free America:

Four of ten high school students have used any substance, alcohol or other drugs, in the past month. Nearly one in five teens (19 percent, or 4.5 million) report abusing prescription medications to get high;

Nearly one-third of teens (31 percent, or 7.3 million) believe there's "nothing wrong" with using RX medicines without a prescription "once in a while";

One in 10 (10 percent, or 2.4 million) report abusing cough medicine to get high.

The campaign, released in both English and Spanish, speaks directly to parents by alerting them that their own homes are easily accessible sources for teens to obtain and abuse these medications. The campaign is comprised of hard-hitting television, newspaper, magazine and radio messages, a comprehensive online component and is supplemented by informational brochures to help parents get the conversation started with their teen. The campaign also includes a multi-faceted public relations effort.

Spring Break Abroad

Students and families set to travel outside the country during spring break, whether scuba diving in the Caribbean, skiing in the Alps or simply sun bathing on the Mexican Riviera, should be prepared in case a medical emergency occurs, according to a health insurance expert.

"Possible difficulties due to differences in health care services in other countries are best resolved if vacationers do just a little pre-planning," said Bill Moeller, president and CEO of UnitedHealthcare of Illinois. "You want to avoid additional problems if an illness strikes or an injury is sustained."

UnitedHealthcare of Illinois offers these tips to international travelers:

Consult with your health insurance provider. Confirm whether your policy applies overseas and if it will cover emergency expenses. Some insurance companies, such as UnitedHealthcare, provide worldwide coverage for emergency care. Other providers require that you purchase supplemental medical coverage.

Bring your insurance identification card and a claim form. If your health insurance policy provides coverage outside the United States, remember to carry both your insurance policy identity card as proof of such insurance and a claim form.

Take a copy of your personal health record. If your health insurer offers personal health records (PHRs), be sure to take a copy with you. A PHR is an online record of an individual's complete and current medical history. If a PHR is unavailable, request a letter from your physician describing any pre-existing medical conditions you have and any prescriptions or other medications you may be taking.

Purchase traveler's insurance. Many travel agents and private companies offer insurance plans that will cover health care expenses incurred overseas, including emergency services such as medical evacuations.

Contact the International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers. IAMAT can provide directions to the nearest U.S. Embassy or locate medical facilities and English-speaking doctors in the areas where you will be traveling. Contact IAMAT at (716) 754-4883.

Research your destination. If you are unfamiliar with your destination, take the time to learn about any potential health risks. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention offer a valuable resource about travelers' health at www.cdc.gov/travel/. This site provides information about outbreaks, diseases, recommended vaccinations, safe food and water, precautions for travelers with special needs and more.

"Hopefully the worst health issue that travelers will experience this spring break is a mild case of sunburn," adds Moeller. "But it's important to be prepared."

MVCC Candidates

Sandra S. Wagner, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Moraine Valley Community College, and Joseph P. Murphy, Secretary of the Board, announce that they are seeking second six-year terms. "Moraine is a vital and valuable part of the community. We've accomplished and achieved many things in the past six years, and we would like to remain on the Board to continue providing experienced leadership important to ensure continued success and growth."

Mr. Murphy of Blue Island cites the tremendous growth of the college, and the pride of district residents: "The community support for the referendum was exciting. We are able to expand and renovate the campus to better serve our growing area."

Mrs. Wagner adds that enrollment is at a record high this spring and has increased more than 12 percent over the past six years. "We are running out of space necessary to meet everyone's needs." The enrollment passed the 18,000 student count for the first time this spring - 5% over last year. "Moraine ranks in the top 8% of all community colleges in the nation in number of degrees and certificates awarded."

"I am pleased that under our leadership, Joe and I have had a part in ensuring that faculty, staff, and students have the necessary tools and opportunities to excel. Our work here, however, isn't finished. We are in the planning stages for the campus expansion and renovation, and more remains to be accomplished."

Murphy notes that due to the excellent financial standing of the college, a high bond rating was received which has passed savings on to the taxpayer. "The tax increase was reduced by 2% due to the fiscal responsibility of the administration and the Board of Trustees."

Both agree that the future six years present many challenges. "Moraine Valley will need sound leadership to meet the future, so that quality programming and excellent facilities will continue to meet district needs. We are excited about the prospects, and we would like to continue to play an integral role in our students' success."

Millions In Tax Credits Unclaimed

Every year, millions of working families miss out on tax credits that could result in savings or bigger refunds. This tax season, families in Cook County, who are eligible for the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), stand to lose as much as $87.4 million if they fail to claim it. And according to the non-profit Center for Economic Progress, up to 1 in 3 Illinois taxpayers are failing to take advantage of the one-time telephone refund -- leaving up to $80 million unclaimed.

One of the most effective federal programs to help working families has been the EITC. For a family with two children, their EITC tax refund can be as much as $4,400. The average federal EITC refund in 2005 was $2,022.

While helping those families make ends meet, the EITC also infuses hundreds of millions of dollars into the Chicago and Illinois economy each year. According to the Brookings Institution, in 2003 Cook County residents received $778,084,727 in EITC refunds, and those funds are usually recycled directly back into the local economy.

Though the EITC has lifted 4.4 million people out of poverty, a large percentage of families and workers eligible for the EITC fail to claim it because of complex rules, lack of awareness, and other barriers.

In addition to the EITC, the Center for Economic Progress reports that the phone tax refund is another overlooked benefit this tax season. With the repeal of a tax on long-distance telephone calls (first levied to help pay for the Spanish-American War nearly 110 years ago), families can get anywhere from $30 to $60, depending upon household size.

The Center works to ensure that Illinois' low-income families receive all the credits they are entitled to through its volunteer-driven Tax Counseling Project. The Center offers free tax preparation assistance in 36 Illinois communities, including 15 Chicago neighborhood locations and throughout the suburbs.

In Chicago, communities with tax sites include Auburn Gresham, Back of the Yards, Bronzeville, Chinatown, Humboldt Park, Lawndale, Loop, Pilsen, Rogers Park, South Chicago, Uptown, West Garfield Park, West Haven, and Woodlawn.

For more information on hours and specific locations, please call (312) 630-0273 or TTY (312) 701-1326, or visit www.centerforprogress.org. All tax sites are ADA accessible.

"The tax refund is the largest single payment of any kind that many working families receive all year. They have worked hard for it and deserve it. With the April 17 tax filing deadline only weeks away, we want to make sure working families keep more of their hard-earned money," said David Marzahl, Executive Director, Center for Economic Progress.

Working families with household incomes of less than $40,000 and individuals with incomes less than $15,000 are eligible for the Center's free services. For over a decade, the Center has assisted more than 150,000 working families through its Tax Counseling Project, helping to generate more than $200 million in income tax refunds and saving families more than $10 million in tax preparation fees.

For information on the Center's free tax preparation sites, call (312) 630-0273 or TTY (312) 701-1326, or visit www.centerforprogress.org. All of the Center's tax sites are ADA accessible.

If individuals are not filing a return, but would like to claim the phone tax refund, the 1040EZ-T is available online at www.centerforprogress.org.

The Center for Economic Progress seeks to encourage financial stability and build the assets of working families. As a front-line service provider, advocate, and community educator, the Center's programs and services impact tens of thousands of families each year.

Cleaner Cars Are Coming

Interest in cleaner and greener auto technology is exploding, according to a comprehensive article in the March/April 2007 issue of E - The Environmental Magazine (now posted at: www.emagazine.com). From fuel cells to plug-in hybrids, the industry is showing more research and development zeal than at any time since the halcyon days of 1900, when gasoline, steam and electric vehicles (EVs) were competing in the marketplace.

With seesawing gasoline prices and uncertainty about the future of oil, consumers are finally focusing on fuel economy and looking beyond big SUVs for their next vehicle. A consumer survey by the influential J.D. Power and Associates last summer found that an amazing 57 percent of respondents would consider buying a hybrid car for their next vehicle, and 49 percent would consider a car powered by E85 ethanol. Another survey, by Frost & Sullivan, found that 80 percent are more concerned about fuel prices than they were a year ago.

Despite these numbers and the fact that cars like the Toyota Prius are proliferating on U.S. roadways, still made up slightly more than one percent of the market in 2006. But by 2013, J.D. Power predicts they'll have taken five percent. This year, expect to see a wide range of new hybrids on the market, from the compact Honda Fit Hybrid (with fuel economy in the mid-50s) to the Toyota Sienna seven-seat minivan (approximately 40 mpg). You'll even be able to buy a hybrid version of the Chevy Tahoe (though expect only a 25 percent improvement over the SUV's 17 mpg).

Indeed, after a protracted period of sticker shock at the pumps, the public is showing interest in a range of cleaner automotive technologies, from hybrids to fuel cells, battery vehicles, plug-in hybrids and cars that run on biodiesel. Still, consumers remain quite confused about both the potential and the timetable for these technologies, and much of what they think they know is wrong. For instance, it is still commonly believed that hybrid vehicles need to be plugged in. Here's some of what's happening:

as gas prices eased and the federal credit was halved (it went, for example, from $3,150 for the top-selling Toyota Prius to $1,575), 2006 was still a banner year, with 251,803 hybrids sold. There are now more than 550,000 on U.S. roads. More than 200,000 hybrids were sold in 2005, doubling the 88,000 sold in 2004. A plethora of new hybrid models are on the way.

Diesel vehicles are largely anathema to environmentalists and California clean air regulators, but they're becoming a majority on the roads of Europe (where green consciousness is almost a given) and they deserve a second look in the U.S., where their numbers can only go up. The good news for diesel partisans is the federally mandated low-sulfur (below 15 parts per million) diesel fuel that went on the market at up to 76,000 American filling stations late last year. It's the cleanest diesel fuel in the world.

There are several forms of bio fuel, and the categories can confuse the novice. Biodiesel, in blends with standard diesel of five to 100 percent, has been refined to work without modification in any newer diesel vehicle. With a kit from companies like Gracsecar, diesels can burn 100 percent vegetable oil, which can be sourced and filtered from restaurants for a wholly recycled fuel. Biodiesel, which offers both improved emissions and the opportunity to thumb your nose at fossil fuel, is still largely a grassroots enterprise, with enthusiasts banding together in co-ops.

If any one technology can replace the internal-combustion engine, it's the fuel cell, which doesn't burn anything but instead converts hydrogen (stored in a tank as liquid or gas) to electricity. And its only tailpipe emission is water vapor. Fuel cells were invented in the mid-19th century and have since provided electric power on NASA space missions, but they're only now becoming practical for ground transportation. And Electric vehicles (EVs) are showing promise, especially with the advent of high-output, lightweight lithium-ion (li-ion) batteries.

In 2007, America's auto fleet is hardly green, but it's getting greener.

Porker Of The Month

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) recently named House Agriculture Committee Chairman Collin Peterson (D-Minn.) Porker of the Month for his hostility toward agriculture policy reform.

Although the primary justification for agriculture policies has always been that they are necessary to protect "small family farmers," subsidies overwhelmingly go to the largest farmers and agribusinesses. According to the Environmental Working Group, between 1995 and 2005, the largest 4 percent of farms garnered half of commodity subsidy payments, while the largest 10 percent pulled in 73 percent. Many of these farmers have net worth exceeding $2 million. The subsidies drive up land prices and put smaller farmers out of business. Present farm policy is a case of Robin Hood in reverse that devastates rural communities.

President Bush's 2007 farm bill proposal would eliminate subsidy payments to individuals with an adjusted gross income of $200,000 or more. In truth, the proposal does not go far enough and leaves intact the overall payment limitation of $360,000, which should also be lowered. Even modest reform is too much for Rep. Peterson, who thinks agriculture would be "better off" not having any payment limits at all" (Western Farm Press, 2/7/07).

Farm subsidies raise prices for consumers, encourage farming on environmentally sensitive land, undercut subsistence farmers in developing countries, and invite retaliatory tariffs that hurt U.S. producers of non-subsidized commodities. The farm program is simply a massive transfer of wealth from taxpayers and consumers to the wealthy, politically-connected producers of a handful of crops.

Referring to the Doha round of World Trade Organization negotiations, Rep. Peterson said, "There's pressure on us to change the farm bill because that's the only way we can get a trade deal." Now I'm sorry, but I've had enough of these trade deals. And unless we can get something good out of it, I don't give a damn if we get one."

Taxpayers, consumers, and the overall economy benefit enormously from the expansion of free trade. By "we," Rep. Peterson is probably referring to the sugar beet producers located in his district. With a well-oiled lobbying machine in Washington, Big Sugar's strategy has always been to keep its government subsidies and protect itself from international competition. Import quotas force American consumers to pay two to three times the world market price for sugar, costing about $2 billion annually. The higher prices have almost destroyed the domestic sugarcane refining industry and forced candy manufacturers to relocate outside the U.S. In 2005, the sugar lobby nearly sank the Central America Free Trade Agreement even though virtually all other segments of U.S. agriculture supported it. Rep. Peterson is so dedicated to protecting the sugar and farm subsidy racket that he "told Agriculture Secretary Mike Johanns, a Republican, to 'quit making those speeches' about the need for 'wholesale reform'" (Associated Press, 1/20/07).

For supporting corporate welfare and for opposing farm policy reform and free trade in order to protect special interests in his home district, CAGW names Rep. Collin Peterson its February 2007 Porker of the Month.

County Clean Air Ordinance Effective March 15

Beginning March 15, businesses and establishments in Cook County must be smoke-free, as mandated by the Clean Indoor Air Ordinance that was passed March 15, 2006 by the Board of Cook County Commissioners. The Ordinance prohibits smoking in all enclosed public places and places of employment within Cook County, except for private residences, designated rooms in hotels and long term care facilities, and private clubs and lodges. Smokers may not light up within fifteen feet of any entrance to an enclosed area where smoking is prohibited.

The Ordinance covers all of Cook County including unincorporated areas and those municipalities that have not adopted their own smoke-free regulations.

"The value of this ordinance will be measured in the number of lives saved and illnesses prevented," said Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH) chief operating officer, Stephen A. Martin, Jr., Ph.D., M.P.H. "Cook County residents are smoking less than ever before, and the majority of them want a healthy, safe, smoke-free environment for themselves and their families. I, along with others in the public health field am grateful to the Board for having the foresight to pass this essential ordinance."

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has identified secondhand smoke as the third leading cause of preventable death in the country, killing an estimated 53,000 non-smokers each year. Employees who work in smoke-filled businesses suffer a 25-50% higher risk of heart attack and higher rates of death from cardiovascular disease and cancer.

"Public health experts determined many years ago that there is no safe level of exposure to secondhand smoke," said Dr. Martin. "We feel that no employee should have to choose between their health and a paycheck."

The Ordinance calls for signage to be posted at all public places that clearly states the facility is smoke-free and also for all ash trays to be removed from the premises.

Under the Clean Indoor Air Ordinance, the Cook County Department of Public Health is responsible for public education, and complaint response and Enforcement activities for those communities who have not adopted their own ordinance will begin on March 15. Owners of establishments found in violation, as well as smokers, may be fined up to $2,500 for repeat violations. Violations of the ordinance can be reported to CCDPH at (708) 492-2127, or residents can download a reporting form at www.cookcountypublichealth.org.

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

Last week Governor Rod Blagojevich rocked the Illinois State Capital in Springfield by proposing a whopping $60.1 billion budget program to a joint session of the General Assembly. This proposed budget promotes the largest tax increase, as well as the biggest borrowing binge in the state's history.

The Governor suggested that middle-class and working families formed the center of his proposal and that they will figure prominently in its success. Blagojevich's lofty goals include: injecting billions into the severely underfunded government pension system for state retirees; comprehensive healthcare programs for the uninsured; and greater funding for the educational system statewide.

To achieve these benchmarks the Governor projects some $7 billion from new business taxes; $10 billion from a proposed lease of the Illinois State Lottery; and $16 billion in new borrowing and refinancing of present bonds and debts.

To achieve these goals the Governor feels that Illinois corporations will also contribute significantly by generating more tax revenues. We will be curious to see how this enormous proposal fares in the House and Senate. We'll keep you posted.

Commenting on Governor Blagojevich's Fiscal Year 2008 budget State Sen. Christine Radogno (R-Lemont) outlined a plan which she feels relies on the largest spending, borrowing and tax increases in Illinois history.

Radogno expressed concerns over the Governor's plan to impose a new $6 billion "gross-receipts tax" on the state's business community; if approved it would be the largest tax increase in state history, and employers would be required to pay the state each time they are paid for a product or service. The Senator fears that this tax will chase businesses to other surrounding states or costs will be reflected in higher consumer bills.

One of the most contentious components of the Governor's budget includes a proposed lease of the Illinois Lottery for $10 billion to pay off the state's growing pension debt. Radogno noted that this idea was nearly identical to last year's budget proposal to generate revenue for Illinois schools. Radogno noted that while the state's pension systems are in critical trouble, why lose some $670 million per year that presently goes into the state's educational fund as a result of the Illinois Lottery. What instrument will make up the debt or loss of lottery funds?

Senator Radogno concluded with the explanation that the Governor's plan also relies on refinancing the state's pension debt, similar to the $10 billion borrowing plan that was implemented in 2003.

Jim Buffett, the Executive Director for Campaign for Better Health Care, sent All Points the following regarding Governor Blagojevich's Illinois Covered proposal. "We applaud the governor's vision, leadership and commitment to make affordable, accessible, and quality health care for all Illinois residents a reality. It's a moral imperative to build a fair and just society where we all share opportunities and share responsibilities for health. It's an economic imperative to avoid the cost of inaction. Taking action now will save Illinois families and businesses tens of billions of dollars over the next decade. And it's both a moral and economic line in the sand - separating the minority who profit in the current broken system from the majority who are ready for a common-sense solution based on fairness and peace-of-mind, knowing that they will never go without health care."

Thirty-two suburban municipal locations have been designated "Early Voting Sites" for the April 17th Consolidated Elections. All registered suburban Cook County voters may cast early ballots at any of the 32 locations from March 26th through April 12th. Local offices being considered on April 17th include village trustees, library trustees, and representatives on the local school boards.

Voter registration is normally available Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. There are some Saturday location openings as well. Check with your local village or township government for locations and specific hours. Voter registration closes Tuesday, March 20th.

To register, individuals must be United States citizens and at least 18 years old on or before April 17th, 2007. Two forms of identification are required when registering, one with the current suburban Cook County address.

Cook County Clerk David Orr tells All Points that applications for absentee ballots are now available for the April 17th Consolidated Election.

To vote absentee, you must, by law, have a valid reason why you cannot go to your polling place on Election Day. In most cases voters elect to vote absentee if they are physically disabled or if they are going to be out of town during the election.

To vote absentee, one must be a registered voter, have a valid reason or excuse for voting absentee, and have submitted a completed application. Once applications are received and verified for eligibility, one receives an absentee ballot. However, first-time voters cannot vote absentee by mail. The only exceptions are for overseas and military voters. Applications must arrive at the Clerk's office by April 12th.

Absentee applications can be obtained on the Clerk's website www.voterinfo.net or at the Clerk's downtown office, at 69 W. Washington St., fifth floor, Chicago.

Saint Xavier University will host its '2007 Presidents Scholarship Ball' Saturday, April 21st, at Chicago's famous Field Museum. Co-chairs Daniel and Maureen Curley and the Honorable Terrence and Jennifer Duffy tell All Points that the gala event will feature a sumptuous meal, and music by the Ron Bedal Orchestra. Highlighting the evening will be a special award honoring Chicago Alderman Edward M. Burke for his continuous dedication and service to both Saint Xavier University and the Sisters of Mercy. For more information call (773) 298-3311 or e-mail SpecialEvents@SXU.EDU.

Dashes to deadline ... Governors State University will host an Open House on Saturday, March 24th from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. and is followed by an opening session for all attendees at 10 a.m. At 10:30 a.m. students and parents will be able to meet faculty members, academic advisors, and financial aid counselors one-on-one. General information about the university, financial aid, transfer requirements, and graduate and undergraduate programs will be available. For more information contact the Office of Admissions at (708) 534-4490 or gsunow@govst.edu.

Letter to the Editor

Downsizing Cook County Government

After years of effort by various Commissioners, we are proud to report today that the long overdue commitment to downsize this bloated, inefficient and costly Cook County government has finally begun.

The 2007 Cook County budget, as amended, was approved at 2:31 a.m. on February 23, 2007 after a 17-hour meeting that stretched over two days. The budget was ultimately balanced by an amendment, drafted and sponsored by Commissioners Gorman, Goslin, Silvestri and Quigley. This amended budget was approved by an impressive vote of 13 of 17 commissioners. This budget was a victory for all residents of Cook County - a balanced budget without a tax increase.

At one point an "omnibus" amendment was offered, but after careful review it was obvious that amendment would not have balanced the budget as required by law. An odd coalition of county commissioners refused to compromise and seemed to be more interested in creating controversy than passing a responsible budget. That omnibus budget was primarily drafted by representatives of various labor unions, did not earn the majority support and was easily defeated. The odd coalition that continued to support this defeated amendment have publicly questioned, in not so subtle terms, the motivation behind our successful amendment which balanced the budget without a tax increase. They have publicly asked what we "got" in exchange for offering this amendment.

- It's simple. Here is what we got - for the citizens of Cook County:
- A budget that began with a $500 Million deficit, was balanced without a tax increase and without slight of hand maneuvers, without selling land which has never been approved for sale by the board, without turnover adjustments and without other budgeting tricks contained in the omnibus amendment;
- A budget that contains 2,200 fewer employees in 2007 than it did in 2006 - for a savings of over $120 Million. The omnibus amendment cut 712 employees, then added back 827 employees for a staggering net gain of 115 employees, adding $7.6 Million additional dollars to the already bloated budget;
- A budget that made history by cutting the most sacred of sacred cows - the dysfunctional Bureau of Health, and with it, mandates an aggressive bureau-wide reorganization;
- A budget that chopped personnel from the top, from the middle and from the bottom;
- A budget that restored front-line States Attorneys, Public Defenders, Sheriff's Police and Deputies;
- A budget that restored health care programs for working families, dental services for children in need and victim witness and other vitally needed protection programs for at-risk men, women and children.

Any time suburban republicans and city democrats can force an alliance to cut costs, streamline operations and balance a $3 Billion budget without a tax increase or voodoo arithmetic is good, responsible government. We are proud to be sponsors, and aware that this is just a first step in the implementation of this long-overdue commitment to reinvent Cook County into an efficient, effective, economical and compassionate unit of government, managed in a professional manner. We intend to continue to push for the necessary reform that must continue to occur from year to year.

Commissioners:

Liz Doody Gorman, 17th District,
Gregg Goslin, 14th District,
Pete Silvestri, 9th District,
Mike Quigley, 10th District

Recycling Fundraiser

The Center in Palos Park has teamed up with Abitibi Recycling to provide a paper recycling bin for community residents. Anyone in the community can be a part of this recycling program, which will also serve as a fundraiser for the non-for-profit Center.

The large green and yellow paper recycling bin is available 24 hours a day in the parking lot of The Center's main lodge, located on the west side of 12700 Southwest Highway. Paper suitable for recycling in the Abitibi bin includes clean and dry newspaper, magazines, shopping catalogs, office and school papers, and mail. The paper will be taken to the Abitibi processing center, where it will be sorted, de-inked, and turned into marketable paper products such as newsprint.

According to assistant program director Laura Milkert, who organized the new recycle program, the paper bin can help to save landfill space, save energy, and can help to save trees.

Budget Good For Higher Education

Governor Blagojevich gave the first major speech of his second term on Wednesday, and Illinois State Senator

Edward Maloney (D-Chicago) promises to further research the various aspects of the Governor's proposals.

"The budget is an ambitious plan that addresses many problems, but there are still many questions regarding the logistics of the gross receipts tax and how it impacts consumers," said Senator Maloney.

Some of the more favorable appropriations in the proposal involve higher education, and will make it easier for students to pay for their education - including a $7.3 million increase for MAP grants and the continuation of the MAP Plus program. The MAP program is a need based financial aid program, with grants being awarded to help low and middle income students better afford college. With this year's total recommended appropriation of nearly $400 million, many college students stand to benefit.

Maloney sponsored the MAP plus program last year, initially a one-year pilot program to address college affordability for middle-class families, and the Governor is recommending this program be extended and fully funded for another year. With the proposed $34 million in funding, the program will give $500 grants to college sophomores, juniors, and seniors to aid in the costs associated with attending a university.

In addition to the MAP programs, the Governor also met and exceeded the Board of Higher Education's recommendations regarding State support for public universities. He proposed nearly $25 million in additional funding to address salary competitiveness, rising energy costs, and other campus based operating needs.

Another area in which the Governor is increasing funding involves education and healthcare curricula in our state universities and community colleges. The proposed increase of $7.6 million is intended to increase the quality of and better prepare students for careers in the education and healthcare professions.

"I look forward to working with the Governor and his budget staff to see that higher education and other issues that impact my constituency are adequately addressed," said Maloney.

Annual Spring Tea

Tickets are on sale for the second annual spring "Tea Amidst the Wildflowers" to be held on Sunday, April 29th from 2 to 4 p.m. at The Center, 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park.

The afternoon will include tea sandwiches, sweets, and a variety of hot and cold teas, plus music, wildflowers, and a humorous speech about women by columnist Alice Collins of Oak Lawn. Seating is planned both indoors and outside amidst the wildflowers.

Tickets must be reserved in advance and cost $20 per person. For reservations and further information, call (708) 361-3650.

Continues Silk Road Journey

Symphony Center Presents continues with Silk Road Chicago on Saturday, April 14th at 8 p.m. when legendary sitar master Ravi Shankar returns to Symphony Center for a special performance with his daughter, Anoushka Shankar, in a program that celebrates Indian music.

An instrumentalist, composer, teacher and writer, Ravi Shankar is India's most esteemed musical ambassador and a virtuoso musician whose artistry crosses all cultural and musical boundaries. As a student of the illustrious guru "Baba" Ustad Allaadin Khan, Mr. Shankar was already one of the biggest stars in India before coming to international attention in the 1960s. His music has influenced the work of many well-known Western musicians, including George Harrison of The Beatles, who produced and played on Shankar's Festival of India recording, violinist Yehudi Menuhin, flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal, and composer Philip Glass. Eighty-six-year-old Mr. Shankar has been the foremost pioneer in disseminating India's rich classical music tradition to the West.

This concert will feature Mr. Shankar's daughter, sitar virtuoso Anoushka Shankar. Ms. Shankar began studying with her father at the age of 9 and made her performing debut with him at age 13 in New Delhi, India. That same year, she began playing on her father's recordings and released her first highly acclaimed solo project in 1998. Her third solo album, Live at Carnegie Hall in 2001, was nominated for a Grammy Award in the Best World Music Album category, making her the youngest-ever nominee in that category. After a year's sabbatical in 2004, Ms. Shankar returned to the concert stage and recorded her fourth solo album, Rise, which was released in September 2005 and won a second Grammy Award nomination.

Indian classical music is primarily based on melody and rhythm, as opposed to the concepts of harmony, counterpoint, chords and modulation of Western classical music. Raga, the system of Indian music, can be traced back nearly 2,000 years to its origin in the Vedic hymns of the Hindu temples. Raga provides the melodic material for the composition of vocal or instrumental melodies and for improvisation, which is the very heart of Indian music. The tradition of Indian classical music is an oral one; it is taught directly by the guru to the disciple, rather than by the notation method used in the West. The roots of Western awareness of Indian music may be found in the late 18th century and became more extensive in the late years of the British rule. Today, many Western composers and musicians have been influenced by Indian music.

This performance is part of Symphony Center's year-long Silk Road Chicago celebration, inspired by the art and culture of the historic Silk Road. Created through a partnership among the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, The Art Institute of Chicago, the City of Chicago, and Yo-Yo Ma's The Silk Road Project, Inc., the season of Silk Road Chicago is designed to be a citywide collaboration inspired by the art and culture - both ancient and contemporary - of the regions of the historic Silk Road. More than 50 Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Symphony Center Presents classical, world music, family, and educational performances - all carrying the theme of Silk Road Chicago - will be presented during Symphony Center's 2006-07 season.

Other Symphony Center Presents Special Concerts include: Yo-Yo Ma and the Silk Road Ensemble, April 20th; Silk Road Ensemble family concert, April 21st; guitarists John Williams and John Etheridge, April 25th; and three special concerts featuring the Chicago Symphony Orchestra: a performance of opera arias with Denyce Graves on June 9th, Verdi's Requiem on June 15th, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 on June 21st.

Tickets are $20 to $65 and can be purchased by calling CSO Ticketing at (312) 294-3000 or (800) 223-7114 or by visiting either the CSO Web site at www.cso.org or the Symphony Center box office at 220 S. Michigan Ave.

Storyteller Batt Burns At Gaelic Park

Chicago Gaelic Park, the Irish Cultural Center located at 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest, will host Batt Burns, Seanachie/storyteller from County Kerry, Ireland, on Friday, March 16th beginning at 8 p.m. in the Celtic Room.

Burns is known throughout the world for his gift of the gab, and is a regular contributor to Irish radio programs. Burns has worked to make changes to the curriculum in Irish Primary Schools, has written textbooks and has taught college courses in Irish Studies as well as participates in storytelling festivals around the world. On his visit to Gaelic Park, Burns will share the folklore and legends of Ireland with his humor and wisdom.

Tickets to this show are $10. Call Gaelic Park at (708) 687-9323 for more information or visit the web site at www.chicagogaelpark.org.

Dinner & Show Brings Dave Coady

Popular Irish entertainer Dave Coady brings his unique entertaining style to Chicago Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest, where he will perform for a special St. Patrick's Day Dinner and Cabaret Show on Saturday, March 17th. The doors open at 6 p.m. with a dinner of corned beef and cabbage served at 7 p.m. and the show beginning at 9 p.m. Dinner music will be provided by Sean O'Donnell and there will also be an exhibition of Irish Step Dancing. Dead Man Walking Cast Announced

The cast is set and rehearsals have begun for a joint production of the play "Dead Man Walking," to be performed March 30-31 at the McAuley Theatre of the Mother McAuley Liberal Arts High School, 3797 W. 99th St., Chicago.

In celebration of the 160th anniversary of Saint Xavier Academy and College, the forerunners of the Mother McAuley Liberal Arts High School and Saint Xavier University, the play's 40-member cast is composed entirely of students, staff, and alumni of Saint Xavier University, Mother McAuley High School and Brother Rice High School.

The play, written by actor Tim Robbins, is based on the non-fiction book Dead Man Walking by Sister Helen Prejean, C.S.J., a Roman Catholic nun. The story focuses on her unique relationship with convicted murderer Patrick Sonnier, who was sentenced to death by electrocution. From that experience, Prejean became a leading advocate for the abolition of the death penalty.

The part of Sister Helen Prejean will be played by Sarah Rakauskas, a Saint Xavier student and Mother McAuley alumna. Death row inmate Matt Poncelet will be played by Saint Xavier student Kevin LeCompte. Other cast members will include Saint Xavier Provost Dominick J. Hart as Governor Fredericks; Brother Paul Ickes, Brother Rice faculty member, as Chaplain Farley; Mother McAuley faculty member Tess Gump as Prejean's mother; and Brother Rice alumnus Brian Rigg as Mr. Delacroix.

Prejean will lead a pre-performance conversation on opening night at 7:30 p.m., Friday, March 30, in the McAuley Auditorium. Performances begin at 8 p.m. on both Friday, March 30, and Saturday, March 31. The production is part of the Dead Man Walking School

Theatre Project, in which schools around the country produce the same play in coordination with their local communities in an inter-disciplinary dialogue about the death penalty.

"We are deeply honored to have Sister Prejean join us," said Patricia Haynes, director of the play and chair of the McAuley Theatre Department. "Her presence combined with the extraordinary cast turnout from our three Catholic institutions will make this a very special event."

Leading up to the production of the play, Saint Xavier and Mother McAuley will both address the topic of capital punishment in various classes and activities. McAuley students will consider such topics as the origins of the death penalty, the physics and physiology of putting someone to death, and the ethical, religious and pastoral dimensions of those involved in all aspects of capital punishment. Saint Xavier University students will host speakers, pro and con, and may dedicate one of their Sunday evening "open mike" sessions to the topic.

"We want to address this most important issue dialectically - looking at the issues from many perspectives - and from different disciplines," said Sister Susan Sanders, R.S.M., vice president for University Mission and Heritage at Saint Xavier University, who also helped organize the events. "We will work to provide room for discussion of both sides of this critical debate."

For more information about the McAuley Theatre production, or to order reserved tickets at $8 each, contact Patricia Haynes at (773) 881-6512. For more information about the Dead Man Walking School Theatre Project, visit www.deadmanwalkingplay.org/.

African American Artists

Cook County Treasurer Maria Pappas stands with African American artists Kathleen Carter (left) and Phillip A. London at a display in her downtown Chicago office by black artists. Pappas regularly shows the work of artists from 'Chicagoland' in her office in the Cook County Building, 118 N. Clark St. She said the work showed great talent, skill and imagination, and welcomed such expression by African American artists.

Present "Blood Brothers"

The Caravan Alley Players from Mt. Carmel High School in Chicago will present the musical, "Blood Brothers" by Willy Russell, in the Student Center, 6410 S. Dante Ave., at 7 p.m. each evening on Friday and Saturday, March 23rd and 24th, and on Friday and Saturday, March 30th and 31st. The box office and doors will open at 6 p.m. The entire cast includes students and adults from Mt. Carmel High School and students from Mother McAuley, Marist and St. Ignatius High School, Morgan Park Academy and Our Lady of Guadalupe Grammar School. Tickets cost $10 for adults and $5 for all students. For tickets, contact Sean Daly at (773) 359-0446 or sdaly@mchs.org.

This is Willy Russell's terrible tale of twin brothers separated at birth who live drastically different lives only to meet several times throughout their lives. In the end, they become best friends without ever knowing that they are brothers. Shrouded in superstition and sadness, it is a story of class divide that breaks across blood and kin. It may not be appropriate for younger children. This musical has been a hit in London for over 20 years and is still playing to date.

This may be the first time this musical has been presented in the Chicago area by a local group.

"Go, Dog, Go" Makes Chicago Debut In 2007

Chicago Children's Theatre Artistic Director Jacqueline Russell and Executive Director Claude Binder recently announced that the company will engage in an unprecedented partnership with the Chicago Park District to bring the Chicago premiere of Go, Dog, Go! to a classic circus tent pitched in Daley Bicentennial Plaza in Grant Park, adjacent to Millennium Park. Staged in a 50-foot-tall, red and white striped circus tent that seats 800, the production will make its Chicago debut from April 13th to May 26th, 2007. Tickets will go on sale winter 2007.

Adapted from P.D. Eastman's classic children's book by Steven Dietz and Allison Gregory, Go, Dog, Go! promises to thrill audiences with a chaotic carnival of music and physical comedy that celebrates the brilliant simplicity of life. Dogs of all colors, shapes and sizes dance, sing, work, play, skate and climb through a magical world where dogs are king. Go, Dog, Go! will be directed by Andrew White, Jim Lasko will serve as production designer, and Jonathan Mastro will serve as musical director. For more information about Chicago Children's Theatre, visit www.chicagochildrenstheatre.org or call (773) 227-0180.

Troupe To Stage "Charlotte's Web"

The Village of Orland Park Theatre Troupe will hold auditions for its summer production March 19 and 20. The troupe's summer fare is always a children's show and this year's is the 1952 classic written by E.B. White, "Charlotte's Web." Joseph Robinette adapted the book for the stage, working with the advice of E.B. White. Produced in cooperation with the Dramatic Publishing Company, "Charlotte's Web" was named the "best American children's book of the past 200 years," by the Children's Literature Association.

Children age seven and older are invited to audition for Orland Park's production of "Charlotte's Web" on Monday, March 19 and Tuesday, March 20 from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m. Auditions will be held at Orland Park's Old Village Hall, 14415 South Beacon Avenue. Once cast, participants must pay a registration fee, $30 for residents and $45 for non-residents.

"Charlotte's Web" is an American classic and we're very excited to stage this in Orland Park," said Orland Park Recreation Program Supervisor Irene Buikema, executive producer for the village's theatre troupe. Frann Carnivle-Sidlow is the show's producer/director.

Rehearsals will be held Sunday afternoons and Monday and Thursday evenings at the Old Village Hall. Performances will be at the Orland Park Civic Center, June 8 through June 10.

Further information is available by calling the Orland Park Recreation and Parks Department at (708) 403-PARK.

Moraine Valley Traveling Gulag Exhibit

The Moraine Valley Community College Library will host the Gulag Labor Camp, Perm-36: The Forgotten Holocaust exhibit March 12-30 as part of the college's Global Education Program. The traveling exhibit is composed of several tri-panels and cases that house authentic artifacts such as posters and barbed wire from Soviet Gulag camps, forced labor concentration camps used for all types of prisoners but became primarily known as places to house political prisoners. The Library is in Building L, on campus, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills.

The free exhibit is being offered in conjunction with the college's One Book, One College March event as 1984, the selected text, addresses labor camp themes. Alan Barenberg, a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Chicago, will lecture about "Soviet Era Gulag Camps" on Thursday, March 27th, from 12:30 to 1:45 p.m. in the Library. He is currently completing his dissertation on Gulag camps. His interest in the topic began in 1998 when he spent a summer in Moscow collecting oral histories of Gulag survivors.

The exhibit is sponsored by the Midwest Institute for International/Intercultural Education, which is housed at Kalamazoo Community College. Moraine Valley is a member.

For more information on the Gulag exhibit, call Merri Fefles, Global Education Program coordinator, at (708) 974-5393.

LAKE MICHIGAN FISHING CHARTERS: With the closing of the Hammond Marina due to the expansion of the casino, Capt. Bob Poteshman has decided to operate his charter fishing operation out of North Point Marina for the early coho season, starting April 6th.

Capt. Bob will have both his boats ("Confusion" and "Confusion Too") ready to go. Both boats are very well equipped with all the modern amenities, conveniences and the best fishing tackle available.

"Confusion" is a 38-foot 'Tiara' Custom Express 14' hardtop. "Confusion Too" is a 38-foot 'Pacemaker' Sportfisherman, 13' wide with a large flybridge. As the season progresses, in addition to the Cohos, Capt. Bob will be targeting Lake Trout, Brown Trout, Chinooks, Steelheads and may even target Jumbo Yellow Perch.

I had the pleasure of fishing with Capt. Poteshman a few years back. He and his First Mate did a fine job putting us on fish, changing lures, depths, speed, and locations. We all went home with a mixed bag of fish fillets and better knowledge of Charter Boat Fishing on Lake Michigan.

For more information and special "Spring Coho Fishing" deals, call 1(888) 929-3474 or go to www.confusioncharters.com.

NEW LICENSE YEAR BEGINS APRIL 1ST: Anglers and hunters are reminded to purchase their 2007 Illinois hunting, fishing and sportsmen combination licenses prior to April 1st when the new IDNR license year begins. The licenses are available from hundreds of IDNR Direct license and permit vendor locations - and online through the IDNR web site at <http://dnr.state.il.us>. The online system is available 24 hours a day using American Express, Discover, MasterCard or Visa. Licenses are also available by phone through DNR Direct by calling toll-free 1(888) 673-7648.

EASTER HAM SHOOT: Bring your favorite shotgun and try your luck (and skill) at one of the "open to the public" events on Sunday, March 25th at the Palos Sportsman's Club Annual Easter Ham Shoot. The club is located in nearby Frankfort, Illinois at 24160 S. Harlem Ave. Phone: (815) 469-4446.

The skeet and trapshooting games begin at 9 a.m. and run to 4 p.m. Everyone has a chance to win that Easter ham. The squads are set up according to ability. Bring the entire family, this is a great opportunity to introduce them to the sport of clay-pigeon shooting.

$2.78 MILLION TO PROTECT ILLINOIS' ENVIRONMENT: Governor Rod Blagojevich awarded nearly $2.78 million in Illinois Department of Natural Resources Conservation grants to help local communities protect and improve Illinois' environment. The 51 grants will benefit a variety of habitats in 88 communities throughout Illinois.

To date, IDNR's Ecosystems Program has awarded more than $32.5 million in grants benefiting every county in Illinois and leveraging an additional $31.5 million in local matching funds and in-kind contributions for a total of $64 million in projects throughout the state. With Ecosystems funding, local partnerships across the state have restored more than 64,000 acres of prairie, forest, wetlands and wildlife habitat and protected more than 5,600 acres of habitat through conservation easements.

LET'S TALK TURKEY: The Cook County Turkey Baggers chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation will be hosting their 6th Annual Hunting Heritage Banquet on Friday, March 30th at the Elks Lodge, 4428 Midlothian Turnpike in Crestwood.

Tickets are only $60 and include open bar, dinner and raffles for some great firearms, art objects and other outdoor-related equipment. This is a great opportunity to socialize with like-minded sportsmen. Families are invited. Look me up and I will buy you a 'cold one.' For more information or tickets, call Carl Rendel at (708) 349-8862.

Since 1986, the NWTF and its cooperators have spent more than $284 million upholding hunting traditions and conserving more than 9.6 million acres of wildlife habitat. The NWTF has worked with wildlife agencies to transport more than 186,000 wild turkeys to suitable habitat.

TAMMY DUCKWORTH IS DOING A GREAT JOB FOR VETERANS: Illinois Department of Veteran's Affairs (DVA) Acting Director Tammy Duckworth announced that the annual free hunting and fishing licenses for disabled veterans are available. Disabled veterans must visit one of the state's 52 Veteran Service Offices to renew or obtain the free hunting and fishing licenses. (Kirby comment: "This is a great inconvenience. Why can't the disabled vets get these licenses through normal channels?")

To be eligible for the free licenses, the veteran must have a service-connected disability, be in receipt of a total USDVA disability pension. Those veterans drawing retirement pay only and have not applied to the USDVA for a service-connected rating, will not be issued a license until after the USDVA has made a service-connected rating.

Softball Players Sign Letters Of Intent

Five Marist varsity softball players recently signed National Letters of Intent to continue their athletic careers in some of the nation's most prestigious programs.

Courtney Chigaros (Mt. Greenwood), a Marist outfielder, will play for University of South Alabama. All Conference and All Area outfielder Heather Sundin (Alsip) will play at St. Ambrose University. All Area pitcher and conference MVP Colleen Biebel (Alsip) will continue her career at Western Illinois University. All Conference pitcher Kelle Snooks (Alsip) will take the mound at Radford University (Virg.). Marist catcher Nikki Marinec (Alsip) will also play at Western Illinois University.

Marist's softball program has garnered great success in only five seasons of varsity play. The team has won three regional championships, one conference championship and one sectional championship. "These girls have made an incredible commitment to building this program and I am proud to see them move on to such great college programs. They've represented Marist well and I know they will do the same at the college level," said head coach Denise Fasano.

Celebrating over 40 years of excellence, Marist High School is a Catholic, college preparatory school educating young men and women in heart, mind, and body.

Seratelli Goes To The Royals

The Windy City ThunderBolts have sold a second member of the 2006 roster to a Major League organization as the Kansas City Royals have purchased the contract of infielder Anthony Seratelli. He is currently in Arizona and will compete in spring training for a spot with one of Kansas City's minor league affiliates.

"This is an exciting opportunity for Anthony. I know he has worked very hard for this and we are happy for him and wish him the best," said ThunderBolts manager Andy Haines.

Seratelli was at or near the top of all the major offensive categories for the ThunderBolts last year in his first season as a professional. He delivered a .286 average, seven triples, six home runs, 39 RBI, 48 runs scored, 34 walks and 28 stolen bases. His triple and home run totals were best on the team and his seven triples were third most in the Frontier League. Seratelli finished second on the ThunderBolts in RBI, runs, hits and stolen bases and third in walks and batting average.

The New Jersey native closed out the season on a hot streak, picking up hits in 11 of his final 15 games with two home runs and 13 RBI over that stretch. He was voted as the ThunderBolts 2006 MVP in the postseason fan poll.

Seratelli's 2006 teammate Charlie Lisk was sold to the San Diego Padres in September. The Royals have now purchased three former ThunderBolts in a little over a year. Infielder Justin Schuda and pitcher Chris Hayes were picked up by Kansas City last February and March, respectively. Hayes had a great year for Class A Burlington in 2006, posting a 3-6 record with a 2.66 ERA and seven saves in 45 games. He led the Bees in appearances and was third in saves. Overall, the ThunderBolts have had six players signed by Major League organizations in the team's three-year history.

Bill Passes Legislative Committee

The House Environmental Health Committee recently unanimously passed House Bill 943 which would prohibit the sale of mercury-containing measuring devices, the largest class of mercury-containing products in Illinois. Mercury is a toxic that damages the human heart, brain and immune system — but is widely used in medical thermometers, blood pressure cuffs, and other measuring devices despite the availability of alternatives.

"This bill is about protecting children's health," said Rep. Karen May (D-Highland Park), the bill's chief sponsor and House Environmental Health Committee chair. "If we don't curtail the major sources of mercury pollution, we are knowingly endangering the healthy development of Illinois children."

When disposed of, mercury-containing measuring devices are often crushed or incinerated causing airborne release. A single gram of mercury — less than the amount in many measuring devices — is sufficient to contaminate a 20-acre lake. Thousands of pounds of mercury from these products are disposed of each year.

When a pregnant mother eats contaminated fish, mercury crosses the placenta to cause irreparable damage to the developing fetus's central nervous system. Mercury contaminates fish in every body of water in Illinois, with 40 percent of fish samples exceeding the safe limit for twice-per-week consumption. A recent sample of Illinois legislators revealed that 9 of 32 had mercury levels above the safe limit, and researchers have shown that up to 100,000 Illinois women have blood mercury levels high enough to put a fetus at risk.

For all measuring devices, mercury-free alternatives with equal or better performance are available at comparable cost. Leading hospitals like Johns Hopkins and the Mayo Clinic have phased out mercury in medical measuring devices. In Illinois, Omron, a leading medical device vendor based in Bannockburn, has eliminated mercury from its product line, and Consorta, a bulk purchaser based in Schaumburg, has eliminated mercury-containing devices from its purchasing contracts.

Nine other states already have laws prohibiting mercury in measuring devices.

The committee vote moves HB 943 to a vote by the full House of Representative. To become law, the bill must also pass the Senate and be signed into law by Gov. Rod Blagojevich.

Promote Governor's "Illinois Covered" Plan

Governor Blagojevich's Special Healthcare Advocate Dick Kay set out on March 12th to promote Governor Blagojevich's Drive for Healthcare, a grassroots bus tour making stops in communities throughout Illinois to meet with uninsured families and businesses struggling with health insurance costs. The Drive for Healthcare was launched on the heels of the Governor's 2007 Budget Address in which he called for the most ambitious plan in state history to make sure every person in Illinois has access to affordable quality health coverage.

While the Governor's "All Kids" plan, which took effect last year, extended coverage to all children in the state, approximately 1.4 million adults in Illinois are currently uninsured. A majority, roughly 75 percent, are from families with moderate incomes or higher. The Governor's Illinois Covered plan will provide affordable coverage to the uninsured and will also help many middle-income families and small businesses that are currently enrolled in health insurance plans save thousands a year on healthcare costs. The plan will also reform the existing healthcare system to improve quality and require more accountability.

The Governor also proposes expanding the existing FamilyCare program to 400% of the federal poverty level for those who do not have access to employer sponsored coverage, to expand health benefits for workers with disabilities, and to allow dependants to retain coverage until age 29. Additionally, the state will work with both consumers and healthcare providers to develop a Roadmap to Health that will improve the state's overall healthcare system and promote wellness, while better managing chronic conditions, the most important component for driving down overall healthcare costs.

THE FOULEST FAT OF ALL

Just how bad are trans fats? In New York City, at least, they're considered so dangerous that they are now off the menu—banned in restaurants—as of this July. Trans fats "are metabolic poisons," said Harvard School of Public Health epidemiologist Walter Willett, PhD, one of the first scientists to sound the alarm. "As far as we can see, there is no safe amount."

Recent studies show trans fats—created through a process called partial hydrogenation, which gives liquid vegetable oil the consistency of butter, and used in everything from French fries to cookies—are even worse than saturated fats for heart disease risk. They clog arteries more, raise levels of triglycerides (fats) in the blood higher and not only raise LDL (bad cholesterol) but actually lower HDL (good cholesterol). Although no studies have looked for a link between trans fats and inflammation associated with arthritis specifically, researchers have shown trans fats increase inflammation believed to contribute to heart disease and diabetes. "Trans fats do almost everything you don't want food to do," said Willett.

It gets worse: new analyses by researchers at Harvard show that just a 2 percent increase in trans fats leads to a 23 percent higher risk of heart disease. There is also evidence that trans fats might be more likely than others to promote weight gain, especially around the abdomen, which also has been linked to heart disease.

Small amounts of trans fats occur naturally in milk and beef, but they don't pose the high risk associated with those produced artificially, like desserts. The US Food and Drug Administration requires artificial trans fats to be listed on food labels but there's a catch—if the product contains less than 500 milligrams per serving, it can claim to have no trans fat. Some manufacturers have switched back to butter or palm or coconut oil as a result, which are high in saturated fat but contain negligible trans fat.

Restaurants are not required to list trans fats on their menus, but now many—including Wendy's, Au Bon Pain and Kentucky Fried Chicken—are voluntarily eliminating trans fats. McDonald's has been a holdout so far, but the New York ban requires the chain to comply there. Experts say that a total ban of trans fats could prevent up to a quarter-million heart attacks a year in the US alone, and substantially reduce the risk of adult-onset diabetes.

Nursing Home Violations

The Illinois Department of Public Health on March 9th announced the following type "A" violations of the Nursing Home Care Act were cited during the month of October. An "A" violation, which is the most serious licensure violation imposed by the state, pertains to a condition in which there is a substantial probability that death or serious mental or physical harm will result.

Among those cited is Chicago Ridge Nursing Center, a 231-bed skilled care facility located at 10602 Southwest Highway. It was fined $55,000 for failure to follow a diet order that resulted in the choking death of a resident. The case was settled with the facility paying a fine.

The statement of violation for each facility can be obtained by visiting the Department's Web site at www.idph.state.il.us.

Help Kids Breathe Easy

Asthma brings three-quarters of a million children into the emergency department every year, which is the last thing anyone wants now that the warm weather and longer days are letting kids play outside more. The American College of Emergency Physicians says getting a good asthma management plan organized before an emergency may help your child stay out of the hospital altogether.

"The good news is that fewer children are dying of asthma; the bad news is that it remains the cause of more hospitalizations than any other childhood disease," said Rita Cydulka, MD of MetroHealth Medical Center/Case Western Reserve University. "Spring is an ideal time to put together an asthma management plan, before the real trouble starts with the fall allergy and winter flu seasons."

If you are not sure whether your child has asthma, but he or she has the symptoms of asthma (coughing, wheezing, shortness of breath), talk to your doctor. After a child has been diagnosed with asthma, the parent or guardian and child should meet with a physician to develop a plan for monitoring asthma symptoms (usually a peak flow meter) and for medicating the child when trouble develops.

Some children with asthma will benefit from two types of medication: one they use daily to prevent asthma attacks ("controller" medications or inhalers), and one they use to relieve symptoms ("rescue" inhalers). Children with asthma should carry a rescue inhaler with them or have one readily available to them at school. It is important that when children develop symptoms, they and their caregivers or teachers know how to administer the medication and do so quickly.

Consistent use of controller medications can prevent many asthma attacks and help children lead a normal, physically active life. How and when medications are used may vary from season to season, depending on what an individual child's triggers are.

Typical triggers include: exercise; colds and flu; laughing or crying hard; allergens from plants, animals, house dust, cockroach droppings or mold; and irritants such as cold air, chemicals and smoke.

Dr. Cydulka recommends that you do what you can to limit your child's exposure to his or her asthma triggers. For example, if your child is allergic to furry animals, minimize his or her exposure to them at friends' houses and in the classroom at school. If cold air is a trigger, arrange for your child to exercise indoors during the winter instead of outdoors. If dust is a trigger, replace carpeting with wood, tile or vinyl floor coverings.

Be sure to get your child a flu shot as soon as they are available in the fall. A recent study by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention showed that only 30 percent of children with asthma get the flu shot, even though flu can be fatal for people with asthma.

Even with the best planning, some children will have asthma attacks that require immediate attention from an emergency physician at the emergency department. The following conditions should prompt a call for emergency help (911 in most areas):

Symptoms do not improve quickly after the use of rescue inhalers; the child strains to breathe or cannot complete a sentence without pausing for breath or the child's lips or fingernails turn blue.

Older children (ages 11-17) have the lowest rate of emergency department visits, but the highest rate of death from asthma. It suggests that although they are more independent than younger children in many areas, they still need close monitoring by their parents for signs that their asthma symptoms are worsening and in need of medical attention.

"Emergency physicians want your children to lead fully active, energetic lives without visiting the emergency department," said Dr. Cydulka. "However, if your child is in trouble, we will be there to get him or her back in action as quickly as possible."

ACEP is a national medical specialty society representing emergency medicine with more than 25,000 members. ACEP is committed to advancing emergency care through continuing education, research and public education. Headquartered in Dallas, Texas, ACEP has 53 chapters representing each state, as well as Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. A Government Services Chapter represents emergency physicians employed by military branches and other government agencies.

Doctors Recognize DVT Awareness Month

The Illinois State Medical Society (ISMS) announced its support of March as "Deep Vein Thrombosis (DVT) Awareness Month," joining a national effort to raise awareness of this serious condition that affects up to two million Americans annually. While preventable, almost 30,000 die each year from DVT and its primary complication, pulmonary embolism, more than breast cancer and AIDS combined.

"Few people have heard of DVT, and even fewer know whether they are at risk for this common condition," said ISMS President Peter E. Eupierre, M.D. "DVT Awareness Month" provides an excellent opportunity for the general public and health care community to learn about this preventable and often silent killer."

DVT occurs when a blood clot forms in one of the large veins, usually in the legs, leading to either partially or completely blocked circulation. If left untreated, this clot has the potential to move into the lungs and create a pulmonary embolism requiring immediate medical attention.

The easiest way to determine your risk of developing DVT is to take the ISMS-sponsored DVT Risk Assessment Tool, which can be found at www.isms.org. Renowned national venous disease expert and ISMS member, Joseph A. Caprini, M.D., designed this survey based on years of research done by top experts in the venous disease field.

"The DVT self-evaluation is designed to make both you and your doctor aware of your personal history factors that may indicate whether you're at risk for developing a DVT," Dr. Caprini said. "I highly encourage everyone to complete the survey and discuss your results with your doctor."

DVT is often referred to as "economy-class syndrome" or "traveler's thrombosis" because long flights in coach cabins occasionally have led to DVT-related fatalities. Extended inactivity can cause blood to pool in the legs' deep veins, setting the stage for dangerous clotting. NBC war correspondent David Bloom was a casualty of DVT after spending days cramped in a military tank while covering the war in Iraq in 2003. More recently, it was reported that Vice President Cheney was treated by doctors for having DVT in his leg.

Certain individuals may be at increased risk for developing DVT; however, it can occur in almost anyone. Additional risk factors include, but are not limited to: restricted mobility, smoking, oral contraceptives, recent pregnancy, obesity, high blood pressure, and varicose veins.

Fortunately, if caught in time, DVT is complete treatable. The classic signs of DVT, especially if it occurs in the lower extremities, are: pain, swelling, tenderness, redness, and discoloration of the skin.

About half of the time, DVT has no symptoms at all. By the time a person shows symptoms of a pulmonary embolism, it might be too late to receive emergency care. Typical symptoms of a pulmonary embolism are: shortness of breath, rapid pulse, sweating, sharp chest pain that worsens with deep breathing, low blood pressure, unconsciousness, and coughing up blood.

DVT Awareness Month is being sponsored by the Coalition to Prevent Deep-Vein Thrombosis (DVT) to raise awareness of this serious medical condition among consumers, health care professionals, government and public health leaders. The Coalition is comprised of more than 40 representatives from nationally known medical societies, patient advocacy groups and other public health organizations.

Power Wheelchairs Available

The Senior Wheels USA Program makes available power wheelchairs to senior citizens and the permanently disabled at no cost to the recipient, if they qualify.

The power wheelchairs are provided to those who can no longer walk safely, nor self-propel a manual wheelchair, and who meet the additional guidelines of the program.

If the patient's need is for use in the home, call for more information to see if they qualify. Call toll-free at 1-800-246-6010.

The Senior Wheels USA Program's main purpose and goal is to develop public awareness that there are assistance options that allow senior citizens (as well as the permanently disabled) to remain independent in their own homes. Without this awareness and assistance, the family may prematurely choose a nursing home, or make an unnecessary retail purchase on power mobility equipment.

Those who do not meet all the requirements of the program, may still be able to get help through the donation program. This is made available when people call wanting to donate their power wheelchairs that are no longer needed.

Introduce Midwifery Licensing Bill

A bill to license homebirth midwives based on the certified professional midwife (CPM) credential has been introduced in the State Senate. Currently, Illinois is in the midst of a Homebirth Crisis. While each year 800 babies are born at home, licensed homebirth practices are found in only four of 102 Illinois counties. Due to the extreme shortage of homebirth providers, Illinois' homebirth-mothers often are limited to those sub-standard options: hiring unlicensed providers, birthing unattended (without any provider at all), or traveling to meet midwives in out-of-state hotels.

"Illinois is experiencing this maternity care crisis because our statutes are outdated," stated Rachel Dolan Wickersham, President, Coalition for Illinois Midwifery. Wickersham continues, "The American Public Health Association has encouraged licensing of direct-entry midwives since 2001, yet our lawmakers have been slow to take action on initiatives recognizing these evidence-based maternity care providers."

Senate Bill 385, sponsored by Senator William Haine is the answer. SB 385 allows for the licensure of homebirth midwives based on the certified professional midwife (CPM) credential. Licensing homebirth midwives based on this credential makes sense. It is the only credential that validates homebirth knowledge, training and experience. Utilizing a national certification as a licensing standard eliminates the need to develop a state-licensing exam and is thus cost-efficient. As more and more states regulate homebirth midwifery, the CPM credential is quickly becoming the standard for licensing homebirth midwives. Within the past year Virginia, Utah and Wisconsin passed similar legislation bringing the number of states which license certified professional midwives to 22. Concurrently, childbirth advocates in Indiana, Missouri, South Dakota, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Georgia, Delaware and Idaho are seeking legislative action to license homebirth midwives based on the certified professional midwife credential.

CPMs are certified by the North American Registry of Midwives (NARM). The National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA) accredits NARM. The goal of NCCA is to ensure the health, welfare, and safety of the public through the accreditation of certification programs that access professional competency. Its standards exceed the requirements set forth by the American Psychological Association. The NCCA accredits over 150 certifying programs including those administered by the American Academy of Nurse-Practitioners and the National Certification Corporation for the Obstetric Gynecologic and Neonatal Nursing Specialties.

Senator Haine has received numerous compelling letters of support for this bill. The letters are from licensed homebirth nurse-midwives, certified professional midwives who have ceased practicing in Illinois, and women of childbearing age who personally are grappling with Illinois' Homebirth Crisis. The Illinois Chapter of the American College of Nurse-Midwives also supports passage of SB 385. Grassroots support is unprecedented. Pat Cole, President of Illinois Families For Midwifery (IFFM), reports that nearly three-quarters of the Illinois Senate have been contacted by homebirth supporters in favor of this bill. "This bill is important to families. Families will know whether or not a midwife is adequately trained," states Cole. "This bill allows only those who have passed a rigorous national certification exam to hold themselves out as Licensed Midwives."

Community Banking Week In Illinois

The Community Bankers Assn. of Illinois has scheduled its 17th annual "Illinois Community Banking Week" for April 1st to 17th during National Community Banking Month. The purpose of Community Banking Week is to highlight the importance of community banks to their respective local economies.

CBAI member bankers are pleased to again take advantage of this annual opportunity to bring the community banking message to Illinois. "This year's theme, 'A World of Banking Solutions,' represents how 'Real Community Banks' can, through technology, offer sophisticated solutions to small businesses, agricultural customers, an individual community banking customers," said CBAI Chairman Brian Kiley, executive vice-president of First East Side Savings Bank, Chicago. "Further, our member banks are thoroughly involved in their communities, recognize their special needs and opportunities, and assist in fulfilling the dreams of their customers."

CBAI is a professional trade association representing nearly 500 Illinois commercial banks and thrifts, and their 650 Illinois bank branches. Its members have $49 billion in assets and employ approximately 18,000 individuals.

Medical Marijuana Bill Clears Senate

Members of the Illinois Senate Public Health Committee passed a medical marijuana bill, 6-4, after receiving written and oral testimony from medical professionals, patients, and policy experts.

S.B. 650, introduced by Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago), is one of about a dozen medical marijuana bills currently under consideration by state legislatures across the country. Medical marijuana policy experts said they expect the bill, which would protect from arrest seriously ill patients who use medical marijuana with a doctor's recommendation, to go to the Senate floor for a full vote within a month.

Committee members heard testimony from multiple sclerosis patient and Illinois Drug Education and Legislative (IDEAL) Reform board member Julie Falco of Chicago. They also considered written testimony from several other patients and experts, including registered nurse and multiple sclerosis patient Gretchen Steele of Coulterville, and psychiatrist Dr. Zulima Hurtado of Round Lake Park, who argued that her experience treating patients indicated medical choices are best left between doctors and patients.

"Medical treatment as a whole should be a choice between a doctor and the patient," she wrote. "The operative word being choice."

"I can tell you from firsthand experience that marijuana works better to control the spasticity, neuropathic pain, and tremors than do any of the myriad prescription medications that I currently take," she wrote to the committee. "The fact that it is perfectly legal for my doctors to prescribe morphine, OxyCodone, diazepam, hydrocodone, and other drugs that are not only highly addictive but have many unpleasant side effects, yet it remains illegal to recommend marijuana, is beyond reasoning."

Although federal law makes patients who use doctor-recommended medical marijuana criminals, 11 states have effective laws protecting patients for whom serious research proves the medicine is safe and effective, including those suffering from symptoms associated with life-threatening diseases such as cancer, HIV/AIDS, multiple sclerosis, and hepatitis C.

With more than 20,000 members and 100,000 e-mail subscribers nationwide, the Marijuana Policy Project is the largest marijuana policy reform organization in the United States. MPP believes that the best way to minimize the harm associated with marijuana is to regulate marijuana in a manner similar to alcohol. For more information, visit www.MarijuanaPolicy.org.

Prepared For Severe Storms & Dangers

March has come in like a lion in many parts of the state, reminding us that the advent of spring and warmer weather also brings the potential for severe thunderstorms and tornados. As part of Severe Storm Preparedness Week Safe Electricity advises everyone to be prepared for these storms and the electrical hazards they can leave behind.

"Assemble a kit of essentials, like battery-operated flashlight and radio," said Molly Hall, Safe Electricity Executive Director. "Keep a list of emergency phone numbers that includes the electric utility. Be prepared for the possibility of a prolonged outage due to power line and electric equipment damage."

Fill spare containers with water for washing, and keep a supply of bottled drinking water on hand. Keep a supply of non-perishable food items, along with a hand opener for canned food.

During an outage, switch off lights and appliances to prevent overloading circuits and damaging appliances when power is restored. Leave one lamp or switch on as a signal for when your power returns.

If after a storm or disaster, the power to your home is out for a prolonged period, know important safety rules, such as never using a charcoal or gas grill to cook inside! And if you use a standby generator, make sure a transfer safety switch is used, or connect the appliance(s) directly to the generator. This prevents electricity from traveling back through the power lines, also known as "back feed." Back feed creates danger for anyone near lines, particularly crews working to restore power.

When venturing outside after a severe storm, stay away from downed power lines and be alert to the possibility that tree limbs or debris may hide an electrical hazard. Assume that any dangling wires you encounter are electrical, and treat all downed or hanging power lines as if they are energized. Warn others to stay away and contact the electric utility.

If you are driving and come upon a downed power line, stay in your vehicle, warn others to stay away and contact emergency personnel or electric utility. Also when driving, be careful at intersections where traffic lights may be out. Stop at all railroad crossings, and treat road intersections with traffic signals as a four-way stop before proceeding with caution.

"Before re-entering storm-damaged buildings or rooms, be sure all electric and gas services are turned off," said Hall. "Never attempt to turn off power at the breaker box if you must stand in water to do so. If you can't reach your breaker box safely, call your electric utility to shut off power at the meter."

Never step into a flooded basement or other area if water is covering electrical outlets, appliances or cords. Be alert to any electrical equipment that could be energized and in contact with water. Never touch electrical appliances, cords or wires while you are wet or standing in water.

"Cleaning up and using water-damaged appliances also carry safety risks," said Jay Solomon, University of Illinois Extension Engineering Educator. "Electric motors in appliances that have been drenched or submerged should be thoroughly cleaned and reconditioned before they are put back into service. It may be necessary to repair or replace electrical appliances or tools that have been in contact with water. Do not use any water-damaged appliance until a professional has checked it out."

For more information on electrical safety, visit the www.SafeElectric.org. Spanish versions of electrical safety information also are available on this Web site.

Safe Electricity is an electrical safety public awareness program created and supported by a coalition of dozens of organizations, including electric utilities, the University of Illinois and other entities committed to promoting electrical safety.

Trinity Lutheran Preschool Holds Open House

Trinity Lutheran Preschool, 9701 S. Brandt Ave., announced its spring Open House. It will be held on Friday, March 23rd from 6:30 to 8 p.m. The children have been working on projects during the year to display at the open house. Everyone is invited and refreshments will be served.

Trinity Lutheran Preschool, which began in 1984, is a state-licensed preschool for three and four year olds. The preschool provides opportunities and activities which help children develop and maintain their basic needs and encourage social, emotional, physical and cognitive growth. All readiness skills for kindergarten are experienced.

For information, or to set up an appointment to view the school, call Cathy Cepican, Director at (708) 422-0193.

Children Create "Magnetic Poems"

Children of all ages are invited to celebrate National Poetry Month by creating a "magnetic poem" to be put on display in the Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., during the month of April. Poems are composed by cutting out and pasting words from a selection provided. Participants may also opt to decorate their poem with artwork. Forms are available at the Youth Services Desk. The deadline to turn in submissions is Saturday, March 24.

If you would like to have further information about this and other children's activities, please feel free to call (708) 422-4990 or visit the library's web site at www.oaklawnlibrary.org.

Library Adds World Languages Books

The Youth Services Dept. consulted to select titles that of the Oak Lawn Public are both informative and educational. These books $1,000 grant from the Target Corporation to fund the creation of a World Languages collection of Arabic and bilingual reading materials for children. Several area teachers were consulted to select titles that will be integrated into the library's regular children's collection as soon as they arrive. For additional information, call the Youth Services Dept. at (708) 422-4990.

Lenten Series

Melody Leimnitzer will speak at the Pilgrim Faith Church Lenten Series on March 21st about her experiences in New Orleans and Biloxi helping clean up and rebuilding after Katrina. The program begins at 7:15 p.m., preceded by a light supper of soup, bread, cheese and fruit at 6:30 p.m. Participants will also assemble "disaster clean up kits" to be distributed after future hurricanes, tornadoes or floods.

A children's program for those in kindergarten through eighth grade will meet at the same time. Child care is provided for children younger than kindergarten.

Pilgrim Faith United Church of Christ is at 9411 S. 51st Ave. The public is invited to attend. For more information, call the church at (708) 422-4200.

About Civic Participation

On Tuesday, March 6, Oak Lawn Park District Commissioner Mary Margaret Wallace and Ridgeland School District 122 Board of Education Member Ashraf "Ash" Rabah spoke with high school students about getting involved in their community.

"As a public official I think it is important to encourage young people to get involved in their community and that their input helps directly shape government policy," said Rabah, who was elected as a school board member when he was 25. "Many teenagers at this age are thinking about what direction they want to go in life and are deciding on what interests them. It is important to share experiences with teenagers so they are encouraged to pursue their goals in life."

Ala Gebarin, a student at Oak Forest High School, invited Wallace and Rabah to speak to her government class. Students asked the pair about their experiences as elected officials, their goals and the issues they have worked on in their respective positions.

Rabah talked about his dedication to District 122's schools. As soon as he took office, Rabah used his background in finance to address fiscal issues within the school district. Fellow board members noticed his hard work and quickly appointed him as chairman of the finance committee. Rabah told the students that district officials have had to make many tough choices because of irresponsible decisions made by past board members. Rabah said it is rewarding to be a part of the decision-making process for the school system that he grew up with as a student.

Wallace spoke with students about the variety of people elected officials meet and the importance of remaining steadfast in goals and beliefs. As a commissioner, Wallace has spoken with many residents and suggested ideas to improve the park district. She spoke about the decision-making process and the importance of patience and fortitude when working on issues that best serve the community's interest.

"Public service, whether in not-for-profits or in government, can be an enriching, worthwhile experience," said Wallace, who was elected at age 22. "Young people need strong encouragement when it comes to getting involved in their community and I hope many of the young people in this classroom today consider helping to transform the world around them."

Richards High School Decathlon Team Qualifies For State Finals

The varsity Academic Decathlon team from Richards High School qualified for the state finals for the fifth straight year on March 10. Only 16 teams earned places for the Illinois finals.

Students who won medals at the state finals included Tom Gacek (second place, Math); Jasser Khairallah (second place, Speech); and, Brian Greco (fourth place, Speech).

The team qualified for the state finals with an outstanding performance at the sectional meet, where every player won at least one medal.

Academic Decathlon students compete in Math, Science, Economics, Speech, Interview, Essay, Language and Literature, Art, Music, and Super Quiz.

Student Art Exhibit

The Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., will host an art exhibit of works created by students of Oak Lawn Hometown Middle School. Members of the community are invited to stop by the Youth Services Department to view dozens of pieces on display March 19th through April 15th.

For more information, call (708) 422-4990.

Wellness & Health Fair

In conjunction with a LifeSource Blood Drive, the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a Health & Wellness Fair on Wednesday, March 21st. The event will be held at the Oak Lawn Senior Center, 5330 W. 95th St. The Fair will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Admission is free.

LifeSource, a Chamber member, will be on hand from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. to accept blood donations via its mobile collection unit. Those interested in donating blood are asked to make a reservation through the Chamber office by calling (708) 424-8300. During the Health & Wellness Fair, Chamber businesses will showcase their services by offering free spinal screenings, bone density screenings, product and coupon sampling, etc.

LifeSource is an important member of the Oak Lawn community, serving as the main provider of blood components, like Red Blood Cells, to area hospitals including Advocate Christ/Hope Children's & Little Company of Mary. On a daily basis, LifeSource aims to collect between 1,100 and 1,500 pints of blood; however, it currently is struggling to meet this target.

For additional information, call (708) 424-8300, or email office@oaklawnchamber.com.

'A Proud Past. A Brighter Future'

Moraine Valley is observing its 40th anniversary this year with a variety of events and activities, highlighting the accomplishments and history of the school since the community voted February 18, 1967, to establish the college.

"We are so pleased that we have been able to provide educational programs and services to our 26 communities for the past 40 years, and we look forward to continuing to serve our students with quality education and training," Dr. Vernon O. Crawley, college president, said. "Moraine Valley has had many achievements since its founding, and this gives us a great opportunity to reflect, celebrate and look forward to what the next decade may bring."

The nine-month observance began Feb. 15th when the Board of Trustees approved a resolution stating that "Moraine Valley Community College declare the occasion of its 40th anniversary a celebration of its proud past and brighter future."

The activities planned will be part of regularly scheduled events such as the students' Spring Fest in April and participation in the Blue Island and Robbins parades this summer. A community lecture is planned for the fall featuring a noted authority on 1960s. Additionally, there will be a photo display in the library and a Web page devoted to the past 40 years. The Moraine Valley Foundation's Starry, Starry Night in April will feature a 40th anniversary-1967 theme and will recognize community members who initiated the effort to establish the college.

"We are proud of the relationship we have developed with our community and the support we have received over the years," Dr. Crawley said. "This year gives us an opportunity to celebrate that relationship and see how we can deepen it."

Free Child ID Program

Officers from the Oak Lawn Police Dept. will be on hand to create free Child IDs at the Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., on Saturday, March 24th from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. These two-page reports include a color photo, fingerprints and other information that could assist authorities with locating children in the event of an emergency. No advance registration required. Families may stop by anytime during this three-hour time span to make an appointment for that day.

For more information, please feel free to call the Youth Services Dept. at (708) 422-4990.

St. Pat-St. Joe Dinner

Join the family of Our Lady of Loretto in honoring Joseph's Table. Admission is $15 per family or $10 per person and $5 for senior citizens. There will also be an open bar and raffles. For more information, call (708) 424-7471.

Business Showcase

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce will host the 8th Annual Business Showcase on Saturday, March 24th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Spartan Gym of Oak Lawn Community High School. More than 50 businesses are expected to participate by showcasing their various products and services.

"The Chamber of Commerce encourages area residents to 'Shop Oak Lawn First!' and the Business Showcase presents an ideal opportunity to meet with local business owners and learn more about their valuable offerings," says George Cachares, Showcase chairperson.

The Oak Lawn Chamber will use a portion of the proceeds from the Showcase to award two $500 college scholarships to eligible Oak Lawn Community seniors.

The Business Showcase is held in conjunction with the Spring Arts and Crafts Fair, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher School Association. In addition to free activities and giveaways for children, the Easter Bunny will be on hand for free photographs.

For more information, or for an application, call the Chamber office at (708) 424-8300 or email office@oaklawnchamber.com. Booth fees are $85 for Chamber members, $170 for non-members and are assigned on a first-come, first-served basis. As a special offer, non-members wishing to join the Chamber will have the balance of their $170 applied to their first-year membership dues.

OAK LAWN LIBRARY EVENTS

The Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., invites students in third through fifth grade to participate in a monthly Holiday Club from 4 to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, March 20th and April 24th. Registered members create crafts for an upcoming holiday that they may take home or put on display at the library. This program is open to Oak Lawn residents and students of Oak Lawn schools. Sign up at the Youth Services Desk.

The Friends of the Oak Lawn Library will host a bus trip to see a matinee performance of "Menopause The Musical" on Wednesday, April 18th at the Copley Theatre of the Paramount Arts Centre in Aurora. An in-person registration will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturday, March 17th at the library. Enjoy a joyful and hilarious celebration of women who are on the brink of, in the middle of, or have survived "The Change," with 25 re-lyricized classic baby boomer hits. "Menopause The Musical" has been entertaining and inspiring women coast-to-coast and internationally since March 2001. The cost of this trip, which includes motor coach transportation and admission, is $50 for Friends members and $55 for others. The bus will depart at 12:30 and return at 5 p.m. Be advised that this trip is not wheelchair accessible. After the in-person registration closes, call (708) 422-4990 to find out how you can purchase tickets.

Army Pvt. William V. Richard Jr. has graduated from One Station Unit Training (OSUT) at Fort Sill, Lawton, Oklahoma. He is the son of William and Sheila Richard of Burbank. Richard graduated in 2002 from Reavis High School in Burbank and received a degree in 2003 from the Environmental Technical Institute in Blue Island, Illinois.

The Coalition of Veterans Organizations (CVO) buses will depart for Washington from the Jesse Brown Veterans Medical Center, 820 S. Damen Ave., on Monday, March 19th at 5:30 p.m.

Several busloads of Chicago veterans will visit Washington D.C. on March 20th to press legislators to improve VA health care, including expanding access for veterans of Iraq and Afghanistan.

Grassroots veterans groups and local chapters of national organizations have banded together in the Coalition of Veterans Organizations to build pressure for mandatory funding for VA health care and other reforms.

One issue is extending access to care for veterans back from Iraq and Afghanistan. Unlike veterans of other wars, new veterans get only two years of free care before they must prove a service-related disability or start paying fees and co-payments that can run into thousands of dollars. It particularly affects veterans having trouble readjusting due to post-traumatic stress symptoms.

Even if they are getting help, many vets at two years haven't gotten a final decision on disability claims, said vet counselor Ray Parrish. "Then they start getting bills for treatment that they were getting for free, and that scares people away."

CVO is calling for reform of funding for services to homeless veterans - many states get no funding at all, they say - and for accountability in VA mental health spending, where millions of dollars have been allocated but returned unspent.

They are also supporting veterans' benefits for Filipino veterans who fought in the U.S. Army in World War II when the Philippines was U.S. commonwealth. Left behind when General Douglas MacArthur evacuated, many are survivors of the Bataan Death March. About 50,000 are still alive, a few dozen in the Chicago area.

"They're called veterans when they die - they get an American flag and a burial plot, but while they're living they don't get anything," said George Mulvaney, a Marine veteran who works with the Filipino American Veterans of Illinois.

The most basic change CVO is calling for is to make VA health care funding mandatory rather than discretionary. Rather than being subject to political wrangling in the annual budget process, it would be based on a formula reflecting the number of veterans being served and the cost of their care.

VA health budgets have grown steadily, but not as fast as is needed, since the VA consistently underestimates projected demand, Rochelle Crump, National Women Veterans, said. This year the Bush administration hiked spending but proposed doubling drug co-pays and raising annual enrollment fees for some veterans as high as $750, while projecting budget reductions for the next two years in order to meet overall federal deficit reduction goals.

Meanwhile, outside experts project 20 to 30 percent of veterans of the current conflict - where 1.4 million armed forces members have already served - will require mental health services: doctors appointments can take six months to get, and specialty care a year or more; and the claims backlog is ballooning.

"When they closed Lakeside (health center) they promised a new clinic, but then that was taken away with the budget cuts, so there are more patients than ever here," said Marvin Gardner of the Veterans Strike Force as he manned the group's information table at the Jesse Brown Veterans Medical Center. (Teams of volunteer Strike Force members, mainly Vietnam vets, give directions, advice and support all day, every day, at a leaflet-laden table in the hallway outside the center's cafeteria.)

The American Legion Auxiliary will hold its Patriotic Conference on Friday, March 16th at the Hyatt Regency Woodfield Hotel. A wide-ranging agenda of speakers will discuss national security, the USO, Americanism and the organization's Girls State and Girls Nation Programs.

Hometown-Murray VFW 9773 will hold their annual St. Patrick's Day Dinner on Saturday, March 17th at the post home, 9092 Main St. in Hometown, from 4 to 8 p.m. Tickets are $7 per person. Homemade corned beef and cabbage, carrots, potatoes, coffee and dessert will be served. Corned beef sandwiches and chips will be available for $4.50. For more information, call (708) 422-9800.

VFW Auxiliary 9773 will hold a Spaghetti Dinner at the post home, 9092 Main St., on Thursday, March 22nd from 5 to 7 p.m. Everyone is invited to enjoy a delicious dinner of pasta, meatballs or Italian sausage, bread and butter, salad and dessert for a $5 donation. There will also be a "razzle dazzle" table.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Durbin Urges Duckworth's Appointment To Presidential Commission

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) recently sent a letter to President Bush asking that Iraqi war veteran Tammy Duckworth be appointed to the bipartisan Presidential Commission tasked with conducting a comprehensive review of the care the U.S. Dept. of Defense and the Veterans Administration is providing wounded servicemen and women.

In light of a number of articles that were printed earlier this month detailing the appalling conditions at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, the Bush Administration has been asked to name an independent commission to investigate all post-combat medical facilities and recommend changes. Durbin commended the President for working to establish the Commission, saying veterans' health "both physical and mental is of paramount importance."

Durbin said Duckworth had insight and experiences that would add greatly to the work of the Commission. Durbin said, "Tammy Duckworth is uniquely qualified to serve on your Commission and would provide valuable, firsthand information regarding the care given soldiers at our country's military and veterans' hospitals."

On Nov. 12th, 2004 as she was co-piloting a Black Hawk helicopter north of Baghdad, a rocket-propelled grenade struck the cockpit of her aircraft and exploded. She spent months recovering at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, faced multiple surgeries, extensive rehab and continuous upgrades of her prostheses.

Duckworth is currently serving as the Acting Director of the Illinois Dept. of Veteran's Affairs. She joined the ROTC in 1990 and was commissioned to the Army Reserve in 1992 in Illinois. In 2004, she was deployed to Iraq as a Major in the Illinois Army National Guard. After being wounded in Iraq she received care and therapy at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

"In addition to her military experience and firsthand knowledge of our nation's military hospitals, Tammy Duckworth's education and civilian career would make her a valuable member of your Commission," Durbin wrote. "I urge you to give the highest consideration to Ms. Tammy Duckworth as you work to appoint members to this important Presidential Commission."

Intersection Reconstruction

The Illinois Dept. of Transportation announced that the reconstruction of LaGrange Road (U.S. 45) at 159th St. (U.S. 6) in the city of Orland Park was scheduled to begin on March 12th, weather permitting.

The $13.5 million project includes pavement widening and reconstruction, new medians and sidewalks, retaining walls, storm sewer, water main, new lighting and traffic signals, landscaping and pavement marking. The goal is to improve traffic flow through the intersection.

Pre-stage work will include the construction of temporary pavement in mid-March. Stage I consists of the construction of the southbound lanes on US 45 and the westbound lanes on US 6. This work is scheduled for completion in August 2007.

Stage II consists of the construction of the median and turn lanes, which is scheduled for completion by November 2007. Stage III will begin in March of 2008 and involves the reconstruction of the eastbound lanes of US 6 and the northbound lanes of US 45 will be constructed. The job is scheduled for completion in August 2008.

When the project is complete, LaGrange Road will include three through lanes, two left-turn lanes and one right-turn lane in each direction at 159th St. On 159th St. the roadway will have two through lanes, two left-turn lanes and one right-turn lane for both directions of traffic at LaGrange Road.

The project also will include extensive landscaping with more than 1,000 trees and nearly 12,000 perennials planted in the area.

Motorists are advised to expect major delays, to allow extra time to drive through the work zone, and to seek alternative routes if possible. In addition, drivers are urged to use extreme caution when workers are present.

Girl Scout Cookies Go Drive-Thru

Everyone loves Girl Scout cookies. They practically sell themselves - as long as there's a Girl Scout standing behind the sweet treat. During the last two weekends in March though, it's going to be even easier to purchase those delectable little delights - from the convenience of your own vehicle!

That's right! Girl Scout cookies are going drive-thru! On the weekends of March 24th and 25th, and March 31st and April 1st, from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Girl Scouts - Prairie Winds will be holding a massive drive-thru cookie sale at the council headquarters, 2400 Ogden Ave. in Lisle. It's quicker, easier and more convenient to buy than ever before, and it's the last chance to purchase Girl Scout cookies this year. Customers simply have to drive into the office parking lot, place an order, and troops will give them their cookies right then and there. It's that simple!

All varieties of cookies will be available for sale by the truckload - classic Thin Mints, Samoas with coconut and caramel, Tagalong peanut butter patties covered with chocolate, Do-si-do peanut butter cremes, Trefoil shortbread cookies, All About shortbread cookies with fudge coating on the bottom, cinnamon biscotti Café Cookies, and sugar-free Little Brownies.

Plus, all varieties of cookies are now "zero trans fat per serving," in compliance with FDA regulations. This change was made because, like most successful businesswomen, Girl Scouts listen to their customers.

The cookie program is enjoyable to everyone: girls benefit from the experience while consumers satisfy their sweet tooth. Girl Scout Cookie activities are directly related to the Girl Scout goal of helping girls realize their potential and become leading, model citizens. Consumers who buy cookies from their local Girl Scouts can be assured that girls are the ultimate beneficiaries of ALL the revenue from the cookie program. All of the funds raised stay within the local council to benefit girls directly through troop/group earnings and indirectly by subsidizing the cost of providing the Girl Scout program to every girl member. When ordering Girl Scout cookies, it's not about just getting a box of great cookies - it's about making a difference in the lives of more than 20,000 Girl Scouts.

The council is located at 2400 Ogden Ave. in Lisle at the intersection of Ogden and Old Tavern Road. For further information on the drive-thru sale, call (630) 544-5900 or go to www.girlscoutspw.org.

Chicago Teachers Union Backs Governor's Helping Kids Learn Plan

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich was joined recently by Chicago Public Schools Superintendent Arne Duncan and Chicago Teacher's Union President Marilyn Stewart at Nettelhorst Elementary to build support for the Helping Kids Learn plan, the governor's plan to invest an unprecedented $10 billion in schools over the next four years – nearly three times bigger than any increase in state history. Duncan endorsed the governor's education proposal, which would provide more than $395 million in new capital and operating funds to the Chicago Public School system in fiscal year 2008. In past decades, Illinois schools have been chronically neglected and consistently underfunded, but in the past four years, Gov. Blagojevich provided $3.8 billion in new dollars to Illinois schools which boosted education funding to record levels.

Helping Kids Learn continues the governor's commitment to schools by boosting funding by an unprecedented $1.5 billion in fiscal year 2008. Under the plan, general state aid to schools will increase by $800 million, raising the Foundation Level by $686 to $6,020. With more funds per pupil, schools can make investments to improve textbook quality, modernize their technology, or invest in teachers.

Under the plan, the state will give schools additional funds to help afford special education teachers with $200 million in new spending that will increase the state's reimbursement rate for special education teachers – the first increase districts have seen since 1985. With $153 million, the governor's plan will fully fund 'mandated categorical' programs like special education and transportation. Chicago Public Schools will receive a 100 percent reimbursement for these costs and a $4.6 million increase in funding for bilingual education.

The plan will accelerate implementation of Preschool for All with $69 million in state support and dedicate additional resources for school districts that provide full-day kindergarten. With a $25.6 million increase in funding for early childhood education, ISBE and CPS conservatively predict this increase will allow CPS to serve approximately 3,000 more kids in FY08.

The Helping Kids Learn plan provides $100 million to support under-performing school districts that invest in after-school tutoring, curriculum and textbook enhancements, longer school days or other proven strategies that raise student achievement.

The plan will also invest $1.5 billion in a capital construction plan for projects to improve and upgrade classrooms and schools so children can learn and teachers can teach in a more conducive environment. In FY08, Chicago Public Schools would receive up to $112 million for capital projects within the district.

The governor's Tax Fairness Plan, unveiled during his budget address, will raise funds for schools, healthcare, and paying down pension debt. In Illinois, the share of state revenues coming from individual income taxes has consistently increased during each of the last three decades. The state income tax burden lies primarily with individuals – many who are struggling to make ends meet – while the burden on businesses has gone down, even while corporations are posting record profits. Gov. Blagojevich's Tax Fairness Plan will reverse that trend.

The governor's Tax Fairness Plan implements a Gross Receipts Tax (GRT) that has been embraced by many economists because of its broad base and low rates. States including Washington, Delaware and Hawaii have had a GRT for years and recently, Ohio and Texas have adopted a form of the tax. The tax will better reflect the changes in Illinois' economy since the Corporate Income Tax was implemented 30 years ago when goods dominated the state's economy. Today 'new economy' businesses – primarily services – represent the majority of Illinois' business activity. In fact, goods-based businesses make up only 35 percent of Illinois' economy, but pay 53 percent of the corporate income tax; services-based businesses make up 65 percent of Illinois' economy, but pay only 47 percent of the Corporate Income Tax.

The GRT will only apply to businesses that make more than $1 million each year, which means that small businesses – 75 percent of all businesses in Illinois – will be exempt. The GRT will tax service industries at a low 1.8 percent, while manufacturers, construction, retail and wholesale companies will be taxed at an even lower .5 percent. Exports will not be taxed. The plan also mitigates costs being passed on to consumers by excluding certain goods, such as retail food and pharmaceuticals. By transitioning to the GRT, Illinois will rid itself from loopholes that major corporations have exploited and used to their advantage to avoid paying their fair share of taxes to the state, and is expected to generate $3 billion in new revenue in fiscal year 2008, and more than $6 billion during its first full year in effect.

PMA Easter Workshops

The Polish Museum of America, 984 N. Milwaukee Avenue, is getting ready for Easter by offering several seasonal workshops. On Saturday, March 31, there will be two sessions for Palm Weaving. The workshops will be held at 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m. for ages 7 and up. Learn a traditional Polish Easter fold art. Participants must be on time because step-by-step instructions will be given.

Reservations are required. Fees are $4 for PMA members; $8 for non-members and $3 per child under 12. Refreshments will be served.

On Sunday, April 1st, the PMA is offering a Pisanki Workshop where you can learn the ancient art of decorating eggs using a stylus and melted beeswax. The workshop will be held at the Polish Museum of America from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. for ages 16 and up.

Fees for this workshop are $10 for PMA members and $15 for non-members. Hand decorated Easter eggs from Poland will be sold. Reservations and advanced payment are required due to limited space.

Also on April 1st, from 1 to 3 p.m. for kids ages 7 and up, Stanislaw Gasior will teach kids "Artistic Egg Painting," painting on the surface of the egg instead of on a canvas. Participants must be on time for step-by-step instructions. Reservations are required.

Fees for PMA members are $10; for non-members $15 per adult; children under 12, $7. Hand-painted wooden eggs from Poland will be sold.

Materials for both of these programs are included in the fee. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call (773) 384-3352, Ext. 104.

Great Lakes Day

Congressman Dan Lipinski celebrated Great Lakes Day and Clean Environment Week by helping move three key water quality bills through the House of Representatives and by holding a hearing to consider other policy proposals for protecting and restoring the Great Lakes.

Congressman Lipinski helped pass the three bills in the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee in February, and recently he helped pass them on the House floor. Congressman Lipinski is the only Chicago-area representative to serve on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee.

"Protecting and restoring the Great Lakes is critical for everyone, whether you want to swim, fish, boat, lie on the beach or – most importantly – just have clean water to drink," said Lipinski. "This has always been a priority of mine and I am happy that we were able to take a step forward by getting these important clean water bills passed. Increased federal funding for water infrastructure is essential to the economic and environmental health of the Great Lakes, the Chicago region, and the nation."

On Wednesday, March 7th, by a vote of 367 to 58, the House of Representatives approved the Water Quality Investment Act of 2007 (H.R. 569) to authorize appropriations for the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) sewer overflow control grant program, despite opposition from the White House. This bill would aid cities and states in building and improving sewer infrastructure to prevent the dumping of sewage into lakes and rivers.

On Thursday, March 8th, the House approved the Healthy Communities Water Supply Act of 2007 (H.R. 700). This bill would authorize $125 million under the Clean Water Act for EPA grants to fund projects that increase usable water supply by encouraging innovation in water reclamation, reuse, and conservation. Also, the House passed the third water quality bill, the Water Quality Financing Act of 2007 (H.R. 720). This bill would reauthorize the Clean Water State Revolving Fund to provide $20 billion over five years in loans for water-pollution-abatement projects that assist communities in meeting their water quality infrastructure goals.

Earlier in the week, Congressman Lipinski hosted an ad hoc congressional hearing at the Shedd Aquarium highlighting the deteriorating condition of the Great Lakes. The representatives heard testimony from federal, local and environmental experts regarding threats to the lakes' ecosystems and ongoing restoration efforts.

Improvements To Driver Services Facilities

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently awarded $2,389,000 to upgrade the electrical systems in three state Driver Services facilities in Chicago, projects that will protect the state's investment in the buildings and help the Illinois Secretary of State maintain good customer service levels.

"I want to commend Gov. Blagojevich and thank the Capital Development Board for providing the funding needed to upgrade these important facilities," said Secretary of State Jesse White. "These funds will help my office continue to deliver the high level of service that Illinois citizens deserve."

The money awarded by Gov. Blagojevich will fund projects to upgrade the electrical distribution systems in the Secretary of State Driver Services facilities at 5301 W. Lexington Ave., 5401 N. Elston and 9901 S. Martin Luther King Jr. Drive. All three are identical, 27,600-square-foot, two-story buildings constructed in 1959. Work will include new panels, wiring devices, branch circuits and feeders. New lighting will be added in certain areas, and a new emergency generator will be installed at each location. Hazardous materials will be abated as necessary.

The projects will be overseen by the Capital Development Board (CDB), which manages all state-funded construction, repair and rehabilitation projects.

"The project designer for work on these three facilities will soon be selected, with construction bids to follow once the design is complete," said CDB Executive Director Jan Grimes.

Illinois Poison Center Expands Latino Outreach Program

The Illinois Poison Center is proud to announce a new partnership with HISPANOCARE to continue building on its success in reaching out to Illinois' Latino community. To further expand its reach to this underserved population, the poison center recently launched its Web site in Spanish.

Historically, the IPC has documented lower utilization rates of the call center by the Latino Community. To address this trend, the IPC increased poison prevention education efforts for this population by translating all of its education materials to better serve the Spanish-speaking community, and increased funding for its Latino Outreach Satellite Education Centers, which are supported by the Lloyd A. Fry Foundation and Polk. Bros. Foundation, to provide community-based education.

"Poison prevention education has the greatest effect on families with small children," explains Vickie Dance, public education manager, IPC. "It can change the way parents look at their environment and give them strategies to create healthy and safe homes for themselves, their families and communities."

One of the IPC's Latino Outreach Satellite Education Centers is located at Sinai Community Institute on Chicago's near west side serving a predominantly Hispanic community. Since the inception of the satellite center in 2003, and its subsequent poison prevention education efforts, the IPC has noted a 23 percent reduction in pediatric (children 5 and under) calls from emergency departments in the Mount Sinai catchment area. It is estimated that this saves more than $100,000 per year.

While all intensive care units and medical admissions to hospitals located near the IPC satellite center reported to the IPC are more or less stable, the pediatric admissions have decreased by 36 percent in this same area. This is a direct measure of a severe poisoning prevented through the efforts of poison prevention education in the community. According to Illinois Department of Public Health data for children admitted for poisoning in the city of Chicago birth through 4 years of age, the average charge was $7,000 per admission. This translates to an additional savings of $117,000 in health care dollars in 2006. Furthermore, this reduction on severe poisoning reduces anxiety and trauma for the effected families.

To continue this success, the IPC recently established a partnership with HISPANOCARE, a program formed in 1988 by Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center, another IPC satellite education center. To fulfill its goal of providing quality, cost-effective health care to Chicago's Latino community in a culturally sensitive manner, HISPANOCARE coordinates community health fairs, symposiums and seminars where preventive services such as diabetes screenings, cholesterol checks and mammography are offered free of charge. As part of the new collaboration, poison prevention and safety will now be a topic woven into these events. The IPC will also write articles for HISPANOCARE's bilingual newsletters, which keep members up-to-date on seasonal health concerns.

Another avenue to reach the Latino population is through the Internet. According to eMarketer, there were 16.7 million Hispanic Internet users in the United States in 2006. This total is expected to reach nearly 21 million by 2010. The IPC realizes how important it is to provide Spanish-speakers with life-saving information via the Internet and launched its entire public Web site in Spanish in 2007. The site houses poison safety information, interactive games for children and disaster preparedness resources, among many other resources.

Through these renewed efforts, the Illinois Poison Center hopes to decrease the number of poisoning incidents in the Latino community. Illinois residents interested in learning more about this program, free poison prevention education and materials are encouraged to contact IPC outreach staff at (312) 906-6125.

Launch Anti-Smoking Campaign

"Thank you. I will never smoke in my life."
"Thank you. I will quit smoking."

These are just some of the guest comments from the Chicago run of BODY WORLDS in 2005 and now, in partnership with the American Lung Assn. of Illinois and the Illinois Tobacco Quitline, BODY WORLDS 2: The Anatomical Exhibition of Real Human Bodies now at the Museum of Science and Industry launched a smoking cessation program, I Quit, on March 5th.

One of the many dramatic displays at BODY WORLDS 2 features blackened smoker's lungs in a side-by-side comparison with healthy lungs. This striking contrast has moved many exhibit guests to resolve to quit smoking, as noted in several guest letters and in guest comment books.

I Quit was conceived by BODY WORLDS in 2006 after exhibit-cleaning crews kept finding unfinished packs of cigarettes discarded on the glass display case containing the smoker's lung. "Each rejected pack marked a victory by one person against nicotine addiction," said Dr. Angelina Whalley, a physician and designer of the BODY WORLDS exhibitions. "Many visitors to the exhibition reported to us that they had tried everything to quit smoking but only stopped after seeing the smoker's lung on display."

While considering a formal smoking cessation program in conjunction with the BODY WORLDS exhibits, Dr. Whalley remembered the dramatic public service announcement by the actor, Yul Brynner, before his death from cancer in 1985. Brynner appeared on ABC's Good Morning America in January 1985 after learning that he had lung cancer, attributed to his heavy smoking. He spoke of his desire to deliver a message about smoking after his death: "I want to make a commercial and say, 'Now that I am gone, I tell you: Don't smoke, whatever you do, just don't smoke'."

"This was his last will and testament and I wished for more people to hear it," said Dr. Whalley. "I wanted to unite his powerful and heartfelt message to the smoker's lungs to inspire people to give up smoking."

BODY WORLDS 2, now featured at the Museum of Science and Industry, will continue its I Quit campaign through the duration of the exhibit run - April 29th. The awareness initiative will feature an inspirational multimedia installation that includes the memorable PSA by the late Yul Brynner, pledge cards for visitors intending to give up smoking, a repository where visitors can leave their last packs of cigarettes, and take-home information about the American Lung Assn. National LUNG Helpline and the Illinois Tobacco Quitline.

Smoking-related diseases claim an estimated 430,000 American lives each year and smoking is directly responsible for 86 percent of lung cancer cases, according to American Lung Assn. research. This habit also causes most cases of emphysema and bronchitis. Independent surveys conducted at the BODY WORLDS exhibits have revealed that 68 percent of visitors resolved to pay more attention to their physical health after seeing the exhibit. At one venue where a follow-up survey was conducted, results showed that 10 percent of visitors stated that they had smoked less and consumed less alcohol since their visit to the exhibition.

Elim Staff Member Receives Honors

Tony Rogers, an instructor in Elim's Adult Services area was recently selected as the American Association for Intellectual and Development Disabilities' (AAIDD) Direct Service Professional of the Year. He was honored for this accomplishment at the AAIDD conference.

Tony joined Elim's staff seven years ago with a bachelor's degree in education from Purdue University. He is currently responsible for teaching valuable daily living skills such as cooking, banking, personal identification, and social skills to adults with developmental disabilities. In his position, he also helps clients learn community integration skills and works with a small group of Elim's clients to prepare barbecue and marinara sauced for public sale.

Brad Johnson, who nominated Tony for the award, explained how valuable Tony was to Elim's staff. He said, "Tony has been a leader among our instructors as many use the curriculums he had developed or secured opportunities for the adults they serve from resources he has found. He challenges individuals to develop new skills and increase their abilities. Tony has turned down promotions so that he can pursue his main passion: providing unique and interesting opportunities for adults with developmental disabilities to grow and develop to full potential!"

Tony feels strongly that assisting individuals with developmental disabilities is his God-given calling. He said, "I believe my position at Elim is my Christian calling. Though my job can be challenging, I find it enjoyable and rewarding. In the 15 years that I've been working with adults with developmental disabilities, I've learned that I enjoy working with the same group of people for long periods of time. This enables me to get to know each client better and helps the clients and staff create more innovative and interesting programming."

Elim Christian School is a division of Elim Christian Services. Elim's mission is to equip children and adults with disabilities to achieve their highest God-given potential. Elim pursues this mission by providing educational, vocational, therapeutic, and residential services to over 800 persons with developmental disabilities.

Consolidated Community Development Plan
Cook County Community Development Block Grant Program
Emergency Shelter Grants Program
HOME Investment Partnership Program

DATE: Thursday, March 29, 2007
Thursday, May 10, 2007

TIME: 6:00 P.M.

PLACE: Cook County Board Room
118 North Clark Street
County Building-Room 567
Chicago, Illinois 60602

The Cook County Consolidated Community Development Plan includes the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program, the Emergency Shelter Grants (ESG) Program and the HOME Investment Partnership Program. The area covered by these programs are primarily suburban municipalities under 50,000 in population. These programs do not include the City of Chicago.

PURPOSE: The Cook County Community Development Advisory Council will hold two (2) Public Hearings for the 2007 Consolidated Community Development Program Year, which begins October 1, 2007.

The approximate amount of funds available for the 2007 Program Year are: $11,970,108 for CDBG, $464,246 for ESG and $5,843,247 for HOME, and American Dream Down payment Initiative (ADDI) $227,313.

The purpose of the first hearing, March 29, 2007, is to hear proposals from the non-municipal and emergency shelter grant applicants regarding their 2007 Program Year applications submitted to Cook County, and to hear testimony from interested persons or groups.

The purpose of the second hearing, May 10, 2007, is for the Advisory Council to approve the recommended projects for the 2007 Program Year Annual Action Plan - Year 3 of the New Consolidated Community Development Plan.

All interested persons, groups and municipalities are invited to attend and participate.

Softball Hall Of Fame

The Chicago 16" Softball Hall of Fame Dinner was recently held at Hawthorne Race Track with more than 600 people in attendance. Hosted by leading sports personalities, the 11th annual list of inductees and honorees include the best men and women players, organizers, umpires, managers and supporters of the game since the HOF inception many years ago. President Gary Thorsen stated that "it gets tougher and tougher each year because the competition is so good."

Warning Signs Of Hazardous Tree Damage

Hazardous trees pose a danger to people and property. When storms or high winds hit, limbs – and often whole trees – fall to the ground.

"Many fatal accidents and millions in property damage can be averted if homeowners heed the warning signs of a hazardous tree," explains Peter Gerstenberger, senior advisor for safety, standards and compliance for the Tree Care Industry Association. "By not paying attention to your trees, you are placing your property, even your life, in potential jeopardy."

Fortunately, one can often read the clues which indicate that a tree is prone to failure. For instance, if a tree has large branches attached with tight, V-shaped forks, you should consider having those branches removed or lightened. Other warning signs of structural instability include cracks in the trunk or major limbs, hollow and decayed areas, or the presence of extensive dead wood. Mushrooms growing from the base of the tree or under its canopy may be a sign of root decay. On the other hand, just because you may not see fungus growth does not mean there is no decay.

"It pays to be highly suspicious of any tree that has had construction activities – such as trenching, addition or removal of soil, digging or heavy equipment movement – anywhere under the spread of its branches," says Gerstenberger. These activities can cause root death, which in turn could lead to the structural instability of the tree.

The sign most people recognize is a hollow in a tree. But even a large hollow does not necessarily signify a tree has become hazardous. Nor does it mean the hollow should be filled. Filling of hollow trees, a process called "cavity filling," was practiced by arborist for many years. However, thanks to modern research, it has been discovered that cavity filling is not needed to support or improve the health of hollow trees.

Tree experts found that cavity filling with cement can actually damage a tree. According to Rouse, "the column of cement created in the tree by a cavity fill doesn't move, just like a column on a building, but the tree is always moving. It sways with the wind constantly. The rubbing created by the swaying tree and the solid column of cement further damages the tree."

Wood decay fungi that created the hollow in the first place are able to take advantage of the new injuries created by the rubbing and invade the remaining healthy tissue of the tree. If cavity filling is desired for aesthetic reasons, there are some new synthetic foams that can be sprayed into the cavity by professional arborists. These materials will bend with the swaying tree, reducing injury. However, there is really no reason to fill a cavity other than for aesthetic reasons; it doesn't improve the tree's health and doesn't offer any added support. If structural support of a tree is required, a professional arborist will recommend cables, braces, tree guys, or removing the tree, not cavity filling.

Homeowners who would like a professional arborist to assess their trees should contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a 69-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards and who are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA has the nation's only Accreditation program that helps consumers find tree care companies that have been inspected and accredited based on: adherence to industry standards for quality and safety; maintenance of trained, professional staff; and dedication to ethics and quality in business practices. An easy way to find a tree care service provider in your area is to use the "Locate Your Local TCIA Member Companies" program. You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search on the TCIA Web site, www.tcia.org.

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich Appoints Andrew Velasquez

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently appointed the head of the City of Chicago's Office of Emergency Management and Communications, Andrew Velasquez III as Director of the State of Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) which oversees disaster response efforts in the State of Illinois. Velasquez is the first Hispanic ever to be appointed to the helm of the state's top safety agency. His appointment becomes effective March 16th, pending Senate confirmation.

Velasquez's new job responsibilities also include oversight of the Illinois Terrorism Task Force, which is charged with the specific task of assuring that Illinois is ready to respond to an act of terrorism. To that end, he will work with Michael Chamness, Chairman of the task force, to help improve the plans in place to deal with a terrorist attack in Illinois, including communication and response procedures between state agencies and local communities.

Velasquez has been serving as executive director of Chicago's Office of Emergency Management and Communications (OEMC) since May 2005. In that role, he has implemented innovative technology solutions such as using wireless and satellite communications to enhance the city's delivery of emergency services. He also implemented a first-of-its-kind emergency management satellite communications vehicle, which is designed to respond to the scene of incidents and receive all aspects of data, camera surveillance and other intelligent applications from OEMC's Operations Center. In addition to dispatching all of the city's emergency services, the OEMC also operates the city's Traffic Management Authority and maintains the communications networks for other city departments.

Prior to serving at OEMC, Velasquez worked for the Chicago Police Dept. in a number of capacities. Beginning in 1995 as a research analyst with the Research and Development Division, Velasquez worked his way up to director of the Criminal Identification and Records Services Division. In that job, he was responsible for overseeing criminal identification of those arrested, criminal warrants and offender extradition, and criminal and civil subpoena processing.

Velasquez also has a background in the military. He served with the U.S. Army for six years, during which time he received several medals and commendations.

Velasquez will replace William Burke at IEMA, where he has been serving as director since May 2003. Director Burke is retiring from state government to pursue private business opportunities.

Removal Of EAB Infested Ash Trees

The Illinois Dept. of Agriculture will pay to remove trees infested with the emerald ash borer (EAB) in 2007 as part of a plan to reduce the population of the tree-killing beetle.

The state's EAB Management and Science Advisory Panel recently unveiled its strategy to control the pest. The plan gives landowners the option to have infested trees removed at no cost if they sign an indemnification waiver that holds the department and its contractors harmless should the work cause any damage.

"This strategy accomplishes two important objectives," Agriculture Director Chuck Hartke said. "It will reduce the population of the emerald ash borer and limit its potential spread while relieving landowners of an expense they may not have been able to afford."

To qualify for state-funded removal, the following conditions must be met:

1. The tree is located within 1/2 mile of a USDA-confirmed EAB infestation;
2. It exhibits multiple signs of EAB infestation (D-shaped exit holes, crown die-back, shoot growth near the base of the tree, larval tunneling or significant woodpecker damage); and
3. It is approved for removal by an authorized representative of the Illinois Dept. of Agriculture.

Trees approved for funding will be removed this spring prior to the start of the beetle's flight season.

In developing its plan, the advisory panel concluded the removal of every ash tree in close proximity to a known infestation, a management strategy known as a control cut, is neither feasible nor practical at this time.

The program covers all costs associated with the removal of an infested tree, including wood disposal and stump grinding. Landowners must pay for their own landscaping restoration.

The emerald ash borer has killed more than 20 million trees in North America since its arrival here in 2002. It was first discovered in Illinois last June west of St. Charles in rural Kane County. Subsequent detection was made in the northern Cook County communities of Wilmette, Evanston and Winnetka.

A quarantine that prohibits the movement of potentially infested wood products, including all types of firewood, is in effect to prevent the accidental spread of the beetle. Areas under quarantine include all of Kane County and 84 square miles of northern Cook County from the Lake County line to the northernmost city limit of Chicago and from Lake Michigan to Interstate 294.

Landowners who think they may qualify for free tree removal can view maps of the confirmed EAB infestations as well as download a copy of the indemnification waiver on the department's web site at www.agr.state.il.us/eab. Only trees approved by IDOA and located within 1/2 mile of a USDA-confirmed infestation will be eligible for removal under this program.

Social Security District Manager

As you're preparing your cards, you may also want to join the millions of users who have fallen in love with Social Security's online services. Here's our own sampler of things you can do at www.socialsecurity.gov.

See if you qualify for Social Security benefits. You can use our online screening tool to see what benefits you might be eligible for from any of the programs Social Security administers. Then you can use our benefit planners to calculate your benefit amounts, whether you're considering retirement or disability or the benefits available to your family if you die.

Apply for benefits. You can apply for Social Security retirement, spouse or disability benefits right over the Internet. If you are applying for disability benefits you'll also need to complete the disability report, which is also available online. Need to take a break or look for some records to answer the questions? That's just fine with us: you can leave and then come back to complete it. After you have applied, you can return to the web site later to check for status.

Find the office closest to you. There is much you can do online, but sometimes you may want to visit a representative face-to-face. If that's the case, your first step is to visit our online field office locator. Just type in your ZIP code and find the Social Security office closest to you.

Get a Password. If you already get Social Security benefits, there's even more you can do online when you have a password. Anyone who gets benefits can get a password. With a password, you can check the information and benefit amounts in your Social Security records and change your address, telephone or direct deposit account information without leaving the comfort of your home.

Whether you're ready to apply for retirement benefits this month or you're just interested in getting an estimate for future benefits, check out our web site at www.socialsecurity.gov and go to the "What you can do online" section.

A Wrong Number can Delay Your Tax Return

If you expect a refund on your federal taxes, you can avoid a delay by making sure all names and Social Security numbers are recorded correctly on your tax return.

When processing tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) checks all names and Social Security numbers for accuracy. When IRS discovers an incorrect Social Security number on your tax return, they send you a letter explaining the discrepancy. To fix the problem, you'll need to give IRS the correct Social Security number before you can expect your tax refund.

If you don't have a number or you need one for a dependent, call or visit Social Security. You'll need to show your age, citizenship or lawful alien status, and verify your identity. To learn more about the sort of information and documents you may need to submit, visit Social Security's Card and Number web site at <http://www.socialsecurity.gov/ssnum-ber/>.

You should also check the Social Security number on your W-2 statement and pay stubs to make sure it matches the one on your card. If it does not match, tell your employer immediately and also contact Social Security.

You also can visit your local Social Security office, or call 1(800) 772-1213. TTY 1(800) 325-0778.

GENERAL

Q. I'm 55 years old and have worked since I was 18. So I have well over the 40 credits I need to qualify for Social Security. Why do I have to keep paying Social Security taxes if I already qualify for maximum benefits?

A. As long as you are working, the law requires Social Security tax withholding for almost all wage earners. Only some government employees and career railroad workers are exempt from Social Security taxes because they pay into a separate retirement fund. In addition, you should not confuse the eligibility rules with the benefit calculation rules. Although you need only 10 years, or 40 credits of coverage, to be vested in Social Security, your retirement benefit is based on your highest 35 years of earnings. In other words, if you were allowed to drop out of Social Security after meeting the 10-year vesting rule, you would receive a very small Social Security benefit when you reach retirement age, because we would have to add 25 years of "zero" earnings into your retirement calculation.

Q. Can you settle a bet I have with a friend? She told me I need 40 credits from Social Security to collect retirement benefits. But I'm sure I read 10 years of work is the requirement. Who's right?

A. Both of you are right, because 40 credits and 10 years of work are roughly the same thing. In 2007, you get one Social Security credit for each $1,000 you earn, but you can only earn up to four credits in a year. Obviously, people with breaks in their work history will take longer than 10 years to earn the 40 credits they need for Social Security.

RETIREMENT

Q. My brother and I are both retired and get Social Security benefits. We worked side by side in the same factory for years, but he gets a higher Social Security payment. Why does he get more?

A. Unless you are twins and made exactly the same amount every year of your careers, you wouldn't get the same benefits as your brother. Social Security benefits are based on your age and your lifetime of earnings - generally the top 35 years. In order to get the same benefit as your brother, you and he must have been the same age, had the same earnings for each year and would have had to have started and stopped working at the same time.

DISABILITY

Q. It has been about a month since I applied for Social Security disability benefits and I still haven't heard anything. How long does a decision usually take?

A. The amount of time it takes for a decision on a disability claim varies. The nature of your disability and how quickly we are able to get medical evidence from your doctor or medical sources can make a difference in how long it takes. Generally, to get an initial decision on your case, it takes about three to five months. If your claim is initially denied, there are several steps in the appeal process that you can pursue.

Q. My 3-year-old son is autistic. My husband and I have been told that he may be eligible for disability benefits from Social Security. How would he qualify for benefits? My husband and I both work full-time and pay Social Security taxes.

A. Social Security administers the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program that does pay disability benefits to some children. SSI is a needs-based program, so if your family is having a hard time making ends meet, your son might qualify for a monthly SSI payment. And if he gets SSI, he might also get Medicaid coverage. The only other way your son would qualify for payments is as a dependent on either you or your husband's Social Security record. When either you or your husband retire - or if either one of you becomes disabled and begins drawing a Social Security disability payment - he could collect because he's your dependent child.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME

Q. My parents recently moved into a retirement community and they are signing their house over to me. Can I still get Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or will home ownership make me ineligible?

A. You can own a home and still receive SSI as long as you live in the home you own. In most cases, when determining SSI eligibility we don't count the home you own and live in or the car you use as resources.

with a combined income between $32,000 and $44,000; and

Up to 85 percent of Social Security benefits may be subject to income tax for individuals with a combined income above $34,000, or for couples with a combined income above $44,000. (Note: "Combined income" means adjusted gross income, plus nontaxable interest, plus one-half of Social Security benefits.)

Less than a third of current Social Security beneficiaries have incomes that exceed the thresholds, requiring them to pay taxes on a portion of their Social Security benefits. For more information on taxation of Social Security benefits, call the IRS' toll-free telephone number, 1-800-829-3676 and ask for Publication 554, Older Americans' Tax Guide. The publication is also available from the IRS website at www.irs.gov.

For more information about Social Security, or to request a replacement SSA-1099, visit www.socialsecurity.gov. Or you can call Social Security's toll free number, 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) and ask for a replacement SSA-1099 over the phone.

The Ticket That Helps People Go To Work

Five years ago the Ticket to Work program was launched to help people with disabilities go to work. Since then, more than 150,000 people who get Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) disability benefits have used their Ticket to obtain free vocational rehabilitation, job training and other support services.

The Ticket to Work program is voluntary. Social Security and SSI beneficiaries who receive a Ticket are not required to work, but may choose to use their tickets to attempt to go to work.

The number of people using their Tickets is expected to continue to grow as more Americans with disabilities become familiar with the opportunities the program has to offer.

A disability beneficiary can use the Ticket with either a private sector employment network or a State Vocational Rehabilitation Agency. Together the beneficiary and service provider design an individual employment plan outlining the services to be provided that will help the beneficiary reach his or her job goals.

The Ticket to Work program removes many barriers that had previously faced people with disabilities receiving benefits. Social Security disability beneficiaries are eligible for Medicare, and most Social Security disability beneficiaries now are protected by Medicare for up to eight years and six months after they go to work. Medicare coverage continues even if an individual no longer receives a monetary benefit from Social Security.

If you or someone you know is a Social Security or SSI disability beneficiary who would like to learn more about how the Ticket to Work program can help, just visit Social Security's website at www.socialsecurity.gov/work. Or call Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778) and ask for the Your Ticket to Work leaflet (Publication No. 05-10061).

What Every Parent Should Know About

Most people think of Social Security as a part of their retirement plan, but Social Security is also a family protection plan with benefits for children too. About 4 million children receive approximately $1.9 billion each month because one or both of their parents are disabled, retired or deceased. Those dollars help to provide the necessities of life for family members and help to make it possible for those children to complete high school.

So it's important that parents are aware of who can get benefits based on their Social Security earnings record - and when.

The easiest way to check just what "family" benefits are available is to go to our "Parents' Place" page on the Internet at www.socialsecurity.gov/kids/parent1.htm. Also here you will find information on Baby's First Social Security Number, Who Can Get Benefits, How Much Work You Need for Benefits for Your Children, Benefits for Grandchildren, Benefits for Disabled Children... and more.

For example, if you visit the web page on How Much Work You Need for Benefits for Your Children, you will find that "The amount of work you need to qualify for Social Security benefits depends on how old you are when you retire, become disabled, or die. The younger you are, the less work you need." The web page goes on to explain that parents under the age of 24 need as little as one and one-half years of work under Social Security for their children to receive Social Security benefits. The amount of work needed increases with age, but no one would need more than 10 years of work to be insured for all benefits.

If you visit the web page on Benefits for Grandchildren, you would learn that "More and more parents are finding themselves raising grandchildren. Social Security will pay benefits to dependent grandchildren if benefits are not payable on the work record of a parent." The web page goes on to explain that generally the biological parents of the child must be deceased or disabled, or the grandchild must be legally adopted by the grandparent to receive benefits.

If you do not have access to the Internet, you can find out basic information about Social Security that all parents should know by calling Social Security toll-free at 1(800) 772-1213, TTY 1(800) 325-0778. Just ask for the publication, Benefits for Children.

Go Online For Your 1099

With tax season well on its way, millions of taxpayers are busy gathering all the forms and documents needed to file federal, state and local tax returns. It is important to remember that some people who receive Social Security may have to pay taxes on a portion of their benefits. For them, a Social Security Benefit Statement (Form SSA-1099) is an important tax document.

The SSA-1099s for tax year 2006 were all automatically mailed to beneficiaries by Jan. 31. If you or someone you know who receives Social Security has not yet received a Form SSA-1099 for 2006, you can request a replacement online at www.socialsecurity.gov.

The SSA-1099 shows the total amount of benefits received in the previous year and is used to find out if any benefits are subject to tax, and to complete a federal income tax return. Basically, the federal tax laws about Social Security benefits state that:

Up to 50 percent of Social Security benefits may be subject to income tax for individuals with a combined income between $25,000 and $34,000, or for couples

Speech Team's Outstanding Season

The speech team from Shepard High School recently concluded another outstanding season by placing five students in the Illinois High School Association state finals and bringing home a third place trophy.

"The Shepard speech team, once again, showed itself to be the most competitive organization in the school. The successes of our team are a direct result of the combined effort of the students, parents, and coaches. I am honored to represent such a fine organization," said coach Mike Jacobson, a Shepard graduate who now competed for the Astros as a student.

The Astros won their South Suburban Conference championship earlier this month. The team then performed extremely well at the IHSA sectional. Both Paul Robinson (Oratorical Declamation) and Chloe Pastore (Dramatic Interpretation) won sectional championships.

Joe Anderson (Special Occasion Speaking), Brittany Leddy (Oratory) and Anna Whitcomb (Verse) placed second at the sectional tournament. Robinson ended the team's season on a high note by placing third at state in Declamation.

Caring For Family Members With Alzheimers Or Dementia

Caring for a family member affected by Alzheimer's disease or dementia can be difficult, but being knowledgeable about these debilitating diseases can make life somewhat easier for the patient and caregiver. Moraine Valley Community College's one-day noncredit class, Caring For a Loved One With Alzheimer's Disease or Dementia, will be held Thursday, April 19, from 6 to 8 p.m. The cost is $15.

Caregivers will learn how to handle common behaviors associated with Alzheimer's disease or dementia. The course also will cover specific topics such as managing hoarding/rummaging behaviors, safe personal care, and dealing with caregivers' depression.

This class is part of the Family Caregiving Program designed by the American Red Cross. It will be presented by PLOWS Council on Aging, a service provider for seniors residing in Palos, Lemont, Orland, and Worth townships who are physically, psychologically, and financially in need.

For more information on this course or other noncredit courses at Moraine Valley, visit morainevalley.edu/wdcs or call Workforce Development and Community Services at (708) 974-5735.

Students can register in person at the Admissions, Records and Registration Office, located in the College Center, on campus, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills, or by calling (708) 974-2110 (TT/TDD for the hearing impaired 708-974-9556). Previously enrolled students can register online at morainevalley.edu.

For new media inquiries, call Jessica Crotty, College and Community Relations coordinator at (708) 974-5281, or e-mail her at crotty@morainevalley.edu.

Judges Needed For April 17th

Cook County Clerk David Orr is looking to recruit more than 2,000 new election judges to work during the April 17 Consolidated Election.

"It is important that we have a full complement of judges to make sure the election is carried out honestly, fairly, and accurately," Orr said. "Having enough judges also makes the day run more smoothly."

Election judges open polling places, certify that voters are registered and qualified to vote, explain election procedures, issue ballots and activate cards for the touch screens, operate election equipment, and transmit votes at the end of the day.

Election judges receive $150 for their work. That includes $100 for working Election Day and $50 for attending a 27 hour training session prior to the election. Judges begin work at 5:15 a.m. and work until the votes are transmitted after the polls close at 7 p.m.

To qualify as an election judge, you must be a registered voter and live in Cook County.

High school seniors are also eligible to be election judges. To qualify, they must have at least a 3.0 GPA, have written permission from a parent, and a letter of recommendation from the principal.

People interested in serving on Election Day can call (312) 603-0970 to sign up or by completing an online application at www.voterinfo.net. The completed application can then be faxed to (312) 603-9779 or dropped off at the Clerk's office, located at 69 W. Washington St., fifth floor, Chicago.

Summer Employment

South West Special Recreation Association (SWSRA), an agency that provides year round recreational programs for individuals with disabilities, is offering summer employment working at its Day Camp. The dates for camp are June 11th through July 27th. Those interested or who want more information should call (708) 389-9423.

This is a great way to earn cash this summer, make a difference in a child's life and have fun.

Umbrellas For Peace

As an outreach program from the Beverly Arts Center (BAC) in cooperation with internationally known artist Matt Lamb, Hazelgreen sixth graders painted umbrellas on Friday, March 9th. This project was facilitated by Mrs. Judith Blackburn of the BAC where students explored the themes of peace, tolerance, understanding, hope and love. It culminated in an art activity in which every student painted an umbrella, both inside and out, with hopes and fears respectively.

From the Umbrellas for Peace website: "The main target of the Umbrella Project is to embed the message of peace, tolerance, understanding, hope and love like a huge umbrella across all societies as a means of generating peaceful intercultural and multilateral communication and to protect against aggression and war."

In preparation for this global project, Hazelgreen's sixth grade classrooms explored the themes of tolerance, understanding, and hope while reading Newberry Award Winning Book Maniac Magee by Jerry Spinelli. Discussions of prejudice, loss, and disappointment were explored through novel study and an open forum of ideas. Students used what they discussed to inform and influence their designs as they created their very own link in the international chain that this project represents.

Church Celebrates 50th Anniversary

Parent Involvement Key In Preventing Teen Driving Deaths

A recent national survey conducted by The Allstate Foundation shows that while parents know the No. 1 killer of teens is car crashes caused by teen drivers, the majority of parents do not understand the main causes of these crashes or may not be aware of laws that are intended to protect their teens. The survey also found that although parents agree they must play a significant role in preparing their teens to drive, many parents still: delay safe driving conversations with their teens until shortly before licensure, think their teens are immune to the risk of car crashes, allow their teens to drive or ride in dangerous conditions and model unsafe behavior behind the wheel.

The national survey of more than 1,000 parents of teens ages 15 to 17 features an in-depth look at parents' knowledge of the teen driving issue and the roles they play in preparing their teens for this important milestone, from training to after licensure.

"The Allstate Foundation research provides a unique understanding of how parents are impacting the teen driving epidemic and reveals insights into approaches parents can take to protect their teens as drivers and passengers," according to Allan F. Williams, retired chief researcher for the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

"The Allstate Foundation is committed to helping parents prepare their teens to drive and protect them once they're on the road," said George Ruebenson, president of Allstate Protection. "By sharing these survey findings, we hope parents will be more informed and play an active role with their teens and other parents to ultimately make our communities safer and stronger."

According to the survey, nearly 50 percent of parents polled think crashes involving teens result from drunk driving. In reality, the majority of crashes are caused by driver error, speeding and driving with distractions.

Additionally, while most parents surveyed feel prepared to teach their teens the rules of the road, 60 percent say they have never heard of or are only vaguely aware of Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) laws. Intended to protect novice drivers while they are learning, typical provisions of GDL laws include an extended supervised driving period and restrictions on late-night driving and driving with teen passengers during the initial months of licensure.

"As parents, we need to show our teens from an early age the importance of safe driving by modeling good behavior and treating driving as a privilege," said parenting expert Laurence Steinberg, Ph.D., professor of Psychology at Temple University, author of "The 10 Basic Principles of Good Parenting" and "Your Adolescent: A Parent's Guide for Ages 10 to 20," and an Allstate Foundation Teen Driving Program Advisory Board member. "Practicing what we preach, discussing the issue regularly with our teens and talking with our peers are simple actions parents can take that will go a long way in keeping teens safer on the road," Steinberg said.

The survey showed most parents do not talk to their teens about safe driving until a year or less before their teens receive a permit - long after their teens' attitudes toward driving have developed.

- When their teens are 12 or younger, 77 percent of parents discuss the dangers of smoking, 72 percent discuss the dangers of taking drugs and 70 percent discuss peer pressure. However, only 27 percent of parents discuss safe driving when their children are 12 or younger.
- Fifty-four percent of parents surveyed first talked about safe driving with their children at the ages of 14 and 15.

The survey found that parents think their own teens are immune to the risk of a crash - when in reality, the issue affects everyday teens in everyday situations.

- While two-thirds of parents polled think teens in general are bad drivers, 88 percent trust their own teens to drive safely.
- Fifty-five percent believe if their teens were in a crash, it would be someone else's fault. Restrict dangerous driving situations

Many parents allow their teens to drive in dangerous situations within the first few months after getting a license, increasing the likelihood of a deadly crash.

- Ninety percent of respondents permit their teens to drive after dark, even though teens are twice as likely to crash at night (9 p.m. to 6 a.m.) as during the day.
- Seventy-seven percent allow their teens to drive with friends, even though the chance of crashing increases in proportion to the number of teen passengers in a car.

Sixty-nine percent of parents surveyed allow their teens to drive in bad weather.

Parents are not modeling good behavior behind the wheel when their children are in the car

- Ninety-nine percent of parents polled said it is helpful for their teens to see good driving behavior from them and their teens' other parent.
- Seventy-one percent of parents polled have talked on a cell phone while driving with their teens in the car.

Sixty-two percent have operated a radio, MP3 player, game or other device while driving.

- More than a quarter of parents have broken a law while driving with their teen in the car (e.g., running a red light or stop sign, illegal U-turn, etc.).

Parents are influenced, for better or worse, by several factors - especially other parents.

- Almost half of the parents surveyed said other, more lenient parents make it difficult to control their own teens' driving privileges.
- Nearly 40 percent said they often disagree with their teens' other parent about the best way to establish and enforce driving ground rules for their teens.

While 60 percent of parents talk with their peers about teen driving, 40 percent do not, demonstrating an opportunity to increase peer-to-peer dialogue.

Plan To Help Illinois Residents Afford Homes And Housing-Related Services

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced his third consecutive comprehensive housing plan to help thousands of working families, seniors and the disabled across the state have access to quality, affordable homes and residential services. This year's plan has identified $763 million in spending earmarked for affordable housing at nine different state agencies - up from a total of $690 million last year - that will help approximately 146,000 Illinois residents in need of affordable housing.

The 2007 Comprehensive Housing Plan, Affordable Housing Dimensions, outlines the strategies and actions the State is pursuing in 2007 to improve the range, quality and quantity of affordable housing options for Illinois residents, especially under-served populations. It is also the focal point of the State's efforts to improve coordination of housing resources among State agencies, help more Illinois households afford their rent or mortgage, and promote economic growth in communities throughout the state.

A Housing Production Plan makes up the core of the 2007 report and details actions and funding for the priority populations. Strategies proposed through the Comprehensive Housing Plans are increasingly transforming Illinois housing by targeting the priority populations that are significantly under-served.

The following initiatives are featured in the 2007 Plan: Rental Housing Support Program (RHS Program): provides subsidies that reduce the cost of renting for extremely low-income households. The program is expected to generate more than $25 million to help around 4,000 families during the first year afford their rents starting early 2008, making it the nation's largest rental assistance program.

Supportive Housing: offers housing options to those with health, income, disability and other special needs, who cannot live completely independently. A working group of the Task Force will make recommendations for increasing this type of housing.

Housing Preservation: funds the rehabilitation or refinancing of existing affordable housing at risk of being lost due to deferred maintenance, expiring subsidies, or changes in local housing markets. In 2007, the State will provide $100 million to housing preservation initiatives serving approximately 885 low-income families and seniors in Illinois.

Linking Service Plans and Affordable Housing: coordinates plans at different agencies for reassessing and better addressing the housing needs of persons with special needs. The plans touch on issues including the reduction of the number of people living in institutions, better use of available Federal funds, the importance of ties to community, enhanced services, greater communication among providers, the need to promote program participant involvement in decision-making, and more housing stock designed to meet special needs populations.

Candidate James Jelinski

Meet James Jelinski (pictured), candidate for Oak Lawn 5th District Trustee, on Friday, March 30th from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Oakview Center, 4625 W. 110th St. Refreshments will be served. Park in the West Parking Lot (enter off 111th and Kilpatrick, go to the end of block and you will see the Park District). Jelinski is seeking your support on April 17th. Jelinski said, "It is time for a change. I can make it possible.

I will have weekly office hours and monthly community meetings so problems can be solved.

I will get more police patrols for all areas of Oak Lawn. There are many who disobey the speed limits. I will look out for the safety of our citizens.

I will work hard to see that tax dollars are spent wisely and everyone receives the proper services for their tax dollars.

I will work to get some type of grocery store at the old Dominick's at 111th and Cicero Ave. There are many seniors that do not have cars and need a close store to get groceries and medicine. This property has been in non-use too long.

I will work with the state and county to get an overpass on Central. When the train goes by on Central the cars make U-turns causing a large amount of traffic on Cook Avenue and surrounding streets of Eagle Ridge. It is very hard for residents at times to get out of their driveway. They do not deserve this, they are paying the highest taxes in Oak Lawn and deserve a solution to this problem."

Jelinski earned a Bachelor of Science degree from Loyola University. He is a member of St. Gerald Parish, member of the Men's Club, and member of Worth Township Regular Democratic Organization.

Introduce Genocide Accountability Act

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL), Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Human Rights and the Law, Sen. Tom Coburn (R-OK), who serves as Ranking Member of the subcommittee, Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT), Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX) recently introduced legislation that will close a legal loophole that currently prevents the U.S. Justice Dept. from prosecuting people in the United States who have committed genocide in other countries.

Under current law, genocide is only considered a crime if it is committed within the United States or by a U.S. national outside the United States. The Genocide Accountability Act would close the current loophole by amending the Genocide Convention Implementation Act to allow prosecution of non-U.S. citizens for genocide committed outside the U.S.

The Justice Dept. has identified individuals who participated in the Rwandan and Bosnian genocide and who are living in the United States under false pretenses. Under current law, these individuals cannot be arrested or prosecuted because they are not U.S. nationals and the genocide in which they were involved did not take place in the United States. In contrast, the laws on torture, material support for terrorism, terrorism financing, hostage taking, and many other federal crimes are still considered crimes when committed outside the United States by non-U.S. nationals.

Salah-Abdallah Gosh, the head of security in the Sudanese government, has reportedly played a key role in the government's genocide campaign in Darfur. In 2005, Gosh came to Washington to meet with senior Administration officials. Under current law, the FBI could not even interview Gosh about his involvement in the Darfur genocide, much less charge him with a crime.

This bill is the first to be produced by the Subcommittee on Human Rights and the Law, which was officially established at the Senate Judiciary Committee's first business meeting of the 110th Congress. The subcommittee has jurisdiction over all human rights laws and policies and will focus on issues such as genocide, human trafficking, war crimes, crimes against humanity, torture, and arbitrary detention. The Human Rights Subcommittee's first hearing was held in February and focused on the genocide in Darfur and other parts of the world.

The Genocide Accountability Act has been endorsed by numerous organizations, including the Save Darfur Coalition, American Jewish World Service, Armenian Assembly of America, Human Rights First, Human Rights Watch, Alliance for Justice, and ENOUGH.

Announce $344 Million Judgment Against Medicaid HMO

Illinois Attorney General Lisa Madigan and U.S. Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald have announced that on March 13th a federal judge has awarded over $334 million in a fraud lawsuit against the Medicaid HMO Amerigroup Illinois and its parent company, Amerigroup Corporation. Last October a federal jury found both companies liable for systematic and extensive fraud in the Medicaid program, which is funded jointly by the federal and state governments.

As a penalty for Amerigroup's fraudulent actions, Judge Leinenweber, Federal Judge for the Northern District of Illinois, trebled the jury's original award of $48 million and awarded additional penalties in the amount of more than $190 million. The total judgment equals $334,365,000. The verdict amounts to one of the largest-ever fraud judgments against a Medicaid contractor and the largest civil verdict in the history of the Illinois Attorney General's office.

The Judge stated that he was "convinced that Defendants' conduct was egregious and calculated" and that their actions constituted an "institution-wide goal to fleece Defendants' pockets at the expense of the government, the Medicaid system, and avoided pregnant women." Prosecutors alleged that Amerigroup discriminated against pregnant women and others with expensive health conditions, in many cases ignoring individuals Amerigroup knew were not receiving urgently needed care.

From 2000-2004 Amerigroup was paid hundreds of millions of dollars, in part, to help low-income pregnant women who had inadequate prenatal care to navigate the complicated healthcare system and find care. Amerigroup spent less than half of the funds they were paid by the state and federal governments on providing healthcare.

In October, the jury found that Amerigroup illegally avoided pregnant women and other people with expensive health conditions while continuing to receive state and federal dollars that were paid with the understanding that Amerigroup was not engaging in health status discrimination. The result of Amerigroup's discrimination was that certain individuals were denied full access to healthcare coverage and the federal and state governments overpaid Amerigroup by millions of dollars. Under the law, the Judge had the ability to add penalties to the jury's award, which he did on March 13th.

The judgment comes after nearly four years of litigation and a three and one-half week jury trial. The case was originally filed by Amerigroup Illinois' former head of government relations, Cleveland Tyson, under the False Claims Act and the Illinois Whistleblower Reward and Protection Act. In 2005, the Illinois Attorney General and the U.S. Dept. of Justice joined the case. Tyson's attorneys, Fred Cohen and David Chizewer, from the law firm of Goldberg, Kohn, tried the case in cooperation with the government attorneys.

The case was prosecuted for the State of Illinois by Assistant Attorneys General David J. Adams and Anne R.K. Reader.

Recall Issued On Toy Sets

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently alerted consumers to a toy recall announced by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in cooperation with Toys "R" Us dated March 13th. Three styles of "Elite Operations" brand toy sets were recalled because they contain high levels of lead in the paint and sharp points that may pose a risk of lead poisoning and laceration to children.

The military-style play sets contain light and sound vehicles, action figures and accessories. Approximately 128,700 of the play sets have been voluntarily recalled, although no injuries have been reported. The models included in this recall are Super Rigs Transport Vehicle (Item #087286), Command Patrol Center (Item #920625) and Troop Carrier (Item #773967). Consumers can find the item number on the back of the packaging above the barcode.

Toys "R" Us stores nationwide and toysrus.com sold these toy sets from January 2006 to early February 2007 at prices of $15 to $30.

Based on this recall, Madigan urged parents to take these toys away from children immediately and return the products to the nearest Toys "R" Us store for a full refund.

"We should act quickly to ensure that children do not continue to play with a product that contains high levels of lead and sharp points," Madigan said. "We are monitoring retail stores to ensure that they participate in the effort to alert consumers by posting recall notifications in their stores and on their web sites."

Madigan's office will be sending out investigators pursuant to the Illinois Children's Product Safety Act to spot check to see that retailers have posted the recall notice in a prominent location in stores and have removed the products from shelves.

In 2005, the Illinois General Assembly passed new amendments to the Illinois Children's Product Safety Act to help consumers by requiring manufacturers and retail merchants to post recall notices both in their stores and on the Web sites. The recall notification process was further strengthened by requiring manufacturers and retail merchants to alert, by e-mail or mail, Illinois consumers who purchased recalled children's products online. Illinois was the first state to enact such comprehensive child safety notification measures.

According to the U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, childhood lead poisoning is considered to be the most preventable environmental disease impacting young children. While children are most commonly exposed to lead from lead-based paints in older homes, tainted toys, food, water or other items also can be significant sources of lead exposure for children.

The Illinois Dept. of Public Health's Web site also provides a direct link to www.recalls.gov, where citizens can find up-to-date recall information about past & current recalls.

Intercontinental Exchange

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) made the following statement regarding the March 15th unsolicited $9.7 billion all-stock bid for the Chicago Board of Trade by Intercontinental Exchange:

"As with all such offers, today's proposal by Intercontinental Exchange needs to be evaluated by the proper federal regulatory and oversight authorities, but I believe that the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade have created a merger agreement that makes sense and is beneficial to all involved."

"I'm sure the Board of Trade leadership will review the new proposal and will make the decision that is in the best interest of the Chicago financial community as a whole."

Illinois Federation Of Teachers Endorses Governor's Helping Kids Learn Plan

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich has accepted the endorsement of the Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT) for the Helping Kids Learn plan, which will invest an unprecedented $10 billion in schools over the next four years - nearly three times bigger than any increase in state history. The governor's plan means an additional $185 million for students in the Chicago Public Schools. In addition, new estimates by the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE) indicate the foundation level, or guaranteed minimum amount of state and local funding to schools, in the governor's proposed budget increase to $6,058.

The IFT represents 90,000 elementary and secondary teachers, school-related personnel and support staff such as teaching assistants, clerks, secretaries and bus drivers. The IFT also includes higher education faculty and staff, and public employees. The IFT represents employees in state government under each of the constitutional officers.

The Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) also endorsed the governor's education plan last Saturday. They boast a membership of 128,000 and are the largest education employees' organization in the state. IEA represents teachers, educational support professionals, higher education faculty and staff, retired education employees and students planning to become teachers.

Helping Kids Learn continues the governor's commitment to schools by boosting funding by an unprecedented $1.5 billion in fiscal year 2008. Under the plan, general state aid to schools will increase by $800 million. Original estimates from ISBE figured Gov. Blagojevich's budget would have raised the Foundation Level by $686 to $6,020. However, with new information based on local school estimates, that Foundation Level will increase by $724 to $6,058. With more funds per pupil, schools can make investments to improve textbook quality, modernize their technology, or invest in teachers.

Under the plan, the state will give schools additional funds to help afford special education teachers with $200 million in new spending that will increase the state's reimbursement rate for special education teachers - the first increase districts have seen since 1985. With $153 million, the governor's plan will fully fund "mandated categorical" programs like special education and transportation. The plan will also accelerate implementation of Preschool for All with $69 million in state support and dedicate additional resources for school districts that provide full-day kindergarten.

The Helping Kids Learn plan provides $100 million to support under-performing school districts that invest in after-school tutoring, curriculum and textbook enhancements, longer school days or other proven strategies that raise student achievement. For Illinois' deteriorating schools, the plan will invest $1.5 billion in a capital construction plan for projects to improve and upgrade classrooms and schools so children can learn and teachers can teach in a more conducive environment.

Senator Radogno Comments On Ethics, Procurement Legislation

The Illinois Senate Executive Committee voted unanimously to advance Senate Bill 1305, legislation amended to include many Senate Republican initiatives that seek to curb abuses in awarding state contracts, said State Sen. Christine Radogno (R-Lemont).

"I was happy to work with Sen. Schoenberg (D-Evanston) to advance good government legislation," said Radogno. "Many of the legislative proposals included in the amendment to Senate Bill 1305 incorporated ideas initially introduced by the Senate Republican Caucus, so I'm extremely pleased to see bipartisan legislation once again move forward that would truly crack down on pay-to-play activities in Illinois."

Radogno noted that news media continues to report questionable practices by the Blagojevich administration in awarding state contracts, and commented that if the Senate Republican legislation had been signed into law three years ago, many of these abuses could have been avoided - potentially saving taxpayers millions of dollars.

Senate Bill 1305 will enhance public disclosure of contractors and related businesses, their key executives and lobbyists who might make political campaign contributions and encourages timelier posting of contract awards on the Internet, while requiring the governor to post conflict of interest waivers online in the Procurement Bulletin in a timely fashion.

The legislation also includes pension investment reforms initially introduced by Sen. Radogno that would ban contingent fees to pension board lobbyists.

Radogno noted that identical legislation was approved by the Senate last year; however, failed to be considered by the House of Representatives.

"I applaud Sen. Schoenberg's continued efforts to institute reforms that would help restore trust in our state government, and am hopeful our colleagues in the House will also see the importance of instituting additional political and procurement reforms in Illinois," said Radogno.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

It only took one day after the Governor's annual budget address for the Senate Republicans to call for a more open budget process in Illinois. Their focus is to illuminate the state's current and long-term financial expenditures.

State Senator Christine Radogno (R-Lemont) is one of the sponsors of a comprehensive package of legislation which invites greater public scrutiny into the budget process while targeting the ongoing practice of hiding costly "pork projects" in the state budget.

"Every year we seek the same pattern. The Governor introduces a budget early in the year, but by May or June it's jammed through the General Assembly in the final days of session, without giving the lawmakers or the public an opportunity to really review what is in the final document," said Radogno. "These practices certainly don't serve the taxpayers we were elected to represent, nor does it allow us to effectively do our job as legislators."

Radogno emphasized the need to examine the long-term consequences of the Governor's budget proposals, noting that one measure, Senate Bill 1534, seeks to rein in future state expenditures by requiring the Governor's budget to include a five-year projection of future revenues and spending for new and expanded projects that cost over $1 million. The Governor would also be required to give lawmakers projections for programs that were not included in the preliminary budget or which changed since initially introduced.

A key bill in the package, SJCA 24, would require a seven-day review period before the General Assembly can vote on the state budget. This would give lawmakers, the public, and the media, more time to study the final budget.

Republican lawmakers are also targeting legislative "pork projects," which have come under increased scrutiny over the last several years. Senate Bill 1600 would eliminate all member and gubernatorial initiatives, while a companion bill, Senate Bill 1601, restricts all lump-sum appropriations for members and gubernatorial initiatives and requires descriptions of the purpose of all initiatives. It would also call for disclosure of the public official responsible for securing the funding.

Radogno noted that her fellow Republican legislators are hopeful this will become a bipartisan effort, inviting Democratic lawmakers to join them in their efforts.

All Points hears that in an effort to reduce the negative health effects of second-hand smoking in Illinois' public bars and restaurants, the Senate Executive Committee recently approved legislation prohibiting smoking in public places.

The legislation, Senate Bill 500, calls for all indoor, public places and workplaces in Illinois, including bars, casinos and restaurants, to be 100 percent smoke-free. Furthermore, the measure restricts smoking within 15 feet of an entrance to a public place or place of employment. Employers or owners of all public places will also be required to post "no smoking" signs at every entrance, and remove all ashtrays from the establishment.

People who violate the law by smoking in prohibited areas will be fined at least $100, but no more than $250; an owner who allows smoking will be fined at least $250 for the first violation, $500 for the second violation if it occurs within one year of the first violation, and no less than $2,500 for each subsequent violation which occurs within one year after the first.

Legislators noted that the legislation has significant short and long-term benefits stating "Not only would this legislation help people working in Illinois' hospitality industry, but it will also level the playing field for businesses across Illinois and is expected to result in reduced health care costs for the state's taxpayers." To date, 14 states and hundreds of municipalities have passed comprehensive smoke-free workplace laws.

Good news... The Board of Commissioners of the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago (District) voted last week to direct the County Clerk to reduce the levy of taxes for the District's Bond and Interest Fund by $21,900,674.

Commissioner Gloria Alitto Majewski, Chairman of the Committee on Finance said, "the Board of Commissioners was pleased to learn from our Treasurer that the 2006 tax revenues were higher than expected. This allows us to provide some relief to local taxpayers. The sources of funds for this abatement are excess investment earnings held in the Corporate Fund, the Construction Fund, and nine Bond and Interest Funds."

The MWRD of Greater Chicago collects and treats wastewater from over five million people and the industrial equivalent of another 4.5 million people in Cook County alone. The District also operates the Deep Tunnel Project to collect and treat sewer overflows, and provides stormwater management for all of Cook County. The District's 2007 budget is $1 billion. Visit their website at www.mwrd.org for more information.

State Rep. Bob Rita (D-Blue Island) alerts All Points to legislation he is sponsoring to bar youths from driving while using a cell phone. This initiative was unanimously passed out of the House Driver's Education and Safety Committee.

Rita's House Bill 559 bans people under the age of 19 from driving a vehicle while using a cell phone, even if a hand's free device is used. Exemptions are included for emergency phone calls. The bill makes violating the ban an offense, punishable by a $100 fine.

Rep. Rita cited a study in the journal Human Factors which noted that cell phone users have decreased reaction times when driving, which ties up traffic and dramatically increases the risk of accidents. The study also showed that cell phone distraction cause 2,600 deaths and 330,000 injuries in the United States every year.

House Bill 559 now moves to the full House for further consideration.

Cook County Commissioner Joan Patricia Murphy (6th District) has informed All Points that in order to reach the 17% budget reduction mandated by the 2007 County budget, the 6th District Offices both downtown and in Crestwood will be closed for 52 unpaid furlough days. The schedule includes: March through November the office will be open four days per week, Monday through Thursday. Fridays will be closed. July through September the office will be open three days per week, Tuesday through Thursday. Mondays and Fridays will be closed.

Commissioner Murphy regrets that these closings are necessary. If constituent's have questions or requests they can call (312) 603-4216 or (708) 389-2125.

Lipinski Legislation Passes House

The U.S. House of Representatives passed Congressman Dan Lipinski's bill to reauthorize the Steel and Aluminum Energy Conservation and Technology Competitiveness Act of 1988. H.R. 1126, known as the Metals Initiative, provides research funding to make American steel and other metals more efficient and environmentally friendly.

"Now more than ever it is vital to ensure that these industries are fully prepared to confront the challenges they face," explained Lipinski. "This bill will help develop the tools needed to grow valuable American jobs and businesses, and to protect the environment through technological innovations."

H.R. 1126 would reauthorize the Metals Initiative at $12 million per year from Fiscal Year 2008 through 2012 to fund advanced metals research. As a result of this legislation, American metals industries will get help developing and implementing cost-saving and environmentally-friendly modern technology through critical grants to universities and other research institutions. Through the collaborative research efforts of American companies, the Department of Energy, and institutions of higher education, this program has produced several successful and important technological breakthroughs that have resulted in important environmental and energy savings, as well as innovations that help American defense.

"While American industries have significantly modernized, the pace of technology and the competition from overseas is relentless," continued Lipinski, whose father-in-law lost his job as a steelworker in Johnstown, Pennsylvania when his plant closed due to foreign competition. "Reauthorization of this bill is essential to grow American jobs, keep the customers of the metals industries strong, and assure that we have a domestic supply of the materials we need for our national defense."

"As a manufacturer whose competitiveness is closely tied to the cost and availability of steel and aluminum, I applaud this measure," stated Zach Mottl, Purchasing Manager of Atlas Tool and Die Works, Inc. in Lyons, Illinois. "We've seen aluminum prices go up around 80% during the past few years. At the same time, we have faced unfair foreign competition in which raw materials and other factors of production are often 'subsidized' by foreign governments who have invested in the latest technologies. Measures like H.R. 1126, which help reduce the cost of domestic manufacturing and level our global playing field, are great for industry, domestic security, and jobs."

As Vice Chair of the House Committee on Science and Technology, Congressman Lipinski led efforts to move H.R. 1126 quickly through Committee in order to ensure rapid passage early in this session. The bill was introduced on Feb. 16, and unanimously agreed to and reported out of the Science and Technology Committee on Feb. 28. The bill now moves to the U.S. Senate for further consideration.

Congressional Gold Medal

U.S. Senators Dick Durbin (D-IL) and Bob Bennett (R-UT) nominated Nobel Laureate Muhammad Yunus for a Congressional Gold Medal. Dr. Yunus, who was awarded the 2006 Nobel Peace Prize, is recognized as a leading figure in the effort to fight poverty and promote economic and social opportunity. Through his Grameen Bank, he pioneered the microcredit movement and helped people around the world break out of poverty.

"Dr. Muhammad Yunus believes overcoming poverty is not just a gesture of charity; it is an act of justice. It is the protection of a fundamental human right, the right to dignity and a decent life," said Durbin. "He is truly deserving of the Congressional Gold Medal and I am honored to call him a friend."

The Congressional Gold Medal is the highest civilian award which can be bestowed by the U.S. Congress. The decoration is awarded to individuals who perform an outstanding deed or act of service to the security, prosperity, and national interest of the United States. The recipient need not be an American citizen. The Congressional Gold Medal is considered the Congressional equivalent to the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Legislation bestowing the Congressional Gold Medal to a recipient must be co-sponsored by two thirds of the membership of both the House of Representatives and the Senate before their respective committees will consider it. The Congressional Gold Medal is created by the United States Mint to specifically commemorate the person and achievement for which the medal is awarded.

Durbin first met Dr. Yunus in Bangladesh and has worked with him for more than 10 years to advance microcredit and economic development in the world's poorest nations. One of the greatest successes in recent years is microcredit program targeted toward poor women. Most microcredit programs have repayment rates greater than 95 percent and have helped many women change their lives and those of their families.

"Dr. Muhammad Yunus has given dignity and hope to so many through his Grameen Bank - the people's bank. He believed if you loaned the poorest people in the world a small sum of money that you could change their lives dramatically and they would repay the loan. Thirty years later, Dr. Yunus' theory of microenterprise is now a phenomenon which has touched 100 million people around the world. It is hard to think of any single idea in our lifetime which has lifted up so many people."

Although microcredit is most commonly associated with the developing world, Dr. Yunus' work has improved the lives of an estimated 21 million people in the United States - a number that accounts for about 16 of private (nonfarm) employment in the country. The Small Business Administration has made over $220.

Former recipients of the Congressional Gold Medal include George Washington, Sr. Winston Churchill, Elie Wiesel, Pope John Paul II, Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King.

Would You Sell Your Soul For A Pennant?

It's the ultimate futility story: A major league baseball team that can't beg, borrow or steal a championship pennant. A perennial loser, a team famous for its ability to snatch defeat from the jaws of victory. Diehard fans, desperate for a championship, who would give anything, even their souls, to break the curse that seems to hang over the team - to win a pennant. Would even that be enough to save Chicago from one more year of baseball purgatory?

But it's not the 2007 Cubs, it's the Washington Senators of the 1950s, baseball's original can't-win team. For its 2007 spring production, the Beverly Hills University Club Scholarship Foundation of Chicago (BHUC) is presenting the story of baseball's ultimate losers, and of one fan who bargained his soul to help his beloved baseball team finally win the pennant over those "damn Yankees." BHUC is presenting Damn Yankees March 23, 24, 25, 30, 31 and April 1 at The Beverly Arts Center, 111th & Western Ave. in Chicago. Showtimes: Friday and Saturday, 8 p.m.; Sunday at 3 p.m. Tickets are $18-22; profits fund scholarships for students residing within club boundaries. Children of club members are not eligible for scholarships.

The Beverly Hills University Club Scholarship Foundation is a not-for-profit 501(c)(3) corporation in Chicago's Beverly Neighborhood that raises funds through its annual theatrical production for college scholarships for graduating high school students residing within the geographical boundaries of its district. Several of this year's performers are past recipients of scholarships who have returned to continue the tradition. The club's presentations have covered the range of Broadway classics from Oklahoma!, Can-Can, The King and I to Singin' in the Rain, for which the club managed to create real rain onstage for the scene made famous by Gene Kelly.

The 2007 version is directed and choreographed by Cassie Dawe, with musical direction by Peg Mooney. Executive producers are longtime BHUCSF members Tom Beck and Peggy DuMais; Assistant producers are Joe Clair and Jamie Volk. The production's business managers are Barb Lenihan and Kimmie Kill. The proceeds from ticket sales, production sponsorships, and program book ad sales are used to fund the scholarships.

For tickets to Damn Yankees, visit the Beverly Hills University Club Web site at www.bhuc-sf.org and click on "Show," or call the Beverly Arts Center at (773) 445-3838. Tickets are also available through www.ticketweb.com.

32nd Annual Symphonython

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra will preside over the WFMT-FM (98.7) airwaves on Sunday, April 1st as it broadcasts the 32nd annual Symphonython, the CSO's nationally acclaimed annual fundraiser. Broadcast live from Symphony Center's Buntrock Hall, this year's event will air from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and include special guest interviews with conductors Duain Wolfe and Cliff Colnot, former CSO President Henry Fogel, violin virtuoso Hilary Hahn, and CSO musicians. Funds raised during the Symphonython broadcast are in support of the CSO's educational programs.

CSO Association President Deborah R. Card will be joined by various guests for the 12-hour broadcast. This year's program, "The Story Is in the Music," focuses on the stories of the music and musicians of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Throughout the month of March, patrons can pre-pledge their support online or by mailing or faxing order forms found at www.cso.org/symphonython. For additional assistance or to order pre-pledge forms by phone, call the Symphonython hotline at (312) 294-3178. Only CSO supporters who pre-pledge before March 31st can select one-of-a-kind premiums, such as private recitals, lessons and presentations by CSO musicians; gift certificates from Chicago's finest restaurants and shops; tickets for sporting events; and collectible items like autographed CDs and posters.

Symphonython 2007 also features a host of attractive specials, including the always popular From the Archives CD set. This year's From the Archives, Volume 21, is the third tribute honoring members of the orchestra as soloists. The two-disc set features works - previously unreleased and now available for the first time - recorded live by the Chicago Symphony in Orchestra Hall, the Ravinia Festival, the Petrillo Music Shell in Grant Park, and Mandel Hall at the University of Chicago.

Bandapalooza

All grade school band students are invited to "Bandapalooza," a day of fun music clinics and instruction on Saturday, March 31st, sponsored by the St. Rita Band Program, 7740 S. Western Ave. Band Director, Cindy Gradek and staff will teach music selections from the following movies: "Pirates of the Caribbean," "Harry Potter," "Star Wars," "High School Musical," "Cars" and "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory."

Bandapalooza begins at 2:30 p.m. and concludes with a concert for family and friends at 7 p.m. in the St. Rita Auditorium. This event is free; casual dress. Dinner will be provided. To register, go to www.stritahs.com and click on the Band link, or call (773) 925-6600, ext. 6659.

Present Spring Drama Production

De La Salle's Theatre 100 program presents its Spring Drama Production of "Spoon River Anthology" on March 29-31, at 7 p.m. in the Ayres-Conway Theatre, located at De La Salle's Institute Campus at 35th St. and Michigan Ave.

The "Spoon River Anthology" is based on the work of Illinois poet Edgar Lee Masters. The "Spoon River Anthology" presents individual vignettes of the people who lived in an imaginary small town in Illinois at the end of the 19th and beginning of the 20th centuries. The music used to enhance the piece is also from the same period.

De La Salle students who comprise the cast are: seniors Laura Barbaro (Bridgeport), Erica Brooks (South Shore), Ashanti Carter (Woodlawn), Anthony Mallet (Washington Heights), Gerald Munoz (East Side) and Charles Williams (Calumet City); juniors Lyzander Dilag (Streeterville), Joseph Medina (Bridgeport), Alejandra Ramirez (Garfield Ridge), Emmanuel Ramirez (Oak Lawn) and Kenneth Thompson (Chatham) and sophomores Elisha Calderon (McKinley Park) and Jessica Hosendove (South Shore).

An experience like no other, De La Salle offers a quality education in a co-institutional environment that transcends the classroom. Diverse perspectives, Christian values and our tradition provide students an education that lasts a lifetime.

For more information, please contact De La Salle faculty member Linda Matonich at (312) 842-7355 ext. 224 or by e-mail at matonich1@dls.org.

Banks Announce Merger

Standard Bancshares, Inc., the parent company of Standard Bank and Trust Company, and Community Bank of Lemont, jointly announced that they have entered into a definitive agreement providing for the acquisition of Lemont by Standard. The proposed acquisition is subject to approval by Lemont's stockholders, the receipt of regulatory approvals and the satisfaction or waiver of the other conditions to closing set forth in the definitive agreement.

At Dec. 31, 2006, Standard Bancshares had assets of approximately $2 billion and Lemont had assets of $80 million. Lemont will be integrated into Standard Bank after the transaction is completed. The transaction is expected to be completed in the third quarter of 2007.

Standard Bank was founded in 1947, and is the privately held subsidiary of Standard Bancshares of Hickory Hills. Standard Bank currently has 41 bank branches located in the Southern and Western regions of the Chicagoland area, including the counties of Cook, DuPage, Will and Grundy, and the Northwest Indiana counties of Lake and Porter. Lemont is a full service bank located in the community of Lemont, Illinois.

Lawrence P. Kelley, President and Chief Executive Officer of Standard Bank, stated: "This transaction provides excellent opportunities for the customers of both organizations. The merger with the Community Bank of Lemont continues our strategy of expanding our presence into new communities while continuing to provide outstanding customer service. In addition to increasing our customer base and our presence in the Chicagoland marketplace, this merger will allow our customers the convenience of an additional branch and ATM location."

"Standard Bank has a long history of serving the southwest metropolitan Chicagoland area," added

Timothy J. Gallagher, the Chairman of the Board of Standard Bancshares. "The acquisition of the Community Bank of Lemont represents a logical expansion within our core market area and a good long term investment for our company. Community Bank of Lemont has a solid customer base and a very good management team."

Richard A. Meade, President and Chief Executive Officer of Lemont, stated: "We are excited for this excellent opportunity to combine with a fine organization like Standard Bank. The combined company will create new and exciting opportunities for our customers and be a great benefit to our community."

Donnelly Penman & Partners, Grosse Pointe, Michigan, has served as financial advisor to Lemont in connection with the proposed acquisition. Standard is being represented by Barack Ferrazzano Kirschbaum Perlman & Nagelberg, LLP, Chicago, Illinois, and Lemont is being represented by Hinshaw & Culbertson LLP, Chicago, Illinois.

Increase Fines For Repeat Disability Parking Abuse

Legislation initiated by Secretary of State Jesse White increasing fines of up to $1,000 for people who continually abuse disability parking placards and license plates was approved by the Illinois Senate Transportation Committee.

Under White's proposal (SB-1318), those caught parking with a fraudulent disability placard or license plate in spaces reserved for people with disabilities will face fines of $750 for their second offense and $1,000 for their third or subsequent offense.

The violator may also have his or her driving privileges, as well as the disability license plates or placard, suspended or revoked.

"It is unbelievable that able-bodied people would time and time again abuse this important program and take parking spaces reserved for persons with disabilities," White said. "The increased fines and suspensions will send a message that if you continue to violate the program you will pay the price financially as well as personally."

The legislation also clarifies that placards are not transferable and the authorized holder must be present, entering or exiting the vehicle at the time the parking privileges are being used.

The proposed legislation also states that 50 percent of each fine collected will be distributed to the law enforcement agency that issued the citation or made the arrest. This includes the Secretary of State Dept. of Police, where 50 percent of the fine will go into the Secretary of State Police Services Fund.

There are over 455,000 placards and over 90,000 disability plates in Illinois. The measure will now move to the full Illinois Senate.

Madigan Releases Open Government Statistics

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently released the second annual report on the work of the Illinois Public Access Counselor. According to the statistics in the report, in its second year since the creation of the Public Access Counselor, ordinary members of the public continue to lead the pack of those asking for assistance in accessing public documents.

In 2006, Madigan's office received 988 requests from members of the public, government bodies and the media concerning the Illinois Open Meetings Act (OMA) and the Illinois Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). More than 80 percent of the 988 matters brought to the Public Access Counselor in 2006 came from members of the public.

"Open and honest government is the cornerstone of American democracy, and it can only be achieved through the free exchange of information between the government and its citizens," said Madigan said. "The statistics from our Public Access Counselor's second year of work demonstrate that members of the public throughout Illinois are actively interested in being involved in the work of their government. And they confirm the importance of our efforts to provide help to the public through the Public Access Counselor. We are delighted to see so many people knocking on our door, seeking clarification on freedom of information and open government issues."

Madigan added, "When I established the Public Access Counselor, many people thought the media would be our most frequent requestor. While I am pleased that we are able to serve as a resource for members of the media and government officials, it is very satisfying to see that Illinoisans know they can come to us for assistance in seeking access."

In December 2004, Madigan created the Public Access and Opinions Division in her office and appointed Terry Mutchler to serve as the state's first Public Access Counselor. In May 2006, as part of an expansion of this division, Scott B. Sievers, an attorney with experience litigating cases under FOIA and OMA, joined the office as an Assistant Public Access Counselor.

The Public Access Counselor's role is to ensure that public bodies understand the requirements of the sunshine laws and conduct their business openly and that the public has access to governmental information to which they are entitled. Through the Public Access Counselor, Madigan's office serves as a valuable resource for government officials, members of the public, and the media when questions or disputes arise.

Madigan said that in 2006, the most common FOIA issue raised with the Public Access Counselor concerned the fees charged by government agencies in response to requests for public documents. When documents are requested, FOIA permits a public body to charge "the actual cost of reproduction." The law does not permit public bodies to charge the cost of searching for and reviewing the requested documents.

The most common OMA issue raised with the Public Access Counselor involved questions as to when the law allows public bodies to go into closed session.

Lane Closures On Rt. 30 Under I-55

The Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) announced that weather permitting as of March 20, one lane will be closed in each direction on U.S. Route 30, under I-55 as part of the I-55 Corridor Improvement project in Will County.

These lane reductions, which will be in place for much of the construction season, are necessary to widen the bridges that carry I-55 over U.S. 30 so that they can accommodate a third lane when I-55 is widened next year.

In addition, there will be full stops, weather permitting, from Sunday night through Wednesday night next week in both directions of I-55 between IL Rt. 126 and U.S. 6. These stops will be in intervals of 15 minutes between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m., and are for installation of overhead signs.

On I-55, two lanes of traffic will remain open during daytime hours as IDOT widens seven bridges this construction season along I-55 between Weber Rd. and US Rt. 6 in preparation for next year's widening of the expressway from two lanes to three lanes from Weber Rd. to I-80.

Here is what the traveling public can expect on I-55 during this construction season: narrow lanes, closed shoulders, and lane shifts; night time lane closures beginning at 9 p.m., lasting until 5 a.m. northbound and 7 a.m. southbound; a 55 mile per hour work zone speed limit during the daytime, and a 45 mph speed limit on nights when closures are in effect; construction traffic entering and leaving the work zone; and traffic delays.

The contractor for both projects is a joint venture comprised of D Construction, PT Ferro and Gallagher Construction. The two contracts are worth a combined $28.8 million.

IDOT advises that a work zone speed limit will be strictly enforced by Illinois State Police, for the safety of workers and the motoring public.

RAINBOW TROUT STOCKED AT 42 LOCATIONS IN ILLINOIS, INCLUDING CLOSE TO HOME: The 2007 spring trout fishing season in Illinois begins at 5 a.m. on Saturday, April 7th.

The IDNR stocks more than 60,000 rainbow trout in bodies of water where spring trout fishing is permitted. The trout-stocking program in Illinois is made possible through the sale of inland trout stamps.

Inland trout stamps are available for $6.50 each at DNR Direct license and permit vendors, and may be purchased with a credit card through the IDNR web site at <http://dnr.state.il.us> or by phone at 1(888) 673-7648.

To legally participate in the trout fishing program, anglers must have a valid Illinois fishing license and an inland trout stamp. Annual fishing licenses will be valid through March 31st, 2008. Anglers may also purchase Illinois' 24-hour fishing license, which includes trout fishing privileges for the 24-hour period the license is valid. A license is required for fishing in Illinois unless the angler is under age 16, blind or disabled, or is an Illinois resident on active military service who is home on leave.

Anglers may not take trout from any of the stocked sites from March 15th to the opening of the season on April 7th at 5 a.m. Anyone attempting to take trout before the legal opening will be issued citations. During the spring trout season, the daily limit is five fish.

Anglers are reminded to check in advance for any site-specific regulations and the opening time of their favorite trout fishing location. While the statewide spring trout season opens at 5 a.m. on April 7th, some locations may have a later opening. For more information about the trout-stocking program, contact the IDNR Division of Fisheries at (217) 782-6424 or check the web site at www.ifishillinois.org.

Note: This is a slam-dunk situation. No special tackle is needed, just a pole, line, hook and bobber, garden worms or bait from a local bait shop. (Tobacco World & Bait Shop, 11405 S. Harlem Ave. in Worth, along with other shops in the area, have everything you need to catch those rainbow trout.)

Local bodies of water scheduled to be part of the spring trout program include: Axehead Lake, Cook County; Belleau Lake, Cook County Forest Preserve District; Sag Quarry East, Cook County Forest Preserve.

■WITH A LITTLE LUCK AND SOME SKILL - YOU CAN WIN YOUR EASTER HAM: This Sunday, March 25th is the Palos Sportsman's Gun Club Annual Easter Ham Shoot. This is one of the rare occasions when the club is open to the public. Bring your favorite shotgun, family and friends and come out for some clay pigeon shooting.

The fun begins at 9 a.m. and runs through 4 p.m. The club is located at 24160 S. Harlem Ave. in nearby Frankfort, Illinois. Phone: (815) 469-4446. Don't be bashful, I will be on hand from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to lend a helping hand, if needed.

■RECREATIONAL BOATING GENERATES $25 BILLION: A university study showed that recreational boating has a $25.6 billion economic impact on the country. Dr. Ed Mahoney of Michigan State's Recreational Marine Research Center conducted the study in 2005. He polled 12,000 people and included power and sailboats of all lengths.

To verify the survey's accuracy, Mahoney compared his numbers with industry leaders in individual segments to make sure the figures matched. The study also looked at how much was spent on day and overnight trips. On average, boaters spent $103 a day for day trips and $588 for overnight trips. That comes to about $21 billion spent on trips by all boaters each year. (Credit: the Great Lakes Basin Report)

■TURKEY HUNTING TIPS: Turkey season is almost here and hunters are beginning to get their gear in order. Alex Rutledge (who I met a few years back), a Hunter's Specialties Pro Staff Member, offers the following tips:

"Part of being a successful turkey hunter is not only calling, but attention to detail. I like to take proper care of my calls so that they sound consistent all the time. If you use a slate call, sand the call one way so that the striker bites better and you have more control. I always store my diaphragm call in the refrigerator to keep the reeds in good shape."

"If you are hunting with a buddy, always separate a few feet when using locator calls. This will help you hear more turkeys. Once I have located a bird, I like to use a hen and lake decoy to get the gobbler's attention."

"All types of calls have their place. Box calls are good during windy conditions; glass calls are often high-pitched and cause toms to respond; slate calls are good for yelps and soft purrs; diaphragm calls make all the sounds of a wild turkey without a lot of movement." Skyway Collegiate Conference

Even though the women's softball team is rebuilding this year, the Cyclones think they have a solid shot at being a contender in the Illinois Skyway Collegiate Conference.

"We've added some outstanding ballplayers to this team during the off-season, and we have the talent to be just as competitive as we've been in the past," said head coach Aleka Letsos, who played at Moraine in 1996-97. Letsos says the 2007 campaign marks an exciting opportunity for her team. "We can't wait to begin this season," Letsos said. "We've been recruiting players all winter, and each player we have is committed to the success of this team."

The Cyclones look to return four players from last year. Leading the way is team MVP, All-Conference and All-Region selection Natalie Wigginton (Evergreen Park), who led the team last year in home runs (7) - tying a school record - and setting another school record with a .892 slugging percentage in 111 at-bats. Kristina O'Connor (Evergreen Park) and Kelly McKinney (Oak Lawn) are also looking to improve on their impressive freshman years in which they both earned All-Conference honors. Lori Paulmeyer (Eisenhower) is also expected to make key contributions.

Nine newcomers also will add support to the Cyclones roster. Starting pitchers Annie McEldowney (Mother McAuley), Whitney Andrews (Bradley-Bourbonnais) and Ellie Renz (Andrew) will bolster the pitching rotation, with transfer Christina Atton (Shepard) playing shortstop and outfield. Megan Stroh (Mount Assisi), Caitlin Griffin (Andrew), Jenna Vickers (Stagg), Meg Ryan (Queen of Peace) and Dawn Garces (Eisenhower) also will provide pop in the lineup.

"Our returning players, along with the addition of our freshman recruiting class, give us many options throughout the season. The foundation and talent is very strong, which will allow us to contend for a title," Letsos said.

Letsos, who begins her second season as head coach, brings 15 years of experience to the job. She received all-conference honors in volleyball, basketball and softball, and was inducted into the Reavis High School Hall of Fame. Letsos went on to earn Female Athlete of the Year honors at Moraine Valley, and finished her college career at Carthage College, where she set a career school record for most hits in one game (5), and finished in the top five all-time leaders for doubles and triples. Letsos also gives private softball hitting lessons during the off-season.

Assisting her this season will be Pete Les, who has more than 15 years of coaching experience in baseball and softball. He is a private hitting instructor and currently works with professional and minor league baseball players. Les has assisted in providing hitting instruction at various NCAA Division I, II and III baseball and softball programs. Les graduated from Reavis High School before graduating from the University of Illinois-Chicago.

Also joining the Moraine Valley coaching staff this year is Amy Marek, a former Moraine Valley player who received All-Conference honors as the starting catcher for the Cyclones. A Reavis High School graduate and Western Illinois University alumni, Marek will primarily work with the catchers and pitchers.

Freshman Of The Year

St. Xavier University freshman guard Julian Scott (Country Club Hills/Hillcrest) was named the CCAC Freshman of the Year and earned first team recognition to highlight five SXU men's basketball players on the 2007 all-conference squad. In addition to Scott, sophomore forward Adam Gregoriou (Burbank/Brother Rice) also garnered All-CCAC first team honors, while junior forward Dan Bolger (Chicago/St. Patrick), senior guard Chris McCormick (Frankfort/Lincoln-Way East) and senior guard Ken McCormick (Frankfort/Lincoln-Way East) all earned honorable mention recognition.

Scott has averaged 12.8 points, 5.6 rebounds and 3.9 assists per game this season and has been a regular starter for the Cougars all season. He has shot 52 percent (129-for-246) from the field this year and has a 79 percent clip (88-for-111) from the free-throw line. Gregoriou is averaging 9.2 points and 4.6 rebounds a game this season and is shooting 50 percent (92-for-185) from the field on the year.

Playing in all 28 games for SXU this season, Bolger has averaged 8.1 points and a team leading 6.7 rebounds per game. Ken McCormick has contributed 8.0 points and 2.0 assists per game average, while twin brother Chris McCormick has chipped in 7.1 points per game and 2.8 rebounds. This is the first All-CCAC recognition for all five players in their collegiate careers. It is also the second year in a row that Coach Tom O'Malley's team has had the CCAC Freshman of the Year.

St. Baldrick's Fundraiser

Cook County Sheriff Thomas J. Dart shows off his barber skills at the kick-off of Mt. Carmel's St. Baldrick's fundraiser. Father Carl Marketz, principal of Mt. Carmel High School, volunteered to be the first to have his head shaved in support of the St. Baldrick's Foundation, whose mission is to raise awareness and money for childhood cancer.

Students at Mt. Carmel raised more than $8,500 for the St. Baldrick's Foundation, with more than 100 students, faculty and Carmelite priests participating.

Animal Welfare Tag Day

The Animal Welfare League will be holding AVID Microchip Tag Day on Saturday, March 24th from 1 to 5 p.m. at its facility, 10305 Southwest Highway in Chicago Ridge. No appointment needed.

For only $15, pet owners can protect their pets by having an identifying microchip administered. This procedure, normally priced $30.75, is quick and harmless to the animal.

A.V.I.D. stands for American Veterinary Identification Devices. The AVID microchip is a tiny computer chip which has an identification number programmed into it. The chip is encased in a smooth, strong biocompatible glass, and is small enough to fit into a hypodermic needle. Once an animal is injected with the chip, he can be identified throughout his life by this one-of-a-kind number. His identification cannot be lost, altered or intentionally removed.

The microchip is generally injected deeply under the skin. It sits safely there, totally inert. A special scanner is used to send a radio signal through the skin of the animal to read the chip. The animal feels nothing as the scanner is passed over him. The microchip sends its number back to the scanner. It appears in the viewing window as, for example, AVID 220*609*321.

The microchip has no power supply, battery or moving parts. It is designed with an operating life of over 25 years and is guaranteed for the life of the animal. Once injected, the microchip is anchored in place as a thin layer of connective tissue forms around it. The chip requires no care. It does not pass through or out of the body.

Scuba Diving & Aquatic-Related Careers

Realizing that encouraging young people to get involved in diving is vital to the future of the industry, its business and the marine environment, the Diving Equipment & Marketing Association (DEMA) took its new youth-based initiative, Deep Ambitions Aquatic Career Fair, on the road to Our World Underwater in Chicago on Feb. 9th. DEMA's first Career Fair of 2007 was attended by 153 high school and junior high school students from Brookwood Junior High School in Glenwood; Edison Regional Gifted Center in Chicago; Eisenhower High School in Blue Island; Neukua Valley High School in Naperville; Richards High School in Oak Lawn; and Shepard High School in Palos Heights.

During the full-day event the students met with and heard from two successful professionals - Gary Joyce from PADI, who spoke about diving and aquatic careers, and Stephan Becker from Beautiful Oceans, who talked about marine conservation, education and the responsible enjoyment of our marine resources. Career Fair participants also took part in exciting and educational hands-on activities including scuba diving in the 17,000 gallon DEMA Scuba Tour pool under the supervision of local dive professionals and explored a virtual exhibit area which included a display and live animals from Chicago's Shedd Aquarium. Additionally, students had the unique opportunity to speak with Detective Barry Churin from the Palos Park Police Department and Jason Martin from the Palos Park Fire Department, each of whom provided valuable information about their jobs and let the kids try on various equipment used in their diving operations. "This event provided an amazing and unique opportunity for our students and the school district and has made a difference to so many of the kids," said Pamela Hollich, Superintendent of School District 167. "The fact that our students were invited to participate was huge for this group of kids and the impact of the event on them has been significant with many still talking about the activities and information they received in the weeks following."

"The Career Fair opened our students' eyes and exposed them to information and experiences they normally wouldn't have access to," said Bethany Lindsay, Principal of Brookwood Junior High School. "In addition to having the authentic experience to go scuba diving, the kids learned so much and on the way back to school talked about scuba diving, becoming marine biologists or divers for the police department - careers they hadn't considered before this - along with the courses they would have to take in order to pursue these careers. We can't wait for the Career Fair to revisit Chicago so that we can participate again."

"What was interesting [about the Career Fair] was how many schools were so open to the idea. And to put frosting on the cake letting them dive was fantastic. The Scuba Tour pool made this event. I would do the career days again," said DEMA member Patrick Hammer of Scuba Emporium and Our World Underwater show organizer.

Another local dive center owner and DEMA member, Tom Tovello of Sea Lions Dive Center of Hanover Park, said, "The pool is a great idea. Anything that gets people talking about diving is great. We need more. We need to go to classrooms and excite them and let them know that they can do it and they will come. We need to keep putting diving into the forefront. We not only showed a number of people what it feels like to breathe underwater, we also touched everyone they told, and anyone who walked by and saw them. Every person we touched will touch four to five others."

Developed by DEMA in response to requests from Association members to create an industry-wide initiative to bring more young people into diving, DEMA's Deep Ambitions Aquatic Career Fair is a youth-based program that provides a forum where students can learn about and experience scuba diving and aquatic-related careers firsthand. Benefiting both DEMA Members and the dive industry as a whole, the Career Fair not only raises awareness of scuba diving among today's youth, but also gets them excited about the many possible aquatic-related careers available. The Career Fair was launched at DEMA Show 2006 in Orlando, Florida and will continue traveling around the U.S. making stops in other cities throughout 2007. For information about DEMA's Career Fair Program, contact Nicole Russell at nrussell@dema.org.

Moraine Valley Buys Site In Tinley Park

Moraine Valley Community College has approved a contract to purchase a 12.6-acre site in Tinley Park, so it can provide full services conveniently to residents in the fastest-growing area of the college district.

"This property at 179th St. and 94th Ave. is ideal for us and offers great flexibility to our community members who live in the southwest sector of our district," said Sandra S. Wagner, chair of the Moraine Valley Board of Trustees.

"The site will allow us to build now and expand in the future," said Dr. Vernon O. Crawley, college president. "It is just east of LaGrange Road, north of Interstate 80 and west of Harlem Ave., and convenient for our students who reside in the southwest area of our district who would otherwise have a difficult time getting to our main campus in Palos Hills." Additionally, Dr. Crawley said, the center would be able to provide educational programming to area health care facilities.

The center will offer college credit and noncredit courses during the day, evening and Saturdays similar to the college's education center at Blue Island. The off-campus center is one of the projects in the $89 million bond referendum voters approved March 21, 2006.

"We look forward to working cooperatively with Tinley Park officials. This is a win-win situation for the college and the village," Dr. Crawley said.

"We will be able to serve the fastest-growing area of our district conveniently," said Nancy Curé, dean of Enrichment Services who oversees off-campus sites. According to the last census for the southwest region of the district, the population grew 36 percent from 1990 through 2000. Projections indicate that there will be an additional 35 percent growth in that area in the upcoming 15 to 25 years.

The center will serve residents in Oak Forest, Orland Hills, Orland Park, and Tinley Park. "We want to bring Moraine Valley closer to home for these residents. We have an excellent relationship with Andrew High School and Century Junior High School, but we are not able to offer day and weekend classes. We want to be able to provide those alternatives to the community," Curé said. Currently, approximately 500 students are enrolled in a variety of evening classes at Andrew in Tinley Park and at Century in Orland Park. Moraine Valley has offered classes at Andrew for the past 16 years and at Century for the past four years.

The center will be approximately 35,700 square feet that would include at least 10 classrooms, two computer labs, a science lab, and a multipurpose room. The center also would have a student services area, its own parking lot, and the potential for expansion.

Spring Fling

Spring is in the air! Trinity Lutheran Church will host a "Spring Fling" small craft fair on Sunday, March 25th from 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon. The fair will include crafts that the church crafters have made for spring, including Easter, summer and garden items. There will be a few other crafters from the church who will sell their novelty crafts, jewelry and food items. Coffee and goodies will be for sale along with a wonderful bake sale.

The church is at 97th & Brandt Ave. (2 blocks west of Cicero). For more information, call the church office at (708) 422-0193.

The Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., has two community display cases that may be reserved for one calendar month by individuals, local community groups and organizations interested in exhibiting special collections, handicrafts, activities and creative works. Applications are available at the Reception Booth.

The Geek Squad Agents At Mother McAuley

The Geek Squad Agents from Best Buy were on a mission recently to encourage the students at Mother McAuley Liberal Arts High School to not only be confident young women who follow their dreams, but that careers in technology are within their reach.

McAuley welcomed three female executives from Best Buy and Geek Squad who spoke during the All-School Women's Rally to kick-off Women's Month at McAuley. The speakers were Beth Smits, Vice President - Services Operations, Shari Ballard, Executive Vice President - Human Capital and Leadership, and Moira Hardek, Mission Specialist Geek Squad Corporate and McAuley Class of 1997. Each guest spoke from personal experience about leadership, women in technology, and self-confidence.

After the rally, McAuley Principal Sister Rose Wlorek, RSM, announced the new Geek Squad Academy, a camp that will take place this summer at McAuley and be conducted by Agents from the Geek Squad. The two-week Academy will consist of a week long session for current McAuley students as well as one for grammar school girls interested in technology.

Best Buy/Geek Squad also sponsored a writing contest focusing on the issues of women and technology, women and learning, and self-confidence. The first place winners, senior Steffi Leung (Chgo., West Lawn) and freshman Mary Baker (Chg., Beverly) were awarded Toshiba Laptop Computers. The second place winners, freshman Julia Swann (Oak Lawn), sophomore Kaitlyn Vranicar (Oak Lawn), juniors Amanda Mendez (Chg., Eastside) and Allison Battain (Chg., Clearing), and senior Anne Kellogg (Evergreen Park) each received a digital camera. Third place winners, freshman Paige Doljanin (Chg., West Beverly), sophomore Megan Lehocky (Oak Lawn), junior Tara Sheehan (Chg., Bridgeport), Julia Swann (Oak Lawn) and seniors Maggie Wood (Evergreen Park), and Ashley M. O'Brien (Chg., Mt. Greenwood) won an Apple iPod. All prizes were generously donated by Best Buy and Geek Squad.

Early Voting

Registered voters in suburban Cook County can vote early for the April 17th Consolidated Election at the Village of Oak Lawn. Early voting begins on March 26th and continues until April 12th weekdays from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on two consecutive Saturdays, March 31st and April 7th, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Luncheon

The Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce will host their annual Employee and Volunteer Appreciation Day Luncheon on Wednesday, April 25 at the Hilton Oak Lawn, 9333 S. Cicero Ave. All Area businesses are invited to participate in this opportunity to thank their dedicated staff and helpers.

The luncheon theme is "Afternoon in the Park," and will feature entertainment by "The Singing Men of Notes," a delicious Chicken Marsala lunch with Caesar salad, wild rice blend, stuffed broiled tomato with spinach and chocolate cake for dessert (a vegetarian option is available), door prizes and a long stem rose & gift for all attendees. Sign-in begins at 11:30 am. Lunch will be served at noon. The cost is $22 per person. Reservation deadline is Wednesday, April 18.

For additional information, reservation forms or to find out how your business can donate prizes for the event, call (708) 424-8300.

Local Tourism Marketing Grants

The Chicago Southland Convention & Visitors Bureau (CSCVB) awarded $29,940 in Local Tourism Marketing grants to seven regional not-for-profit organizations and/or municipalities for promotion of their festivals and events targeted to visitors outside the Chicago Southland region.

The CSCVB developed the Local Tourism Marketing Grant program in 1991, and since the program's inception has awarded over $850,000 in grants to assist not-for-profits and municipalities in promoting their events. Annually, the Bureau can award up to $66,000 in two grant cycles.

Details of the seven grants awarded in the first cycle of FY07 includes:

The Children's Museum of Oak Lawn, Village of Oak Lawn: Emerging Museum Promotion, $6,443.00 - The Children's Museum of Oak Lawn is expanding its audience by advertising to families in Wisconsin, Indianapolis and Chicago. This grant will pay 60% of placement costs for advertisements in Metroparent, Chicago Parent, Chicago Parent (GOING PLACES) and Indy's Child, as well as brochure printing.

Freedom Hall, Village of Park Forest: Winter/Spring 2007 Promotion, $3,210.00 - Freedom Hall's Nathan Manilow Theatre Winter/Spring 2007 season presents popular performers from around the United States. STRESS: NEW FINDINGS COME FROM NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

C-reactive Protein

Conventional wisdom suggests that a life lived in moderation is the secret to a long, healthy life. At Northwestern U., researchers have another bit of advice—cut the stress. In an ongoing collaboration with colleagues from the University of Chicago, associate professor Thomas McDade, Director of the Northwestern University Laboratory for Human Biology Research, is studying the factors that contribute to healthy aging among both men and women between the ages of 57 and 84. McDade and his colleagues have found that individuals with a high level of C-reactive protein—an indicator which can be measured by simple blood testing—often reported a high burden of stress. C-reactive protein historically has been found to demonstrate high levels in inflammation, and can be an indicator of heart disease. The community-based study is the first of its kind to link stress with C-reactive protein.

Bedtime "Angst" and Cortisol Levels

Another interesting finding is that high cortisol levels (cortisol is a hormone found in the blood which measures stress) may help to boost energy levels in older adults. It has been noted for some time among researchers, that older adults who go to bed sad, stressed, or lonely, often wake up with a "boost" which helps them cope; this "burst" of positive energy has been linked to an elevated level of cortisol. According to Emma K. Adam, assistant professor of education and social policy at Northwestern, and principal investigator on a recent study, "this stress hormone cues the body to rev up to deal with day-to-day negative experiences." In collaboration with researchers from the University of Chicago, the saliva of 156 older adults living in Cook County was sampled, three times a day for three consecutive days. Study participants reported their feelings each night in a diary, and researchers looked at whether cortisol levels on a certain day were predicted by the experiences the day before, or were predictive of experiences the same day.

While long-term elevations of cortisol are potentially harmful to human health, Adam found that older adults who go to sleep with high stress levels awaken with elevated cortisol levels that actually help them with their negative experiences. This may be why—even under the most dire of circumstances—such as the illness or death of a spouse or loved one—the elderly are able to "carry on", in a way which appears impossible to the rest of us.

Women's Health Issues

The Northwest Indiana Group of Y-ME Illinois, an organization dedicated to breast cancer education and support, will hold its next Open Door Meeting on Saturday, April 14th, in the Doctors' Meeting Room on the west side of Community Hospital's cafeteria, 901 MacArthur Blvd., Munster, Indiana, at 10 a.m. This meeting will feature one lecture entitled "General Overview of Pacemakers, Defibrillators, Etc.," given by Pam Mandich, Clinical Specialist of Medtronic Cardiac Rhythm Management. Breast cancer patients, their families and friends and health professionals interested in the topic are welcome at Open Door Meetings. This session is free and reservations are not necessary.

The mission of Y-ME is to ensure, through information, empowerment, and peer support, that no one faces breast cancer alone. Y-ME Illinois provides assistance to the nearly 10,000 persons newly diagnosed with breast cancer in Illinois each year, with a special emphasis on the underserved populations in Illinois. Y-ME Illinois offers the following free, local programs and services: mammography screening, support groups, educational workshops for adults and teens, wig and prosthesis salons, a resource library and ongoing advocacy and educational work throughout the state. For more information about Y-ME Illinois, call (312) 364-9071, or visit www.y-me.org/illinois.

For information about the meeting or Y-ME call Dorothy Gillespie at (219) 838-6111.

Health For Humanity Opera Gala

Health for Humanity, the Chicago-based non-profit international health organization, will celebrate its 15th anniversary of service to the global human family by hosting its 2007 Opera Gala on Saturday, March 31st at the Swissotel, 323 E. Wacker Dr., Chicago, at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend the event. Tickets are $200 each and can be obtained by calling Health for Humanity at (847) 425-7900.

The event will honor the seven Founders of La Leche League International on the 50th anniversary of that organization's founding. Health for Humanity's "Evening of the Arts" will include opera performances by artists from the V.O.I.C. Experience Foundation under the direction of world renowned baritone, Sherrill Milnes.

Every year Health for Humanity's Opera Gala honors a Chicago community member who has demonstrated his or her commitment to the principles of the unity and nobility of humanity and the equality of men and women. This year, seven women, the Founders of La Leche League International will receive this prestigious award for their 50 years of helping women around the globe breastfeed their babies. The seven Founders of La Leche League are: Marian Tompson, Mary White, Edwina Froehlich, Viola Lennon, Mary Ann Cahill, Mary Ann Kerwin, and Betty Wagner Spandikow. As seven ordinary women living in the metropolitan Chicago area in 1956, they had a simple dream: that women who wanted to breastfeed should be able to find the necessary support and information. They created a model of a facilitated and participatory group dynamic, mother-to-mother support that validates the experience and knowledge of women while motivating them to learn more. The mother-to-mother support model has been very effective in initiating and changing behavior. Over 50 years, LLL has grown to be an international organization in 69 countries, with over 7,000 volunteers. The inspiration and dedication of the Founders to their cause has had a significant impact on the health and well-being of millions of women and infants around the world. For more information about La Leche League International see www.lalecheleague.org. Health for Humanity is pleased to honor these seven extraordinary women, who have so effectively embodied Health for Humanity's founding principles of the nobility of humanity, the quality of men and women, and the importance of local leadership for sustainable community health development. The evening's entertainment—the "Voices Around the World" opera performances featuring artists from the V.O.I.C. Experience Foundation under the direction of world renowned baritone, Sherrill Milnes, and his wife, Maria Zouves—will also highlight and honor volunteerism and service to others. Triple Grammy winner Milnes is internationally recognized as the leading Verdi Baritone of his time. Having sung in every major opera house and with every major symphony of the world, his remarkable voice, artistic integrity, commanding stage presence, and 42 year career has led him to legendary status. Milnes and his wife soprano Maria Zouves, have now dedicated their time to helping young, talented opera singers find their own career direction. The charity they established, V.O.I.C. Experience, is committed to the education and development of classical signers throughout the theatrical and operatic world.

Health for Humanity (HH) is a volunteer-supported health development organization. Established by Chicago-area health professionals in 1992 with the goal of uniting people in service for the advancement of world health, it has since grown to partner with local governmental and non-governmental institutions around the world, developing sustainable capacity for meeting the health needs of partner communities. HH's work focuses on maternal and child health, blindness prevention, and international continuing medical education. Health for Humanity's Executive Director is May Khadem, MD, MPH, an ophthalmologist and 2006 Northwestern Memorial Hospital Martin Luther King Jr. Award honoree.

Go On An Energy Diet And Save Money

Like most Americans, you're probably reeling from your winter heating bills and hoping spring comes soon. I spoke with some insiders at a major utility company about ways consumers can conserve energy - and cut utility bills. Here are some of their money-saving tips:

Lower your thermostat. The U.S. Department of Energy estimates that every 1 degree you lower your thermostat saves about 3 percent on your heating bill. Try lowering it further when you go to bed or are away from home to see an even bigger difference. If you have a furnace, clean or replace the filters frequently - at least once every three months - to ensure efficient operation. On sunny days, open your blinds or curtains to help warm the house; close them at night to help retain heat.

Insulate your home. You can save up to 10 percent of your heating (and cooling) costs by adding weather stripping around windows and doors and caulking around ducts, plumbing bypasses and other openings in walls, floors and ceilings. And talk to a contractor about adding insulation to your attic, exterior walls, floors and crawl spaces. The investment will pay for itself many times over.

Water temperature. Water heating is the third-largest energy expense in the home. Try lowering your water heater temperature to 120°F or lower to see if it's still comfortable. No sense running scalding water from the tap. (However, if you have a dishwasher, check the manual first to ensure proper operation.) Many hot water heaters also work more efficiently with insulating "blankets," but be careful not to cover its thermostat.

Buy Energy Star products. If every American home replaced just one light bulb with a compact fluorescent bulb, we'd save enough energy each year to light more than 2.5 million homes. And Energy Star appliances are much more efficient than standard models. For example, Energy Star washers use 50 percent less energy than pre-1994 models. Go to www.energy.gov for a wealth of information on finding stores that sell these products, special rebates offered by Energy Star partners and utilities, federal tax credits, home improvement suggestions, and much more.

Fireplaces. Traditional fireplaces can often allow more heated air to escape than they generate. Look into installing tempered glass doors and a heat-air exchange system that blows warmed air back into the room. And always make sure the damper is closed when the fireplace is not in use.

Use appliances more efficiently. For example:

- Run full loads in your washer and dryer and use cold or warm water whenever possible. Most detergents are formulated accordingly.
- Run full dishwasher loads and use the unheated drying cycle if it has one.
- Refrigerators are one of the biggest energy hogs in your home. Older machines use twice the energy of newer Energy Star models.
- Don't preheat your oven and limit how often you open the door - each time you do, the temperature drops about 25 degrees.
- Turn off computers, printers, televisions, stereos and other equipment when not in use.

Staff Fights Fat Through Fitness

Employees in the Office of Dorothy Brown, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Cook County, have more energy to work effectively throughout the workday because they are fighting fat with co-workers during a daily, morning workout.

"To exercise regularly is an important part of maintaining good health," said Clerk Brown. "I commend the County Division staff for working out to stay healthy and gain energy so they can better serve Clerk's Office customers."

Nearly 15 staff members in the Clerk's Office "County Division A Team" exercise for 15 minutes each workday before they begin handling job responsibilities. Steve Lewis, operations manager and exercise team leader in the County Division, initiated the program early this year.

"We started exercising after one status meeting," said Lewis. "Instead of just having a general meeting, I thought it would be nice to stretch and exercise."

Lewis explained that staff members enjoyed exercising at that initial meeting, and they love it even more now.

Freezin' For A Reason

It's not every day that people are willing to "go jump in a lake" - particularly in the winter. But that's exactly what happened on various weekends in February and March as part of the annual Law Enforcement Torch Run Polar Plunge®. The plunges raised a total of $622,000 for the athletes of Special Olympics Illinois.

The event has grown from one location in 1999 to 16 locations across the state (see list below) this year. In addition, the 2nd Annual SUPER Plunge (where dedicated plungers jump into Lake Michigan once an hour for 24 hours) was a huge success. Six Flags Great America and its Hurricane Harbor is the statewide sponsor of the Polar Plunges.

Thousands of adventurous souls including college and high school students joined law enforcement officers, as well as media and business and civic leaders from their community by donning bathing suits, costumes or any clothing of choice to jump in a lake. Each plunger collected a minimum of $75 in donations that will be used to support Special Olympics programs in Illinois.

The Illinois Law Enforcement Torch Run is the single largest year-round fundraising event benefiting Special Olympics Illinois. The annual intrastate relay and its various fundraising projects have two goals: to raise money and increase public awareness for the athletes of Special Olympics Illinois. Each year, more than 3,000 officers in Illinois run more than 1,500 miles carrying the Flame of Hope through the streets of their hometowns and deliver it to the State Summer Games in Normal in June.

Hope For Olivia Grace

Join us for an afternoon of carnival fun at a benefit for Olivia St.Germain at the Bridgeview Community Center on Saturday, May 19th, from 1 to 6 p.m.

Olivia is 2 1/2 years old. She was diagnosed with Langerhans Cell Histiocytosis, known as LCH. It is a rare blood disease that causes tumors to grow in her body. Olivia has four tumors. She has already undergone two surgeries. Only one tumor was operable and there are three remaining tumors in her head, neck and her eye.

In addition, Olivia receives chemotherapy and steroid injections once every three weeks. Daily medications include a chemotherapy pill and antibiotics. Olivia's progress is monitored with MRI's and CAT scans every six weeks.

Any money that is raised will provide financial support to the St.Germain family to assist them with medical expenses and other costs associated with Olivia's treatments.

Come out to show your support and have "Carnivals of Fun" with Olivia and the St.Germain family!

Admission is $10 per person or $20 per family. The admission price includes one free entry into the Grand Prize Raffle. Inside there will be music, games, Gertie's ice cream, additional raffle prizes and may food items for purchase.

Tickets can be purchased at the door, or call (708) 819-0597 for purchase of tickets in advance. The Grand Prize Raffle winner need not be present.

For those unable to attend, but who would like to help, direct donations can be made to: Bridgeview Bank, 7940 South Harlem Ave., Bridgeview, IL 60455, in c/o Olivia Grace St.Germain Benefit Fund.

For updates on Olivia, or for more information about LCH visit caringbridge.org/visit/oliviagracc.

Veterans And Soldiers

By Lori Taylor

Ph: 708.388.2425

Air Force Airman Michael S. Connolly has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. He is the son of Mary Pat Connolly of Chicago.

Governor Rod Blagojevich on March 16th named and honored lifelong Illinoisan James Michael O'Rourke, Sr. of LaGrange as the State of Illinois' March "Veteran of the Month." O'Rourke died suddenly on Dec. 23, 2006 at the early age of 49. He was honored for his undivided commitment and dedication to helping service members and their families throughout Illinois.

On behalf of the Governor and Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs Director L. Tammy Duckworth, IDVA Assistant Director Rochelle Crump presented the O'Rourke family with the award during a special dedication ceremony on March 16th at the American Legion Hall in LaGrange.

James O'Rourke was a U.S. Army and Illinois National Guard veteran who served for 15 years, 3 years with the Army and 12 years with the National Guard. He retired from military service in 1999 as a Lt. Colonel. After retiring from service he continued his involvement with the military as the Senior Army Instructor for the JROTC Programs at the Chicago Military Academy-Bronzeville and at the Nicholas Senn Metro High School. Representing the Army, O'Rourke trained, supervised and mentored the cadets, spending many after-hours with them, participating in color guards for numerous veterans' organizations.

Mr. O'Rourke was an Honorary Life Member of the American Legion, serving as the Senior Vice Commander and Post Commander for the Robert E. Coulter, Jr. Post 1941. Later he served as the Junior Vice Commander, Senior Vice Commander and Commander for the American Legion Department of Illinois 5th District. O'Rourke also was a member of the Cook County Veterans Commission, the Lincoln's Challenge Academy State Advisory Board, served on the Board of Directors for the National Vietnam Veteran Art Museum and on the Chicago Armed Forces Council. He also served as the Military Affairs Coordinator for the Illinois State Treasurer.

Mr. O'Rourke received numerous decorations, medals and badges. He passed away in 2006 leaving his wife Kim and three children, Kelly, James and Sean.

The "Veteran of the Month" award highlights the work of community activists who also happen to be military veterans. Each month, on behalf of Governor Blagojevich, the Department recognizes a different person or group that contributes to the betterment of communities across the state of Illinois. To nominate a "Veteran of the Month," visit IDVA's web site at www.state.il.us/agency/dva or call (312) 814-2744 to obtain a list of guidelines and a nomination form.

As taxpayers begin to fill out their IL-1040 tax forms, Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs Director L. Tammy Duckworth is reminding residents about an easy way to help the state's military heroes.

The state added the Illinois Veterans' Home fund to its list of voluntary contribution funds in 2004. The money raised is used to purchase much needed supplies and equipment to enhance the lives of the nearly 1,000 residents of the state's four veterans' homes in Anna, LaSalle, Manteno and Quincy. Last year, Illinois residents generously donated more than $105,000 to the fund. For more information, call IDVA at 1-800-437-9824.

The Orland Park Veterans' Commission will host a breakfast for Orland Park veterans on Saturday, April 7th at 9 a.m. at the Orland Park Civic Center, 14750 S. Ravinia Ave.

Dr. Brian Hertz from Hines VA Medical Center will be the featured speaker. A vintage military vehicle display will be provided by the Illinois Chapter of the Military Vehicle Preservation Association.

Orland Park veterans are invited to attend and bring one guest. Only 200 tickets (two tickets per veteran) will be available on a first-come, first-served basis, now available at the Cashier's Office in the Frederick T. Owens Village Hall. Proof of residency will be required to obtain tickets. Non-resident veterans who are members of an Orland Park military organization will need to present their membership card to pick up tickets at the village hall. The Cashier's Office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Markham VFW Ladies Auxiliary will hold a Good Friday Fish Fry on Friday, April 6th from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Markham VFW Hall, 3220 W. 159th St. Tickets are $7 for adults; $3 for children 6 to 10; and free for children under 5. The dinner will include fried fish, salad, French fries, bread and butter, dessert, coffee and tea.

Here's an Irish Toast for you:
St. Patrick was a gentleman, who, through strategy and stealth, drove all the snakes from Ireland, here's toasting to his health.

But not too many toastsings, lest you lose yourself and then, forget the good St. Patrick, and see all those snakes again.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

What To Expect If You Go To Traffic Court

Traffic courts hear more cases than any other court. Hundreds of thousands of traffic cases are heard each year in courts throughout Illinois, according to the Illinois Judges Association.

Some traffic violations are settled before they reach the court, if the defendant admits guilt and agrees to pay and mail a fine to the circuit clerk. A defendant who chooses to proceed in this manner will usually receive a conviction on his or her driving record for the citation.

Frequently, however, an appearance in traffic court is required. The defendant often desires to appear in court in order to work out a more acceptable negotiated plea. Court appearances are mandatory for more serious offenses, including driving under the influence (DUI) and reckless driving, where a jail sentence is possible.

Among the most common traffic violations are speeding, running a red light, or failure to provide proof of insurance. Drivers also break the law if they commit numerous other violations such as disobeying the Child Passenger Safety Act; (DUI); drag racing; reckless driving; leaving the scene of an accident where property damage, injury or death is involved; fleeing to elude police; and driving with a suspended or revoked driver's license.

If you are stopped by a police officer for violating a traffic law, and you are issued a ticket, it should include the nature of the charge, the date, time and location of the charge, and the statute or ordinance you are accused of violating. You will be asked to sign an affidavit, agreeing to appear in court on a set date and time. If you fail to sign the affidavit, you could face an additional penalty. Your signature on the affidavit is not an admission of guilt; it simply indicates your willingness to appear in court. If you receive a ticket for an offense punishable by jail, you will be arrested and will need to post bail before you are released. A court date is given to you at the time of your release.

A violation of traffic laws carries penalties that can range from a maximum fine of $100 for a parking violation up to a prison sentence of ten years or more for serious offenses that result in death. Certain offenses also may result in the suspension or revocation of your driver's license, such as a conviction for not stopping for a school bus which is loading or unloading children, or a conviction for speeding through a construction zone.

At the municipal level, traffic violations are indicated in ordinances and are usually punishable by a fine. At the county or state level, violations such as business offenses or misdemeanors, may carry more serious penalties. Felony offenses, for example, where death resulted, are usually not heard in traffic court, but in criminal court.

The term "Supervision" is mentioned in several places in this article. Supervision is a sentencing option available to the court for most traffic offenses where the defendant has a good driving record. With Supervision the defendant usually receives a fine, traffic school or community service and is placed on a definite term of Supervision. If the defendant complies with the conditions imposed by the court, the Supervision is then terminated satisfactorily. The defendant does not receive a conviction on his or her record.

In Illinois, most traffic charges are categorized as either "petty" or "misdemeanor" offenses.

Petty offenses are those punishable by fine only. They include stop sign and red light violations, most speeding tickets, lane change violations and driving without insurance. Fines range from $1.00 to $1,000. Fines are either payable on the day assessed or on such later date as the court may direct.

Misdemeanors are divided into three (3) classes, referred to as Class A, B and C.

Class A is the most serious. It includes violations such as driving under the influence, speeding 40 or more miles over the posted speed limit, driving while license suspended or revoked, reckless driving or leaving the scene of an accident. The possible penalties for Class A misdemeanors are up to 364 days in jail and/or fines up to $2,500. Day for day good time credit applies to most misdemeanor jail sentences.

Class B misdemeanors, such as selling or providing a fraudulent driver's license or permit, carry a possible penalty of up to six (6) months in jail and/or fines up to $1,500. Class C misdemeanors, such as drag racing, are punishable by jail up to thirty (30) days and/or fines up to $1,000.

Should a motorist receive three moving violation convictions in a twelve-month period, regardless of the classifications outlined above---even petty offenses---the Illinois Secretary of State will suspend the motorist's driver's license.

Whether you receive a traffic citation for a petty offense, or are charged with a more serious traffic violation, and need to appear in court, you should follow certain decorum. You should arrive to court on time and dress in a manner that shows respect for the court.

The judge who hears your case will begin by explaining an individual's rights in traffic cases. The judge will also outline how the court call will proceed. You may choose to resolve your case by having your attorney speak with the prosecutor. You may then decide to enter a negotiated plea of guilty. If you decide to plead not guilty and contest the ticket, your case will then be resolved through a trial.

Most traffic cases are conducted as a "bench trial," where a judge alone hears and decides the case based on the facts presented. Occasionally, jurors are summoned to hear a traffic case.

Each person testifying-- including you, the arresting officer and any witnesses --will be asked to take an oath and tell the truth about what occurred. After the arresting officer and any other prosecution witnesses testify, you and any of your witnesses will be asked to testify. The prosecution has the burden of proving its case. In a petty offense case, that burden is "by a preponderance of the evidence." For misdemeanor charges, the prosecution's burden is the heavier one of "beyond a reasonable doubt." After the close of all the evidence, the judge (or jury) will decide whether the prosecution has proven its case.

If you are found guilty of committing a petty offense traffic violation, the judge will issue a sentence that may include a fine and court costs, attendance at an approved Traffic Safety School, a period of Court Supervision or a conviction.

If you are found guilty of committing a more serious traffic violation, the judge will issue a sentence that may include a fine and court costs, attendance at an approved Traffic Safety School, a period of Court Supervision, or a period of Conditional Discharge (a conviction, and a form of non-reporting probation) or a period of Probation (a conviction and sentence that requires a Probation Officer to monitor your sentence), jail time, or any combination thereof. Sentences for driving under the influence will also include completing the counseling or treatment recommendations of an alcohol evaluation, and attending a Victim Impact Panel. At the time of sentencing the court will set a date for the payment of all fines, costs and administrative fees.

DYERHOUSE AKA JOHN F. DYERHOUSE JR. AKA JOHN DYERHOUSE et al Defendant 06 CH 15889 NOTICE OF SALE PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale entered in the above cause on October 30, 2006, an agent of The Judicial Sales Corporation will at 10:30 AM on April 11, 2007, at the office of The Judicial Sales Corporation, One South Wacker Drive - 24th Floor, CHICAGO, IL 60606, sell at public auction to the highest bidder, as set forth below, the following described real estate: Commonly known as 14345 S. MILLAR AVE. Midlothian, IL 60445 Property Index No. 28-11-107-009 The real estate is improved with a single family residence. The judgment amount was $124,503.10. Sale terms: 25% down of the highest bid by certified funds at the close of the auction; the balance, in certified funds, is due within twenty-four (24) hours. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser of the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The Purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagee, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney, if this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by the Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale. The property will NOT be open for inspection and Plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information. Looking good on the outside begins by being strong on the inside. That's because later in life, especially for women, strong bones help prevent fractures and height loss. Your window to build maximum bone density is now, during your late teens and early twenties. So eat wisely, get plenty of calcium and vitamin D, and do weight-bearing exercises every day. To devise a plan that's right for you, go to aao.org or rjos.org. Hotel Revenues Show Strong 2006 Finish

After a slight occupancy dip in December 2006, Chicago Southland hotels and motels finished calendar year 2006 strongly, with gains in all three measurement categories, according to figures released by Smith Travel Research, an independent hotel industry research firm.

While December's occupancy dip was small - only 1.7 percent decrease compared to the same month in 2005 - overall occupancy in Chicago Southland hotels rose 5.7 percent for the year, to 59.5% occupancy. Figures have been on an upward trend most of 2006, with small occupancy decreases in January 2006 and December 2006. Things are already looking brighter in 2007, with a 1.1% gain in occupancy compared to January 2006 for this traditionally slow month.

Average daily room rates (ADR) and revenue per available room (RevPar) were up the entire year in 2006, and are continuing this positive trend into 2007.

ADR averaged $80.27 per room for calendar year 2006, an 11.2 percent increase compared to 2005. RevPar averaged $47.78 for the year, a 17.5 percent increase over 2005.

January 2007 numbers are ahead of the previous year, with a regional occupancy rate of 44.4%, a 1.1% increase over January 2006. ADR for January 2007 was $80.27, and RevPar was $47.78, both increases over the previous year of 11.2% and 17.5%, respectively.

Upcoming February 2007 numbers may be down somewhat because of a bitter cold snap and subsequent heavy snows that blanketed the Southland during the month. But as the weather improves through the spring and summer, numbers are expected to continue their upward climb.

"The CSCVB Sales Department works closely with our partner hotels and communities to generate new business into the Southland, and these positive numbers reinforce the fact that our combined efforts are working," said CSCVB President/CEO Jim Garrett.

"It's great to see our industry recovering from the declines of the past several years," said Garrett. "People are traveling again, for both business and pleasure, and we're seeing positive gains at Southland hotels and motels. We're very fortunate to live and work in such a dynamic region. Chicago and the metropolitan area are the magnets that draw literally millions of visitors every year, and the Southland is continuing to develop its visitor amenities to draw more of these travelers to our region."

According to the year-end Smith Travel Research report, total 2006 room revenues were up 17.5% over the previous year to $106.6 million.

Lenten Series

"Living Beyond Limitations" is the topic for the panel of speakers for the Pilgrim Faith Church Lenten Series on March 28th. Beginning at 7:15 p.m. a panel of members including Bill Hoskins, Tim McCracken and Jon Perry will discuss how they live daily with illness, disability and other limiting conditions. A light supper of soup, bread, cheese and fruit will be served at 6:30 prior to the program.

A children's program for those in kindergarten through sixth grade will meet at the same time. Child care is provided for children younger than kindergarten.

The church is at 9411 S. 51st Ave. The public is invited to attend. For more information, call the church at (708) 422-4200.

Easter Meal And Egg Hunt

The Oak Lawn Community Church, 9000 S. Ridgeland Ave., will hold its Annual Easter Breakfast and Egg Hunt on Saturday, March 31st from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m.

The Easter Bunny should arrive about 10 a.m. On the menu is eggs, sausage, pancakes, potatoes, juice, toast, etc., all for a freewill offering. There will also be a Bake Sale so you can pick up your Easter goodies early. Bring your family and friends.

If you would like to have further information, please call the church office at (708) 599-4025.

Saint Xavier's Campus Event A Success

Saint Xavier University's recent Presidents' Day campus visit for prospective students attracted the biggest crowd ever, with a total of 600 visitors coming to the campus, located in Chicago's Mount Greenwood neighborhood.

"Parents and students seemed genuinely interested in all the speakers. The students especially enjoyed the fun fair and visiting with representatives from the student activities and organizations," said Beth Gierach, assistant provost of admission at Saint Xavier University. "More families than ever took advantage of the campus tours following the event."

Prospective freshmen and their families were invited to take campus tours and meet with faculty and representatives from the offices of admission, financial aid and campus life, as well as student leaders from campus organizations at the Feb. 19 event.

"The Presidents' Day event hosted by the Office of Admission was a great success thanks to the dedication of SXU students, alumni, faculty and staff. More prospective freshmen than ever visited our campus for an admission event, and we're confident that all 600 guests had a quality visit to Saint Xavier," Gierach said.

For more information about Saint Xavier, please contact the Office of Admission at (773) 298-3050 or visit www.sxu.edu/admission.

New Voting Tool Kit

With 2,400 candidates and 769 unique ballots, the April 17th Consolidated Election in suburban Cook County will be the most complex election held anywhere in the United States this year. To prepare voters and the system for the upcoming election, Cook County Clerk David Orr has initiated a series of election improvements. At a recent press conference, Orr unveiled a new online voter tool kit. He also announced this election's early voting sites and issued a call for election judges as the County faces a significant shortfall.

To prepare voters for a smooth election day, Orr's office has redesigned its web site - www.voterinfo.net. The site now includes "It's That Easy!" a new, three-minute instructional voting video showing voters how to use the county's new dual-system voting equipment as well as a comprehensive "Voter's Tool Kit."

The site's "Voter's Tool Kit" is an interactive package for voters with easy-to-use functions such as:

- Registration look-up
- Virtual, customized ballot
- Personalized polling place information and map
- Voter's guide (if the candidate submitted a statement)

The tool kit also includes a list of the Clerk's 32 Early Voting locations. Orr reminded voters that they can vote at any of the sites - even though there are nearly 800 different ballot styles in the upcoming election.

Orr's office switched to all-touch screen Early Voting for the November 2006 General Election. More than 33,000 people cast ballots during the three-week Early Voting period, and surveys showed an overwhelmingly positive response to the Early Voting experience.

Early Voting runs now through April 12th at 26 temporary locations throughout the county, as well as at the five suburban courthouses and the Clerk's downtown office, 69 W. Washington St.

Orr also announced that his office is seeking more than 2,000 people to work as Election Judges on April 17th.

"Last week, my office mailed letters to each of the 2,400 candidates running in this election," Orr said. "We asked them each to recruit two people to work as election judges. We are calling on community groups, religious organizations and residents to assist."

Election judges open polling places, certify that voters are registered and qualified to vote, explain election procedures, issue ballots and activate cards for the touch screens, operate election equipment, and transmit votes at the end of the day.

Election judges receive $150 for their work. That includes $100 for working on Election Day and $50 for attending a 27-hour training session prior to the election. Judges begin work at 5:15 a.m. and work until the votes are transmitted after the polls close at 7 p.m.

To qualify as an election judge, you must be a registered voter and live in Cook County.

High school seniors are also eligible to be election judges. To qualify, they must have at least a 3.0 GPA, have written permission from a parent, and a letter of recommendation from the principal.

People interested in serving on Election Day can call (312) 603-0970 or download an application online at www.voterinfo.net. The completed application can be faxed to (312) 603-9779 or dropped off at the Clerk's office, 69 W. Washington St., fifth floor, in Chicago.

The Oak Lawn Village Board Discusses

Traffic Control Barricades

Discussion took place at the Oak Lawn Village Board Meeting on the temporary barricades that were installed in the vicinity of 94th and Keeler. Two village residents approached the board to comment on the effect that the barricades are having on traffic in the vicinity. It was stated that the residents of the area appreciate the involvement that officials have put into the deterrent since traffic has been using the side streets to skirt traffic on 95th street for a long time. However, one of the residents claimed that she did not see the difference in traffic. In fact, she reported that it seemed that when faced with the barricades, traffic on her block "just went around" the barricade.

Police Chief Villanova reminded the resident that the barricades had just gone up and were in operation for only a few days. In that time, there was no way to gauge the result of the barricade's usefulness until driver's got the word that if they drive around the barricades, they will be ticketed. Villanova reported that he has been getting complaints from driver's who have been ticketed with them saying that they didn't know that the barricades were in place or had no warning of their installation.

It was stated that in other areas of the community, where the barricades had been installed it took time for drivers "to get the message" and it was suggested that the barricades be given a chance to work. It was said that if they do not seem to work, the village will look into other options to help alleviate the situation.

Trustee Olejniczak lauded the police department on their recent handling of drug problems in the village. He could not be specific of the details, but he reported that complaints had come in last Thursday and by Monday, the department had made arrests after a hand-to-hand deal. Olejniczak reported that this was the most dangerous way to make an arrest which the police chief confirmed.

In other business, owners of Jalapeno's Restaurant at 9600 S. Pulaski, made the request to have an outdoor café liquor license in addition to their regular liquor license. It was stated that the restaurant is planning on having a small 10 seat outdoor café installed. A formal request for the café is being prepared for presentation to the board. The board granted permission for the license.

Mayor Heilmann brought up the opportunity for the village to make approximately $50,000 for allowing business logos to be placed on the village's new garbage totes. He asked the boards opinion on having this done. It was suggested that the option be put on the community web-site to get public opinion. The Mayor said that it was an idea so that the village can get extra money. He also reported that the totes will soon be delivered to the residents. It was stated that the waste hauler is doing the delivery and not the village.

Early voting is taking place in the village through April 12th Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on March 31st and April 1st from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Permission was granted to erect a temporary tent at the Jewel-Osco, 8801 S. Ridgeland for their annual spring plant sale beginning April 1st with removal by June 27th.

It was announced that the annual Easter Egg Hunt on the Green will be on Saturday, April 7th. Three separate egg hunts will take place at 11:30 a.m.; noon and 12:30 p.m. Meet and take pictures with the Easter Bunny in the Gazebo.

April Is National Car Care Month

Rising fuel costs are on the minds of most Americans these days as gas prices are expected to top $3 per gallon in coming weeks. Sure, you can simply stop driving as much, but for many consumers, that's not an option. But there are two ways all of us can stretch our precious gasoline dollars.

One strategy is to change how we drive, and the other is to perform simple and inexpensive vehicle maintenance. Taking these steps will not only save gas money, but will improve a vehicle's safety and dependability.

National Car Care Month in April is an ideal time for motorists to review the factors that can impact fuel economy. According to the Car Care Council, the most common are under-inflated tires, dirty air filters, old spark plugs and something as simple as the gas cap.

Check your vehicle gas cap. About 17 percent of the vehicles on the roads have gas caps that are either damaged, loose or are missing altogether, causing 147 million gallons of gas to vaporize every year.

When tires aren't inflated properly, it's like driving with the parking brake on, and can cost a mile or two per gallon.

A vehicle can have either four, six or eight spark plugs, which fire as many as three million times each 1,000 miles, resulting in a lot of heat, electrical and chemical erosion. A dirty spark plug causes misfiring, which wastes fuel. Spark plugs need to be replaced regularly.

An air filter that is clogged with dirt, dust and bugs chokes off the air and creates a "rich" mixture - too much gas being burned for the amount of air, which wastes gas and causes the engine to lose power. Replacing a clogged air filter can improve gas mileage by as much as 10 percent, saving about 15 cents on a gallon.

Aggressive driving can lower gas mileage by as much as 22 percent on the highway and five percent on city streets, which results in seven to 49 cents per gallon.

Sitting idle gets zero miles per gallon. Letting the vehicle warm up for one to two minutes is sufficient.

Gas mileage decreases rapidly at speeds above 60 mph. Each mph driven over 60 results in an additional 10 cents per gallon. To maintain a constant speed on the highway, cruise control is recommended.

Last year, vehicle check-up events conducted throughout the country revealed that nearly nine out of 10 cars required some type of maintenance. This reinforces the need for the motoring public to become more aware of the maintenance needs of their vehicle to save money, conserve energy, improve highway safety and help protect the environment.

Every motorist can receive a free 56-page Car Care Guide that takes the guesswork out of vehicle maintenance by visiting the Car Care Council's Web site at www.carcare.org.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

As a resident of the southwest suburbs for over 40 years, I feel we have a treasure in the Moraine Valley Community College. The college has awarded nearly 40,000 degrees and certificates. That is in the top 8 percent of the nation. Over 85 percent of associate degree earners transfer to a four-year institution, and 93 percent of the graduates are employed or continuing their education.

More than 18,000 students will attend the college this spring. That is an increase of 5 percent over last year and an increase of more than 12 percent over the past six years. Moraine is a vital and essential asset to our community.

An unpaid Board of Trustees governs Moraine Valley Community College. As a taxpayer, I am pleased with the fiscal responsibility of the board's management of the budget. The high financial rating from investors has allowed the district to reduce the projected tax increase by 2 percent.

Finally, as a grateful citizen, I want to thank Sandra Wagner for her outstanding leadership as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Moraine Valley Community College for the past three and one-half years. My family and I urge the community to support another six-year term for Sandra Wagner. This jewel of the community needs her experience to insure the continued growth and success of our college.

Sincerely,
s/s Jerry Lawler

Press FDA For Answers On Pet Food Safety

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) and Rep. Rosa DeLauro (D-CT) sent a letter to Andrew von Eschenbach, Commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), asking for an analysis of FDA's oversight of pet food manufacturing facilities and a report of actions taken since the recent pet food recall.

"Many cats, dogs and other pets, considered members of the family, are now suffering as a result of a flawed pet food inspection system," said Durbin. "Congresswoman DeLauro and I have once again reached out to FDA to work on eliminating the vulnerabilities that are affecting food safety. Today we asked FDA to quickly provide us with a report of what FDA has done to address the recent recall, and what needs to be done to make real improvements to the system of overseeing pet food safety."

"Based on the evidence so far, it would appear that FDA is failing its responsibilities to protect animals from unsafe food as much as it is failing to protect American consumers. They have never visited the plant in Kansas being mentioned as a possible source of the contamination, and the last time FDA inspected the New Jersey plant that has also been implicated was in 2004," said DeLauro.

Chairwoman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture, FDA and related agencies. "For the past decade, many of us who have examined our food safety system have pressed for a consolidated food safety agency. In light of recent events it looks like we will need to broaden that effort to include pet foods to ensure that all family members are protected from food-borne illnesses."

On March 17th, pet food producer Menu Foods, Inc. announced a recall of pet food products made at its Emporia, Kansas facility between Dec. 3, 2006 and March 6, 2007. The recall was made in response to a recent string of kidney failures in cats and dogs as well as a handful of pet deaths. The reported number of pets affected has grown to nearly two dozen recently.

Since the recall, the FDA has been working with Menu Foods to investigate the source of any potential contamination. It is unclear whether or not there has been a contamination or what the source of the contamination may be. In samples of the recalled product, recent tests have confirmed the presence of rat poison, aminopterin, which in high doses can cause kidney failure.

Tree City USA

Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources (IDNR) Acting Director Sam Flood on March 24th announced that 186 Illinois communities have received the Tree City USA designation for managing their local community forest resources in an effort to enhance citizen safety and welfare. These communities were presented with awards on March 27th at Morton Arboretum in Lisle and at the Northfield Center in Springfield on March 29th.

The Tree City USA program promotes tree planting and care programs in urban areas and calls public attention to the economic, health and aesthetic benefits trees offer. Citizen participation in community reforestation and beautification efforts is encouraged through this program. The Tree City USA program provides support to communities to assist in the battle against exotic invasive species such as emerald ash borer (EAB).

Area communities being recognized are: Chicago, Frankfort, Hickory Hills, New Lenox, Oak Lawn, Orland Hills, Orland Park, Palos Heights, Palos Hills and Palos Park.

Dedication

The Augustinian Friars of the St. Rita High School Monastery will hold a Mass of Dedication and Blessing of the Nine New Shrines on Sunday, April 15th at 9 a.m. at the St. Rita Shrine Chapel, 7740 S. Western Ave. The Nine New Shrines are part of a beautification project at the St. Rita Shrine Chapel and represent Our Mother of Good Counsel, Our Lady of Czestochowa, St. Monica, St. Patrick, St. Martin de Porres, St. Frances Xavier Cabrini, St. Teresa Benedicta of the Cross, St. Therese of Lisieux, Pope John Paul II and Mother Teresa. The Most Rev. John Michael Botean, D.D., Bishop of the Romanian Catholic Diocese of St. George, Canton, Iowa, will preside over the Mass and Dedication.

A continental breakfast will follow. RSVP to Sr. Ardis Cloutier, OSF, at (773) 925-6600, ext. 6623, or accloutier@stritahs.com.

Cracks Can Cause Hazards In Trees

As winter comes to a close, homeowners and property managers are advised that tree failure is a major cause of property damage. An ice storm or high wind can cause a cracked tree to fail under its own weight.

"Homeowners worried about trees falling and damaging property should call a professional arborist in for an inspection," advises Peter Gerstenberger, senior advisor for safety, standards and compliance with the Tree Care Industry Association. Gerstenberger notes that trees are designed to withstand storms, but all trees can fail – and defective trees fail sooner than healthy trees. A sound tree becomes potentially dangerous when the tree's woody structure is weakened by one or more defects. During storms, pre-existing defects predispose trees to failure.

"To a professional arborist," notes Gerstenberger, "defects are detectable signs that a tree has an increased potential to fail."

One of the major warning signs of tree failure is a visible crack. Cracks form when the load exceeds the capacity of the stem to withstand the load. The vast majority of cracks are caused by improper closure of wounds, by the splitting of weak branch unions, or by flush-cut pruning. Cracks can occur in branches, stems or roots. The wood behind the crack may be sound, decayed, or missing (cavity). Several types of cracks can be found in trees and, like other defects, the severity of cracks ranges across a spectrum.

Vertical cracks run with the wood grain along the length of the tree and may appear as shear cracks, inrolled cracks or ribbed cracks. Horizontal cracks run across the wood grain. Shear cracks, a type of vertical crack, become hazardous when they go completely through the stem and separate the stem into two halves. As the tree bends and sways in the wind, one half of the stem slides over the other, elongating the crack. Eventually the enlarging crack causes the two halves of the stem to shear apart. A shear crack always has a high risk of failure. An inrolled crack, also called a ram's horn, has margins that curl inward on each of its sides and forms inrolled bark and wood. An inrolled crack is formed when a wound does not close properly. Serious decay is always associated with an inrolled crack because the crack margins rework the tree each year, allowing decay to spread rapidly. Inrolled cracks often generate other cracks in the same stem segment. Trees with an inrolled crack, advanced decay, and another crack all in the same stem segment have a high risk of failure.

A professional arborist can determine the potential for failure by measuring the shell thickness in a few locations around the tree's circumference, determining the width of the crack opening, and looking for the presence of any other type of crack. Ribbed cracks are created as the tree attempts to seal over a wound. Margins of the crack meet and mesh but are reopened due to tree movement or extremely cold temperatures. Thicker annual rings are created in order to stabilize the developing crack at the location of the crack. This forms the ribbed appearance over a period of many years. A ribbed crack has a high risk of failure when associated with another crack or with extensive advanced decay.

Horizontal cracks run across the grain of the wood and are formed when loading in the tree's crown pulls wood fibers apart. They are rarely found because they develop just before the trees fail. Horizontal cracks are a sign of imminent failure in leaning trees.

Cracks are hazardous when they compromise the structure of the tree by splitting the stem in two or when another defect, such as internal decay and a crack, do not provide enough sound wood in the outer shell to support the tree. The presence of multiple cracks and decay indicates a very defective tree.

Homeowners who would like a professional arborist to assess their trees should contact the Tree Care Industry Association (TCIA), a 69-year-old public and professional resource on trees and arboriculture. It has more than 2,000 member companies who recognize stringent safety and performance standards and who are required to carry liability insurance. TCIA has the nation's only Accreditation program that helps consumers find tree care companies that have been inspected and accredited based on: adherence to industry standards for quality and safety; maintenance of trained, professional staff; and dedication to ethics and quality in business practices. An easy way to find a tree care service provider in your area is to use the "Locate Your Local TCIA Member Companies" program. You can use this service by calling 1-800-733-2622 or by doing a ZIP code search at www.treecaretips.org.

White Awards Grants To Public Libraries

Secretary of State and State Librarian Jesse White has awarded Illinois public libraries almost $14.2 million in fiscal year 2007 per capita and equalization aid grants.

White said 633 public library per capita grants were allocated at a rate of $1.22 per resident. Ten public libraries with a low library tax base will receive equalization aid grants to ensure a minimum level of funding for library services.

Illinois citizens will benefit from the grants being awarded to public libraries this year. Libraries count on these per capita grants for important expenses such as paying for books, personnel, equipment, and electronic access.

Over the course of the next two years, as a requirement to receive a public library per capita and equalization aid grant, White said recipients are being asked to detail their plans for dealing with a disaster. Additionally, at least one member of the library board of trustees must attend a continuing education event and share information from the event with other trustees.

The Illinois State Library and the regional library systems and organizations such as the Illinois Library Assn. offer outstanding training and continuing education programs about library issues. White said patrons benefit when library trustees learn the most up-to-date information before making decisions that impact library policies.

Area libraries obtaining grants are: Alsip-Merrionette Park Library District, $27,955.75; Blue Island Public Library, $28,706.98; Bridgeview Public Library, $18,762.37; Prairie Trails Public Library District, $35,476.61; Chicago Public Library, $3,543,275.58; Chicago Ridge Public Library, $17,284.38; Crestwood Public Library District, $12,041.69; Evergreen Park Public Library, $25,474.49; Frankfort Public Library District, $30,898.27; Homer Township Public Library District, $35,471.71; Hometown Public Library, $5,465.37; Justice Public Library District, $17,011.54; Lemont Public Library District, $26,937.80; Bradford Anderson Oglesby Public Library, $15,440.57; Midlothian Public Library, $17,514.40; New Lenox Public Library District, $40,172.40; Acorn Public Library District, $45,116.56; Oak Lawn Public Library, $67,592.26; Orland Park Public Library, $69,587.79; Palos Heights Public Library, $15,856.56; Green Hills Public Library District, $38,651.59; Palos Park Public Library, $5,736.99; Posen Public Library District, $5,787.16; William Leonard Public Library District, $8,117.92; Orland Hills Public Library District, $8,294.11; Tinley Park Public Library, $66,499.67; Worth Public Library District, $13,516.

Durbin Pushes Legislation To Avert Shortage Of Nurses

Last Thursday, U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) along with Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-MA) and Sen. Chris Dodd (D-CT) co-sponsored legislation to amend the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) to clarify a legal distinction between supervisors and employees.

Under current law, supervisors cannot organize a union or collectively bargain. In October of 2006, the National Labor Relations Board issued a broad interpretation of the term supervisor, which will lead to more employees being deemed supervisors. The new rule will have a serious detrimental effect on workers in such occupations as manufacturing and nursing. The legislation introduced recently is known as the Re-empowerment of Skilled and Professional Employees and Construction Tradesworkers (RESPECT) Act.

"If Congress does not act, 8 million workers in the United States will no longer have the right to organize," said Durbin. "Illinois is one of many states suffering from nursing shortages. With 40,000 nurses in the state, many will be unable to join unions and collectively bargain, salary levels will be at risk and working conditions will be in question, driving more people to leave the profession and discouraging others from becoming nurses."

In 2001, the Supreme Court ruled that the interpretation of the term supervisor would be left to the National Labor Relations Board to determine what it should mean in the context of the NLRA. Last year, several cases came before the Board to determine whether 1) nurses acting as supervisors in a hospital, 2) nurses acting as supervisors in a long-term care facility and 3) load men acting as supervisors in a manufacturing facility should be deemed supervisors. The ruling of the National Labor Relations Board expanded the term "supervisor."

Durbin noted that the ruling of the National Labor Relations Board is contrary to the Congressional intent of the Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 which defined the term "supervisor" more narrowly. Under the new ruling, over 8 million workers, including over 800,000 nurses nationwide, will be stripped of their right to join a union. Building and construction trades, broadcasting, energy, shipping and other health care industries will also be affected. In the current economic and labor structure, skilled mid-level workers who make decisions and issue instructions are quite common and these employees should not be prohibited from their basic right to organize.

Last July, Durbin signed onto a letter urging the National Labor Relations Board to hold oral arguments before ruling on the case. The letter, stressing the ramifications that a broad interpretation would have for millions of workers, was initiated by Sen. Kennedy (D-MA) and signed by several Senate Democrats. The National Labor Relations Board refused to hear oral arguments. Durbin said his legislation would replace the NLRB's flawed ruling and restore the original intent of the law.

Governor's Proposal Gains Support

March 23rd wrapped up a week of increased momentum and new support for Governor Rod R. Blagojevich's "Investing In Illinois Families" plan. Hundreds of individuals and organizations added their names to the growing list of supporters for the Governor's proposal to increase funding for education, give every Illinoisan access to affordable healthcare and bring fairness to the tax system. Groups voiced their support at events in Alton, Chicago, Danville, Decatur, DuQuoin, Peoria, Quincy, Rock Island, Rockford and Springfield.

On March 20th, dozens of African-American ministers rallied around the Governor at First Church of Deliverance on Chicago's Southside to endorse his plan, which they said would provide long overdue help for the members of their congregations. The ministers further underlined their support by pledging to urge their lawmakers to approve the proposed budget.

Also that week, the AIDS Foundation of Chicago (AFC) rallied at the State Capitol to support Governor Blagojevich's "Illinois Covered" healthcare plan. Over 150 AIDS advocates gathered at the State Capitol wearing "Super Hero" T-shirts in an effort to encourage legislators to be "super heroes" by passing the Governor's plan to expand access to quality, affordable healthcare to all Illinoisans during the group's Seventh Annual Illinois HIV/AIDS Lobby Day. Of the approximately 40,000 to 42,000 Illinoisans living with HIV/AIDS, about 20,000 are either uninsured or do not have adequate coverage to meet their healthcare needs. Under Illinois Covered, they would be among the tens of thousands of moderate and low-income residents who would have access to affordable health coverage once the plan is implemented. AFC Executive Director Mark Ishaug said he is thankful that under the Governor's Illinois Covered plan, people living with HIV/AIDS can hope for a better future.

In addition, the Governor accepted the support of the Chicago Area Project and Illinois Council of Area Projects during their annual Youth and Community Services Recognition Luncheon last week. The organization will deliver more than 3,000 postcards of support to legislators, urging them to approve Blagojevich's proposed healthcare plan. David Whitaker, executive director of Chicago Area Project expressed his faith in the Governor's plan, saying that the Governor has led the way in making sure that Illinois is committed to programs that support our youth and their families.

On Wednesday, May 2nd business leaders, key policy makers, leading scholars and mayors from around the world will attend the "Third Annual Richard J. Daley Urban Forum" at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Guests and educators will examine how the cities of the future will be built.

Breakfast and registration begin at 7:30 a.m. and the Forum commences at 9 a.m. sharp. The Forum will be held at UIC's Illinois Room at Student Center East, 750 S. Halsted St. Featured participants include Mayor Richard M. Daley, and keynote speaker Robert E. Rubin, former Secretary of the U.S. Treasury. Professionals from the fields of urban planning, architecture and transportation will also participate.

Speakers will examine the roles that major infrastructure projects will play in developing and sustaining future cities. They will discuss how these projects can be financed, their impact on the environment, and their ultimate costs and benefits.

UIC faculty, staff, and students from other colleges and universities, will receive complimentary admission. Tickets for the event cost $25 each, which includes a continental breakfast and lunch. For more information, register for raffle tickets, or to just get excited about this renowned business roundup, one should visit www.RJDUrbankForum.uic.edu. For more information.

Peoples Gas and North Shore Gas, subsidiaries of Integrys Energy Group, Inc. have filed a request for an increase in the amount they charge to deliver natural gas to customers. If approved the proposed increase would be less than $10 a month for typical residential Peoples Gas customers. If approved, it would be the first such distance delivery increase in 12 years and would go into effect in 2008. The proposed increase would apply only to the delivery charge which is about 20% of a customer's bill. We will keep you posted on this legislation.

The Lipinski-Callahan-Daly Memorial Chapter of the Leukemia Research Foundation will present its 35th Annual Fashion Show fundraiser, Jazz with Pizzazz, Tuesday, April 24th at the Lexington House, 7717 W. 95th St., Hickory Hills. Tickets are $40 per person and $25 for students (19 and under). Cocktails begin at 6 p.m. with dinner scheduled for 7 p.m. The musical show will follow dinner.

Special dignitaries include Miss Illinois USA 2007 Mia Heston and Miss Teen Illinois USA 2007 Victoria Davis. More than 100 prizes will be given out at this event.

Proceeds from the benefit go to the Leukemia Research Foundation, which helps provide funding for leukemia, lymphoma and other syndromes research worldwide. For more information contact Loretta Lipinski at (708) 798-3482.

All Points is happy to report that Moraine Valley Community College occupational graduates report a high degree of satisfaction with their college experience and enjoy a high level of employment. Nearly nine out of ten occupational graduates (86 percent) in 2005 were employed with about half working within the Moraine Valley district.

The annual Moraine Valley survey conducted in spring 2006 found that 70 percent of the 246 survey respondents were employed full time and 20 percent were employed part time. Seventy-two percent are employed in jobs related to their Moraine Valley degree. The health program area had the highest proportion of graduates employed in a related field - 80 percent.

Courses which seemed to generate particularly satisfying experiences included library sciences, childcare services, and courses with projects in their respective programs.

New Rules To Help Protect Homebuyers

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich directed the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation (IDFPR) to increase protections to homebuyers and more effectively fight predatory lending by filing new rules to the Illinois Predatory Lending Database Pilot Program, also known as HB 4050. The new rules will help protect consumers by focusing scrutiny on the lenders and their loans rather than consumers and their credit history. These rules will provide first time homebuyers and homeowners who are refinancing their homes with counseling to protect them against predatory or other non-traditional types of loans.

The Governor also directed the Department to designate the pilot area to be all of Cook County once the rules are approved by the legislature. Last month, Gov. Blagojevich temporarily halted implementation of the original program that was drafted to only apply in certain Cook County neighborhoods after community organizations and civic leaders raised serious concerns.

HB 4050 was meant to protect consumers and their communities from the financial and personal costs of predatory lending. The new rules will increase protections effectively by focusing on predatory loans rather than a borrower's credit history. Predatory lenders often use loans with unusual provisions such as "teaser rates" (artificially low rates that are raised to market average or above, shortly after the mortgage is approved), little or no income documentation or excessively high fees and interest charges to entice homebuyers. These loans frequently result in foreclosures.

Under the proposed rules for HB 4050, first time homebuyers and owners opting to refinance their primary residence will be recommended for counseling if the loan they are considering contains any of the following provisions: permits interest-only payments; allows payments that result in negative amortization; total points and fees payable by the borrower exceed 5% of the amount of the mortgage; approval of the loan relies on the stated income of the borrower; a pre-payment penalty is included; or the financing transaction includes a second lien on the property, often known as an 80/20 loan.

Initial implementation of HB 4050 created uncertainty for lenders, limiting their interest in offering products to consumers in certain neighborhoods where the new rules applied. Furthermore, a report from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign showed that housing sales in the HB 4050 zip codes dropped by nearly half over the fall of 2006. Comparable zip codes in which the pilot program was not being applied saw a decline of just 20 percent. The report also stated that the pilot program did not offer borrowers additional consumer protections.

Once this rule has been filed with the Secretary of State, there is a 45-day 1st Notice period, during which industry groups, advocates and other concerned members of the public may file comments or request a public hearing. During the 2nd Notice period, also 45 days long, the rule and any modifications or amendments, will be reviewed by the Joint Committee on Administrative Rules (JCAR). JCAR can request additional clarification or information from the Department that must be supplied during JCAR's review. At the end of that time, if JCAR takes no action, the rule becomes permanent and any further changes must be filed through a new rulemaking process. Once the new rules have become permanent, the pilot program will be restarted, and the new designation for the pilot area will become effective.

Jesse White Proposes Legislation To Improve Teen Driver Laws

Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White recently proposed legislation that will toughen the laws that govern drivers up to the age of 21, and better prepare new, teen drivers before they obtain their licenses. The legislation is based on the recommendations of White's Teen Driver Safety Task Force. White's task force, composed of legislators, traffic safety experts, law enforcement officials, educators, judges and victim advocates, released a final report that served as the basis for legislation that would make the Illinois Graduated Driver Licensing program one of the most comprehensive in the nation and a model for other states to follow. The legislation includes extending the permit phase from three months to nine months; shifting the nighttime driving restriction from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays and from midnight to 11 p.m. on weekends for all drivers under the age of 18 and those who fail to graduate from the initial licensing phase; and doubling the period - from six months to 12 months - that restricts a new driver to a maximum of one unrelated teen passenger. Vehicle crashes are currently one of the leading causes of death for teens.

Preparing For A Summer Full Of Thrills

Every summer guests from around the country visit Cedar Point Amusement Park and Resort in Sandusky, Ohio to challenge the park's unmatched collection of rides and roller coasters. With towering rides such as Millennium Force and Top Thrill Dragster to adrenaline-rushers such as Raptor, Skyhawk and the new Maverick roller coaster, Cedar Point is a thrill-seeker's dream come true. But just what does it take to maintain these massive structures and technologically advanced thrill rides? The answer may surprise you.

During the off-season, all of Cedar Point's rides and roller coasters undergo an extensive preventative maintenance program that includes completely overhauling all of the ride vehicles and coaster trains. In fact, there are more than 2,000 individual cars, gondolas, carts and coaster trains that are removed from the rides and inspected each and every winter by the park's maintenance staff. All of the ride vehicles are basically "stripped down" and then rebuilt to properly inspect every square inch of the vehicle.

To accomplish this during the short off-season, Cedar Point transforms the park's two public picnic shelters into makeshift maintenance garages. While most of the Midwest is being ravaged by cold weather and snow, Cedar Point's highly trained and experienced maintenance employees are hard at work inspecting, repairing and rebuilding the park's ride vehicles and roller coaster trains. During these inspections, they examine wheels, bearings, hitches, padding, panels, seat belts and harnesses to ensure the integrity of each part.

In all, Cedar Point has more than 130 employees in its Maintenance Division during the off-season, including ride mechanics, carpenters, plumbers, electricians, painters, laborers and more.

"The winter overhaul is the most important part of our preventative maintenance program," stated Gary Gast, director of maintenance and new construction for Cedar Point. "Nothing goes further than the winter overhaul to ensuring the safety and reliability of our rides and roller coasters."

Not only are the ride vehicles and coaster trains overhauled, but the coaster track and supports also undergo extensive scrutiny during the off-season. Non-destructive testing, which includes ultrasonic tests, dye penetrate examinations and X-ray inspections, is used to judge the structural integrity of the track on each steel roller coaster at the park.

Advanced safety measures are being utilized on Maverick, Cedar Point's latest scream machine. The support columns of the coaster are being filled with a fine, dry silica sand. This serves two purposes: it reduces the noise of the ride and limits vibrations, which extends the fatigue life of the columns.

"Nothing commands more of our time and attention than our safety program here at Cedar Point," said Gast. "Our maintenance employees take pride in our safety record and in knowing that all of their hard work and dedication help make our rides and roller coasters as safe as possible for our guests, fellow employees and ourselves."

During the upcoming weeks, crews will be busy with their final inspections of the rides and roller coasters before inspectors from the Amusement Ride Safety Division of the Ohio Department of Agriculture (which serves as the outside regulatory agency for all amusement park rides in Ohio) complete their evaluations. Once licensed by the State of Ohio, the rides and roller coasters will be ready to welcome their first guests on Opening Day, Saturday, May 12.

Party For The Planet At Brookfield Zoo

Celebrate Earth Day during a tremendous Party for the Planet at Brookfield Zoo on Sunday, April 22nd. The event features live entertainment and fun crafts, activities, and other hands-on projects to get everyone thinking "green."

Throughout the day, the zoo's Nature Stage will be filled with family entertainment. At noon and 2 p.m. Green E - The Environmental Elvis will save the planet one song at a time with his own conservation-themed renditions of popular 60s and 70s tunes, including "Don't Waste Fuel," "Are You Recycling Tonight?" and "Burning Sludge." Carolyn Finzer, "The Mad Hatter" of storytellers, will take the stage at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Guests of all ages are sure to enjoy her assortment of colorful and flamboyant characters in mini-theatrical performances about nature and animals.

In the Hamill Family Play Zoo (admission is free on April 22nd) youngsters can help decorate a gigantic Earth Day cake with recycled materials and even make mini cakes and cards to keep and display at home. Additional craft projects include creating paper and native journals. Every hour on the hour between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. young guests can discover how to conserve water and energy by playing the Energy Star Scavenger Hunt. And in the Play Zoo's backyard area, kids can get back to nature at the make-believe camp setting, complete with tents and cooking accessories. In addition to helping plant acorns in the greenhouse, kids can take home oak tree saplings to plant

The zoo's volunteers are joining in this huge celebration by engaging guests in activities throughout the day. Gather around the elder tree outside Habitat Africa! The Savannah where Mother Earth will share environmentally friendly stories from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. At Indian Lake between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. volunteers and Play Zoo staff will help kids create binoculars made with paper tubes and then use them to look for birds in the area. More powerful binoculars and scopes will be available from 10 a.m. to noon along the lake's pathway to assist guests in spotting our fine-feathered friends in the area.

From 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the North Mall, guests can watch Bim Willow, author, artist and teacher, create amazing giant sculptures out of willow branches. Also on the mall, folks from the Adler Planetarium will have telescopes set up for daytime solar viewing, and representatives from the Chicagoland Bicycle Federation will engage guests in an interactive game that promotes bike safety. In addition, there will be information about Chicago Wilderness, of which the Chicago Zoological Society is a member. If you have always wanted to work for a conservation leader such as the Chicago Zoological Society, which manages Brookfield Zoo, be sure to stop by the zoo's Human Resources booth to learn about current job opportunities.

Get the inside scoop on some of the animals during special Zoo Chats. Keepers will present 15-minute informative sessions about the camels, kangaroos, lemurs, African elephants, Mexican gray wolves, and Andean condors, to name just a few. Then find out what the zoo does with some of the animals' poop. Zoo goers can board the "Poop Tram" at 12:30 p.m. for a tour of the park's odorless compost facility. (The tour departs from the east end of Pachyderm House.)

While strolling along the zoo's walkways during the festival, take a moment or two to note the conservation message boards located throughout the park that explain why clean water is important to animals and the environment, as well as provide some H2O facts and tips on ways to conserve water at home and how you can support clean water efforts.

As visitors enter the zoo, they will receive information detailing all of the Party for the Planet activities. In addition, the complete schedule is posted on the zoo's Web site, www.BrookfieldZoo.org, where advance tickets may be purchased. Earth Day activities are free with regular zoo admission of $10 for adults and $6 for children 3-11 and seniors 65 and over. Children 2 and under are free. Parking is $8.

Chicago Improv Festival

Catch a preview of the 10th Annual Chicago Improv Festival at the Beverly Arts Center, 2407 W. 111th St., Chicago, Saturday, April 7, 8 p.m. Bassprov with Joe Bill and Mark Sutton is the headline act, and 10's The Reckoning opens. Advance tickets are $15.

"The shows we do at the Beverly Arts Center are such a success," said Jonathan Pitts, executive director of the Chicago Improv Festival. "Their audiences are great and their theatre is one of the best in the city. We are thrilled that our partnership with the BAC is thriving." CIF stages improv performances and workshops at BAC several times a year.

Bassprov, an original long form improv show developed by comedy veterans Joe Bill and Mark Sutton, is set in a fishing boat. Comedian Tim O'Malley is special guest for the CIF preview.

Spinning off from simple audience suggestions, Bassprov is set in a bass boat where best friends open a few beers, discuss world issues and reel in some very funny material.

Sutton, a founding member of the Annoyance Theater and longtime comedy performer, teacher, writer and director, and Bill, also a founding member of The Annoyance Theater and a comedy performer since 1977, have been performing Bassprov on tour and at festivals around the United States ever since creating it at the 2001 Chicago Improv Festival.

Tim O'Malley has appeared in several revues at The Second City and is now on the core faculty of The Second City Training Center Chicago. Creator of the acclaimed "Godshow," O'Malley has a long career in theater and comedy that includes television and film. He was raised in the Beverly/Morgan Park community, not far from the Beverly Arts Center, and has been an active supporter of the facility, performing in sold-out shows and benefits.

Recognized as one of the top improv groups in Chicago, The Reckoning is a riotous troop of performers that has been working together for several years at the famous 10 theatre, pushing the boundaries of long form improv. As a group, The Reckoning has performed, directed and taught at improv festivals throughout the US. The individual performers are involved in comedy, theater, TV and film projects.

Tickets to the Chicago Improv Festival Preview at the Beverly Arts Center are $15 in advance or $20 at the door and available from the box office, 773-445-3838 or online at www.beverlyartscenter.org.

The 2007 Chicago Improv Festival will be held at various locations April 23 through 29. For more information visit www.chicagoimprovfestival.org.

Mt. Carmel Alumni Banquet

The 71st Annual Alumni Banquet of Mount Carmel High School in Chicago will be held on Friday, May 4th at Lexington House, 7717 W. 95th St. in Hickory Hills. Doors will open at 6 p.m. with dinner to follow at 7 p.m. The classes of 1957 and 1982 are the special guests at this year's banquet. Tickets are $50. For additional information and tickets, contact Fr. Peter McGarry at (773) 359-0463.

Musical Luncheon

Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. in Oak Forest, will host the Monthly Musical Luncheon on Wednesday, April 4th beginning at noon. Lunch will be served at 1 p.m. with dancing music provided by Sean O'Donnell until 4 p.m. For the modest cost of $13, the musical luncheon includes an afternoon of lively entertainment and a delicious sit-down lunch with soup, salad, entrée, dessert and coffee or tea.

Reservations are required so call Gaelic Park at (708) 687-9323 to reserve tickets or visit www.chicagogaeltic-park.org for more information.

LOOKING FOR A PLACE TO SHOOT: A common complaint that I hear is gun owners bemoaning the fact that they have no place to use their firearms. It's true that ranges are few and far between. However, there is a place close to home that offers the opportunity to gather with like-minded individuals and enjoy shooting opportunities.

The Howell Shooting Club & Clyde Howell NRA Youth Shooting Sports Club located in nearby Yorkville, Illinois has many programs for adults, youth and women covering rifle, shotgun, pistol, air rifle and archery.

Reservations are now being taken for the very popular Youth Shooting Sports Camp that runs from June 1st to June 3rd. For information on the Youth Camp, club membership and NRA Instructor Training Courses, contact David A. Lombardo at (815) 744-5487 or dlombardo@howellshootingclub.com.

STUDIES EXAMINE IMPACT OF 'CULLING' ON FISHING TOURNAMENTS: Bass fishing tournaments in which participants are allowed to "cull" or sort fish have a minimal effect on fish survival when water temperatures are low but can be a concern when water temperatures are warm, according to a recently released report on the impact of such tournaments in Wisconsin.

Less than 1 percent of bass caught during tournaments when water temperatures were low died in the live well or later after the fish were released, but that mortality rate climbed to 15.6 percent for largemouth bass and 33.9 percent for smallmouth bass when water temperatures were above 80 degrees, according to the report, which details results from separate studies the Wisconsin DNR commissioned to meet a lawmaker's request.

Wisconsin does not allow culling by any anglers but lawmakers in 2004 established a pilot program in which four tournaments each in 2005 and 2006 were authorized to allow their participants to cull fish. Culling involves tournament anglers replacing smaller fish with bigger fish in live wells, and continuing to fish once they reach their daily limit. The pilot program responded to contentions by some bass anglers and tournament sponsors that big-time bass tournaments skipped Wisconsin because of the State's culling rules.

The full report will be presented to the DNR's policy-making board in April, also addressing problems such as crowding at boat ramps and concerns over fish dying after being caught and released. No final decision has been made on any changes to the proposed rules to reflect public comments or the final study results.

ORLAND PARK CAPITULATES TO PETA: One of the nation's most outspoken animal rights groups is pressuring local governments to eliminate beaver trapping programs.

The Chicago suburb of Orland Park has capitulated to demands by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) and removed three conibear traps that had been set to control the beaver population. The animals have been building dams that are diverting water into local streets.

The village manager admits that the beaver dams present hazards to motorists, but nonetheless caved in to anti's demands and ordered the traps removed.

Trapping is recognized by every wildlife agency at the state and federal level as a viable and important conservation tool. It helps keep fur-bearer populations at healthy levels and is important in stemming the spread of wildlife diseases that threaten animals and humans. (Source: Sentry Newsletter, U.S. Sportsmen's Alliance)

GREAT LAKES PLAN FUNDING QUESTIONED: Federal officials, anglers, boaters and other conservation groups are hailing reauthorization of the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act as proof of the high priority given to Great Lakes issues. But while the Act provides funding for a wide range of projects and promotes collaboration in restoration efforts, questions remain as to how much funding the federal government will actually put forth.

ThunderBolts Ticket Special Presale

The Windy City ThunderBolts are giving fans an early chance to purchase tickets during a special presale. The discounted prices will last through Saturday, April 7th.

Lower deck tickets for individual games will be available during the presale for the discounted price of $6 per ticket. For every four tickets purchased, fans will receive a complimentary ThunderBolts logo baseball.

Just in time for Easter, fans can purchase a gift pack with four undated ticket vouchers and a ThunderBolts logo baseball for $24. The gift pack is a perfect idea for Easter baskets. The undated ticket vouchers can be exchanged at the box office for tickets to any 2007 ThunderBolts home game, subject to availability.

The ThunderBolts box office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The box office is not open on Sunday. Presale tickets and the voucher gift pack can also be purchased by calling (708) 489-2255. ThunderBolts merchandise is available at the team store whenever the box office is open. Tickets will go on sale for good at regular price on Friday, April 13th.

Runners Earn Academic All-American Honors

Two members of the Moraine Valley women's cross country team and one member of the men's team were selected as Academic All-American for 2006 by the National Junior College Cross Country Coaches Assn., and the Cyclones women's team was ranked 14th as an Academic All-American team. Over the past six years, Moraine Valley's cross-country teams have fielded 19 Academic All-Americans.

Jerry Thor and Veronica Canseco, both of Justice, and Marisol Perez of Blue Island were named to the association's Academic All-American team. Sharon and Sandra Hubbard, both of Hickory Hills, Maggie Smorczewska of Justice, Lisa Reitz of Oak Lawn, and Perez and Canseco were members of the college's Academic All-American team.

"We are very proud of them," coach Mark Horstmeyer said. "These scholar-athletes are simply outstanding. They attend class full-time, work part-time, and excel as athletes and students. Their performance on and off the field speaks highly of them. I am very proud of their achievement. It is a tremendous honor for them and Moraine Valley."

Tickets On Sale For 2007 Roundball Classic

The 43rd annual Roundball Classic presented by Sonny Vaccaro and Rbk returns to the United Center, 1901 W. Madison St., for the sixth consecutive year on Tuesday, April 3rd at 7 p.m. The original high school basketball all-star game will feature the top 23 seniors in the country in an East vs. West competition.

Among the talented high school basketball athletes featured in this year's game include O.J. Mayo (Huntington, WV), Kevin Love (Lake Oswego, OR), DeAndre Jordan (Houston, TX) and premier local talents including Chicago-area standouts Nyal Koshwal (Chicago), Evan Turner (Chicago) and Demetri McCamey (Bellwood).

Tickets are on sale now at the United Center box office. Ticketmaster locations and on www.ticketmaster.com for $25, $15 and $7.50.

Cline Joins St. Xavier University Women's Soccer

Cecilia Cline, a sophomore forward transferring in from Ashford University in Clinton, Iowa, has signed a letter of intent to continue both her athletic and academic career at St. Xavier University as a member of the Cougar women's soccer program. She played girls soccer at De La Salle Institute in Chicago under head coach Tom Dufficy before playing one season at Ashford University.

Cline is the daughter of Thomas and Sandi Cline of Chicago and plans to pursue a degree in business administration at SXU. She was the leading scorer for Ashford in 2006 starting all 17 games and recording 11 goals, four assists and 26 points. In addition, Cline was selected to the second team of the 2006 All-Midwest Classic Conference (MCC) as a freshman.

"Cecilia will add depth to our team, which returns 19 players from last season," said SXU women's soccer coach Derek Begich. "She is going to battle for a forward position with the graduation of senior co-captain Angie Holmes. We are very excited that she has decided to continue her collegiate career at St. Xavier."

Baseball Tournament

Marist High School Baseball Program will be hosting a 13-year-old boys baseball tournament on June 8th, 9th and 10th at the Marist High School baseball fields. This will be a 60 ft.-90 ft. tournament. All players will receive a Marist High School baseball T-shirt for their participation. For information regarding the tournament, contact Rob Pzynarski at (708) 424-8379.

Coaches Hall Of Fame

The Illinois High School Football Coaches Assn., in conjunction with their Annual Spring Clinic, will induct a group of high school football coaches into their Hall of Fame. The list of retired, deceased and active coaches includes some truly great individuals. They were selected for their contributions to the profession and impact on the school and community where they coached.

The coaches will be honored at a luncheon to be held at the Hilton Garden Inn in Champaign on Saturday, March 31st at noon. The price per ticket is $20 and may be obtained from Phil Salzer, secretary/treasurer, at 3101 N. Old Trail Road, Peoria, IL 61604.

The emcee for the event is Brian Barnhart of Champaign. The program speaker will be Ron Zook, head coach of the University of Illinois Football Program.

For future nominations to the Football Coaches Hall of Fame, contact the officers of the IHSCFA. Suggestions are appreciated. All nominations may be sent to Phil Salzer at the above address.

Youth Services Day In April

The Illinois Commission on Volunteerism and Community Service (ICVCS), through its AmeriCorps* State programs across the state, will mobilize at least 750 young people to participate in the 19th Annual National & Global Youth Service Day, Friday, April 20 and Saturday, April 21. Volunteers of all ages throughout Illinois and millions of youth in the United States and in 116 other countries are planning community service projects and special events to celebrate the 19th annual National and Global Youth Service Day.

"Youth are volunteering at record rates - more than any other generation in history," according to Steven A. Culbertson, president and CEO of Youth Service America, the national coordinating body for NGYSD. "With 24-hour internet and news shows available, young people are exposed to global coverage and they are reacting to it now - not waiting until they are adults to make a difference in the world," Culbertson added.

ICVCS Executive Director Scott Kimmel noted that the prestigious Lead Agency grant the Commission received last fall has aided the Commission and Illinois AmeriCorps programs in better fulfilling their mission. "AmeriCorps Members pledge up to a year of their lives to 'get things done' in their communities," he said. "National and Global Youth Service Day weekend will demonstrate the impact youth volunteers can have in just one week-end."

Projects coordinated through AmeriCorps*State programs in the Chicago area include: City Year Chicago (AmeriCorps*State Program), creating green spaces, education and community beautification projects; Project YES! AmeriCorps (program of Northwestern University Settlement House Association) and Asian Human Services AmeriCorps, community garden renewal project; and PCC Westside AmeriCorps (program of PCC Wellness Center) and American Red Cross AmeriCorps, environmental and conservation education projects.

The Illinois motto for NGYSD 2007 is "You cannot escape the responsibility of tomorrow by evading it today." - Abraham Lincoln

For more information about local events or to get involved, visit www.ysa.org/map and click on the State of Illinois for projects across the state. Interested persons may also contact the Commission at 1-800-592-9896.

National & Global Youth Service Day (April 20-22), the largest service event in the world, mobilizes youth to identify and address the needs of their communities through service-learning and community service. Research continues to support service-learning programs as an effective method to increase student academic achievement. According to a leading researcher in service learning, Shelly Billing from RMC Research Corporation, "Service-learning, when implemented with high quality, yields statistically significant impacts on academic achievement, civic engagement, acquisition of leadership skills, and personal/social development."

The event is organized by Youth Service America (YSA) with the support of State Farm Companies Foundation as the Presenting Sponsor. More than 1115 National Partners and 51 Lead Agencies throughout the United States organize projects. Overseas, National Lead Agencies in 116 countries around the world manage national events. Planning Tool Kits, Service-Learning Curriculum Guides, classroom posters, grants, and more are available for youth, parents, teachers and organizations.

Youth Service America is a national nonprofit resource center that partners with thousands of organizations for young people ages 5 to 25, to serve locally, nationally, and globally. Founded in 1986, Youth Service America's mission is to expand the impact of the youth service movement with communities, schools, corporations, and governments. Youth Service envisions a global culture of engaged youth who are committed to a lifetime of service, learning, leadership and achievement. In addition to National & Global Youth Service Day, which takes place concurrently each April, YSA also hosts SERVENet www.SERVENet.org, providing the largest database of volunteer of volunteer opportunities in America. HOLY WEEK SCHEDULE

Maundy Thursday, April 5 - 7:30 p.m.

Finally, we hear the words of forgiveness that we've been missing in Lent. We remember the events of Jesus' last hours by washing feet and eating the Holy Supper.

Good Friday, April 6, 7:30 p.m.

On this night we read the story of the crucifixion, or the Passion. We pray for our world, and meditate on the mystery of the cross and salvation.

Easter Vigil, Saturday, April 7, 8:00 p.m.

On this night, we strike new fire, a sign of the first work of the Creator, and the one who is the Light of the World. We tell some of our "family stories" from the Old Testament, and renew our baptism.

Easter Sunday, April 8, at 10:30 a.m.

Breakfast at 9:00 a.m.

Army National Guard Spec. Ace J. Blaszczyk has graduated from basic infantry training at Fort Benning, Columbus, Georgia. He is the son of Shirley Blaszczyk of Burbank. Blaszczyk is a 1996 graduate of Brother Rice High School in Chicago and received a bachelor's degree in 2001 from Ball State University, Muncie, Ind.

Army Pvt. Sean M. Fox has graduated from basic combat training at Fort Jackson, Columbia, South Carolina. He is the son of Gary Fox of Crestwood. Fox is a 2005 graduate of Alan B. Shepard High School in Palos Heights.

Air Force Airman Robert G. Reggio has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. He is the son of Marites Reggio of Chicago. Reggio is a 2006 graduate of Morgan Park High School in Chicago.

The Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs hosted a Legion of Honor Medal ceremony for local World War II veterans at the James R. Thompson Center in Chicago on March 22nd. The French authorities presented the "Legion of Honor Medal" to five Illinois Veterans who helped liberate France during World War II. The Legion of Honor Medal is the highest honor that France can bestow upon those who have accomplished remarkable deeds in France.

Recipients of this great honor are: William V. Howland of Lisle, James B. Nannini of Darien, Edward J. Smagala of Chicago, William Stefanu of Orland Park and Willis E. Young of Hanna City, Ill.

William Howland participated in the Southern and Northern France campaigns with the 36th Infantry Division. Captured in combat, he was a prisoner of war for several months. Mr. Howland was presented with several awards including the Silver Star, the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart for two wounds he received in battle.

James Nannini landed in Normandy on D-Day and participated in four campaigns through France and all Western and Central Europe with the 4th Infantry Division (22nd Infantry Regiment). He was wounded in France and has been awarded numerous awards, including the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star.

Edward Smagala served in the 44th Infantry Division (71st Infantry Regiment) and participated in the Northern France, the Rhineland and the Central Europe Campaigns. For his actions in combat, Mr. Smagala was awarded the Silver Star and the Bronze Star.

William Stefanu served in General Patton's Third Army and took part in various glorious battles, including the Rhineland Campaign and the Ardennes. He was wounded in France and has been awarded with the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart.

Willis Young served with the 3rd U.S. Army in three campaigns including Northern France, the Rhineland and Central Europe campaign. Wounded in combat, Mr. Young was a prisoner of war for several months. He was presented with several awards including the Bronze Star and the Purple Heart.

In an effort to recognize the outstanding deeds accomplished by American soldiers during WW II, the French Republic began awarding its highest distinction to American WW II veterans in 2004. This campaign was met with great success as some WW II veterans have been named Knight of the Legion of Honor. Created by Napoleon, the Legion of Honor Medal is France's highest honor and serves as a sign of true gratitude for the honoree's invaluable contribution to the liberation of France during difficult times in the nation's history.

The Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) will hold two news conferences in Springfield at the President Abraham Lincoln Hotel and Conference Center today and tomorrow (March 29th and 30th). According to VVA president John Rowan, the organization is hosting the news conferences to provide advance outreach about the July 18-22 National Convention and to begin media registration for the convention. Rowan said, "We are extremely pleased to be holding our National Convention in the heartland of America this summer and we want to get an early start on the media registration process for the convention."

When the 13th biennial National Convention meets in July at the Prairie Capital Convention Center in Springfield, more than 800 delegates from VVA local chapters across the country will join hundreds of other Vietnam veterans and guests for this big event.

VVA has already received a commitment to appear from Nancy Sinatra, who entertained the troops in Vietnam and has been a strong Vietnam veterans advocate for many years. Also committed is HBO's COO, and Vietnam veteran, Bill Nelson, who will receive the Excellence in the Arts Award at the Saturday night banquet. The list of many more guests to appear has not yet been finalized.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

Prepaid College Enrollment Plans Available

It's tax time again. Although this annual wrap-up focuses on the previous year's finances, tax season should serve as a reminder to start planning for the next year and beyond. For parents of young children, one area for review should be college saving and what tax benefits, if any, your strategy will bring.

A good college-funding plan is important these days. College is expensive. Many parents underestimate the costs associated with their children's college years. In fact, many parents are shocked to learn how much college costs have been outpacing general inflation. In Illinois alone, tuition and fees at public universities have increased at an average of 8 percent per year over the last 20 years. With increases like that, a child born today will have a staggering tuition bill once college rolls around.

Unfortunately, many parents must also learn not to depend on financial aid as a means to pay for college. The availability of financial aid in the future is uncertain and currently, a good majority of financial aid is awarded in the form of loans that must be repaid with interest. Nationally, the average debt facing college graduates is close to $20,000.

So, what should parents do to offset future college costs and earn some tax benefits in the interim? There are numerous options available to parents including 529 plans. These plans are 100 percent exempt from state and federal income taxes and many states provide additional tax incentives. For example, in Illinois, taxpayers who make contributions to the state's 529 prepaid tuition program, College Illinois, can deduct those contributions (up to $10,000 per year; $20,000 for couples) from their state taxable income. The program, which allows parents and grandparents to protect a child's future college education from tuition inflation, also allows for gift and estate tax benefits when they lock in a price to cover future college tuition and fees.

No matter which option a parent chooses to pay for a college education, the most important thing is that they get started. However, getting started is often the hardest part.

In addition to tax advantages, Illinois families can begin paying for college via S.T.E.P.S. - which translates to "Start Today with Easy Payment Solutions" - another offering from College Illinois.

With College Illinois S.T.E.P.S. approach, parents can purchase as little as one semester and choose to pay in installments that work best for them. Various payment options are available, including monthly and annual installments, with or without a down payment. If a family's needs and opportunities change, they can adjust their plan to a higher semester level (up to nine) and a payment plan that is appropriate.

Despite starting small, participants using College Illinois S.T.E.P.S. approach still realize big tax benefits and have the flexibility to send their children to virtually any college across the country. The plan is similar to an insurance policy and backed by the state of Illinois, ensuring tuition and fee benefits for the number of semesters covered by a specific plan. Programs like College Illinois provide a low-risk way to ensure that there will be money available when a child is ready to go to college because benefits do not fluctuate with the stock market.

For more information about College Illinois or the tax benefits associated with 529 plans, visit collegeillinois.com or call toll-free (877) 877-3724. College Illinois is open for enrollment through April 24th.

Prostitution Bill Passed The Senate

A monumental bill sponsored by State Senator Jacqueline Y. Collins (D-Chicago) to help prostitutes get their lives on the right track and turn away from prostitution passed the Senate.

"When we grant probation to individuals convicted of prostitution for the first time, we empower them to find a job, get an education, and receive the medical or psychological attention they need to reform," said Senator Collins.

Senate Bill 75 allows the court to sentence a person convicted of felony prostitution for the first time to probation without entering a judgment and with the consent of the person. The court sets the conditions of probation to require counseling and rehabilitation services. A defendant can only receive this probation once. During probation, the individual would submit to periodic drug testing, be prohibited from owning firearms or committing any criminal violations, and must perform at least 30 hours of community service. At the Court's discretion, the probationer could also be required to enter a work or study program, receive medical treatment, or pay fines and costs. Minors could be required to live with their parents or in a foster home and attend school.

Felony convictions for prostitution have doubled in Cook County between 2002 and 2003. Between 16,000 and 25,000 female prostitutes are estimated to be in Chicago alone. Many are victims of incest, sexual abuse, or domestic violence. A significant number are also homeless, and were forced into prostituting themselves by another person. An increasing number of experts are coming to realize that rehabilitation, rather than punishment, is the more effective way to combat prostitution, and ultimately will lead to a decrease in prostitution rates.

"I co-sponsored the Predator Accountability Act last year allowing prostitutes and other victims of the sex trade to file civil suit against the person forcing them into that field. Senate Bill 75 continues the trend toward reducing prostitution through rehabilitation, opportunity, and empowerment, rather than incarceration," Senator Collins added.

ALLERGY ATTACKING?

It's springtime, and allergies are in the air! Not only are allergens outside (where they can't be controlled), but they are indoors as well. New ones, old ones...you are bombarded! Antihistamines usually help, but need to be taken on a regular basis. At home, rigorous housecleaning and a laundry routine can help you reduce them tremendously, but only if you are diligent and follow the rules daily.

Just what are allergies?

Allergies occur when a person produces too much of an antibody called IgE. IgE binds, or connects, to cells called mast cells, which line the nose, eyes, lungs and GI tract. Such antibodies attach themselves to the surface of the mast cells and wait for individuals to come into contact with particular allergens—substances in the environment that trigger an allergic reaction. Dust mites, animal dander, and cockroach droppings are common indoor allergens, while pollens and molds top the list of outdoor allergens.

When a person is exposed to allergens to which he or she is sensitive, the allergens link to the IgE antibodies bound to the mast cells. "This process is like a key unlocking a lock, causing the cells to release chemicals that trigger an inflammatory reaction," according to Dr. William E. Berger, past president of the American College of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology. The result is swelling, sneezing, coughing and wheezing.

All allergic reactions result from interaction with IgE antibodies, but the specific symptoms depend on what organ is affected and which chemicals are involved. For instance, people who have allergic rhinitis, or hay fever, experience congestion, a runny nose, and itchy watery eyes. Those with allergic asthma experience narrowed air passages which leads to wheezing and shortness of breath and inflammation in the airway lining.

Ways to Control Inside Allergens

While you can't control the levels of outdoor allergens, such as grasses, flowers, weeds, you can take some big measures to control them at home, but, again, you must do this regularly!

It is wise to keep a checklist to be certain you're on top of things.

1. Wash bedding weekly in hot water, and dry in a hot dryer.
2. Avoid having pets, or, at least, keep them out of the bedroom.
3. Keep bedroom windows closed during pollen season.
4. If mold is a problem, remove the source of excessive moisture through such measures as double-paned windows and fans.
5. Remove wall-to-wall carpeting and minimize the use of soft furnishings. Hardwood and tiles are less likely to cause problems. Washable throw rugs can be used if cleaned regularly.
6. Use air conditioning to help prevent the entrance of pollen and mold allergens from the outside.
7. For areas that have a tendency to become mildewed, clean with a detergent mixed with a dash of bleach.

And last but not least, consult an allergist if you have ruled out what's listed above. You might be surprised to find out what allergens ail you.

High-Dose Radiation Treatment For Cancer

Thurmon Ware Jr., a 50-year-old man from Chicago, was sure about a few things when he learned he had prostate cancer last May. He knew that he did not want to undergo a major operation or undergo any chemotherapy. He also wanted to avoid becoming impotent, incontinent, or losing his hair.

Ware learned that there were several new non-surgical prostate cancer treatment options available and that Little Company of Mary's Prostate Cancer Management Program offered the widest comprehensive range of treatment options including the Da Vinci robotic prostatectomy, Intensity Modulated Radiation Therapy, and High Dose Rate Brachytherapy (HDR).

"Even though my doctor was from a downtown hospital, I knew I wanted to receive my treatment at the hospital in my neighborhood, Little Company of Mary," Ware said.

Ware ultimately decided that High Dose Rate Brachytherapy was the best treatment for him and that Paul Y. Song, M.D. was the best doctor for his treatment. Prior to joining the Little Company of Mary staff, Dr. Song served as Chief of the Brachytherapy Service at the Center for Prostate Disease Research at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

"HDR involves placing temporary radioactive catheters directly into the prostate with sophisticated computer planning to deliver the most precise radiation treatment available. This technique allows us to maximize cancer treatment and minimize side effects," Dr. Song said. "Unlike radioactive seed implants in which radioactive seeds are permanently placed within patients, our technique is temporary and therefore avoids radiation exposure to family. I am very pleased that Little Company of Mary is one of the only hospitals in the Midwest region to offer this cutting edge treatment."

In November 2006, Ware became the first person at Little Company of Mary to receive HDR prostate brachytherapy when Dr. Song gave him four treatments over a two and a half day period.

"I was given an epidural and on the third day when the numbness wore off, I was able to go home," Ware said.

Ware was back to normal within two weeks and experienced minimal discomfort requiring only ibuprofen. He frequently recommends Little Company of Mary and Dr. Song to his friends.

Little Company has invested in providing the latest innovative technology like HDR, to provide a nearly pain-free and highly efficient treatment experience. To learn more about Little Company of Mary's multidisciplinary team and minimally invasive approach to treating prostate cancer, call 1 (866) 540-LCMH or visit www.pursuingpainfreecancer.org to take a free prostate cancer risk assessment.

Director Issues Consumer Warning

Dr. Eric E. Whitaker, state public health director, recently issued a warning about the dangers of consuming illegally manufactured Mexican-style cheeses, such as queso fresco or queso cotija. The warning came after a sample of Mexican-style cheeses from a grocery store in Kane County tested positive for Salmonella. The manufacturer of the Salmonella-contaminated cheese in Kane County has not been clearly identified.

"We're concerned that people who have this illegally manufactured cheese may become sick from Salmonella," said Dr. Whitaker. "It is important that people check the labeling to make sure the product is by licensed manufacturers - even if you purchase the product from a grocery store. Anyone who has become ill after eating Mexican-style cheese should contact their healthcare provider."

The Illinois Dept. of Public Health (IDPH) is working with Kane County and alerted other local health departments about this illegal contaminated cheese. The IDPH Food, Drugs and Dairies Division has advised local health departments to review the cheeses present in grocery stores in their jurisdiction and make sure they are from approved sources.

Salmonella is bacteria that can be found in illegally manufactured cheese. While the bacteria cannot be detected by sight, taste or smell it can cause illness, including fever, abdominal cramps and diarrhea. Most individuals can recover on their own in 3 to 5 days. The infection can be more severe in young children, the elderly and those with compromised immune system. Consumers who are ill with fever and diarrhea should call their physician. If consumers believe their illness is linked to Mexican-style cheese they should contact their local health department and hold the cheese in case it is needed for testing.

Outbreaks of Salmonella in other states have been associated with these illegally manufactured cheeses popular in Latino communities. Consumers are strongly warned against buying or consuming cheese that is suspected of being made by an unlicensed producer. The IDPH recommends persons who have Mexican-style cheese in their home, but cannot clearly identify the product was manufactured by a licensed or regulated manufacturer, should not eat the cheese.

Legitimate, wholesome Mexican-style cheeses are available in the refrigerated case at retail stores and authenticated by label information specifying: legal name of the product, name and address of distributor or processor, quantity of contents, an ingredient statement, nutrition facts (in most cases).

Mexican-style cheeses purchased from a deli and packaged at the time of sale are required to be labeled with the common or usual name of the product and the name and address of the manufacturer, packer or distributor. The product is then weighed and priced at the time of sale. Nutrition facts and other information required for packaged cheese must be available upon request.

IDPH encourages consumers to always purchase milk and dairy products made by licensed manufacturers.

New "Go Direct" Plan

Each fall, thousands of seniors pack up their belongings in search of warmer weather. These "snowbirds" flock to places like Florida and Arizona to avoid winter's snow and cold. But rather than go through the hassle of having their Social Security checks re-directed to their winter address, the federal government is encouraging seniors to select the safer, easier option that also offers retirees more control-direct deposit.

Seniors who make the transition from winter weather to warmth can benefit from a new national campaign called Go Direct. Sponsored by the U.S. Department of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank, Go Direct is an initiative to motivate Social Security and other federal benefit recipients to use direct deposit and to help them sign up for it.

When you use direct deposit, your payment is sent electronically to your checking or savings account, so you don't need to go to the bank or credit union to make a deposit. Your money already is there on your payment day-on time, every time. You are free to travel or visit friends and family anytime. Waiting for your check no longer rules your schedule.

Direct deposit also is much safer than checks. Check fraud and identity theft are growing risks for all Americans. In fact, more than 70,000 checks issued by the U.S. Department of the Treasury were forged in 2004. The checks totaled more than $61 million. Direct deposit helps protect you from someone stealing your identity or your money-because your payment goes straight into your account, instead of your mailbox.

Finally, direct deposit just makes good sense. Each benefit check costs 75 cents more to issue than direct deposit and the government mails approximately 160 million benefit checks a year. Nationwide, that adds up to about $120 million that could be saved every year with direct deposit-money that could benefit you and future generations.

Go Direct reaches out to people who could benefit from direct deposit through organizations they know and trust. The Go Direct campaign is working with local organizations, banks and credit unions to hold events where you can learn about direct deposit and how it can help you in your daily life.

To sign up for direct deposit today, call the Go Direct helpline toll-free at (800) 333-1795 or visit www.GoDirect.org for more information about direct deposit and sign-up events being held by organizations in your area. For information in Spanish, you can call (800) 333-1792.

Borrow Home Equity Without Repaying Debt

A growing number of older Americans are tapping into the valuable equity in their homes through an increasingly popular retirement product that allows them to maintain or enhance their existing standard of living and remain in their homes for as long as they wish.

A reverse mortgage enables seniors to borrow against the equity in their home without repaying the debt for as long as they live there. That's the "reverse" part of this kind of mortgage loan. Instead of making monthly payments, you can opt to receive them. Senior homeowners can use the funds anyway they wish, including paying for long-term care insurance, home repairs or even a vacation.

"It's exactly as the name implies," said Jeff Taylor, vice president, Wells Fargo Home Mortgage Senior Products Group. "You worked hard to own your home and now it is time to make your home work for you."

As an example, Taylor described a customer who was about to lose her home. Getting a reverse was the answer. With the woman's husband in a nursing home and his Social Security check diverted to pay for his skilled care, the 75-year-old woman had no money to pay the mortgage on their house. In addition, she had significant debt because she was using credit cards to pay for basic needs such as food and health care. Her reverse mortgage gave her enough money to pay off most of her bills, including her house payment. In addition, she gained immense peace of mind because it eliminated a lot of financial stress.

Eligibility for a reverse mortgage depends on two factors: age and homeownership. No income requirement exists and credit history is not considered. Reverse mortgages are for homeowners 62 and older. The loan draws on the equity established in the home.

"As many seniors approach retirement, they begin to realize their major asset is likely to be their home," Taylor said. "By the time the average person retires, they own a house that is usually worth more than they paid for it."

When you take out a reverse mortgage, you are not forced to relinquish ownership. You remain the owner for as long as you live there and you will never be forced to move. If you decide to sell or move from your home, the outstanding balance of your reverse mortgage becomes due just as it would with a traditional mortgage. Unlike a traditional mortgage, however, your balance can never exceed the value of your home when you sell it.

The maximum loan amount for a reverse mortgage is based primarily on four factors: the age of the youngest borrower, the location and value of the home and the current interest rate. You must occupy the home as your principal residence for a majority of the year. The property must be a single-family or two-to-four unit dwelling. Town homes, detached homes, condominium units, planned unit developments and some manufactured homes are eligible.

The home doesn't have to be owned free and clear to qualify for a reverse mortgage. You may qualify for a reverse mortgage if the home has a low remaining mortgage that can be paid off at the closing with proceeds from the reverse loan.

As a key consumer protection, all borrowers are required to participate in a free educational session with a HUD-approved counselor in order to determine if a reverse mortgage is the best option.

Wells Fargo Home Mortgage can take the application prior to counseling, however, it cannot collect any fees, order a credit report or appraisal or begin to process the loan until the borrower can show certification that the required consumer counseling was completed.

Wells Fargo Home Mortgage is the leading originator of reverse mortgages in the nation, helping senior homeowners capitalize on the equity they have built in their homes. In 2004, Wells Fargo Home Mortgage helped senior Americans secure over one-third of all reverse mortgages in the country.

MIDLOTHIAN SALUTES ITS SENIORS!

Special Events:

- Reday Lodge: Senior Luncheons are held at Reday Lodge monthly. The cost of $7 and includes a delicious meal supplied by one of Midlothian's fine caterers, dessert, coffee and soft drinks. The atmosphere is very festive, with a seasonal theme. Lunch is served at 11 and doors open at 10. Following lunch, you can stay around and play Cash Bingo. Call 269-8080.
- Village of Midlothian Historical Society: Here's a spot close to home that you might want to visit some Saturday. Even if you have not lived in Midlothian since its incorporation in 1927, you will enjoy the many displays of the past 80 years as well as the Scottish exhibit donated by the late Gordon Flaws. These memories are treasures that we want to keep for future generations, giving them some idea of what life was like in earlier times. The society is located at 14609 S. Springfield, across the street from Springfield School, and is open from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The society will also be open for school groups, scout groups, or others by appointment. Please call the Historical Society at 389-0055 or the Village Hall at 389-0200.
- Community Events: 2007 is quite an anniversary year. It is the Village's 80th anniversary and St. Christopher Parish's 85th anniversary. St. Christopher will celebrate with an 85th anniversary Dinner Dance at The Odyssey Country Club. Tickets are e$50 per person and are on sale at St. Christopher's Parish Office, 4130 W. 147th Street. The Village will celebrate its anniversary at the 10th annual Scottish Fair on Saturday, September 29th with and all Midlothian parade.
- M.A.R.S. Day & Clean Up Day: Saturday, May 5th will be M.A.R.S. day in Midlothian. So, whether you are a seller or a buyer, this is a fabulous day in Midlothian. Garage sales will be held throughout the village and there will be bargains galore. If you're trying to clean up and clean out you can sell your no longer needed treasures at a garage sale on May 5th. May 12th is the rain date. Then, on May 19, we will be cleaning up public areas and recycling. The bulk garbage pick up will be on your regular garbage day the week preceding Clean Up Day: Tuesday, May 15th or Friday, May 18th.
- Senior Clubs: Throughout the year senior clubs meet at Reday Lodge. Midlothian Buddies usually meet on the 1st and 3rd Thursday and Community Seniors usually meet on the 2nd and 4th Tuesday. Both clubs meet from 11 a.m. until about 3:30 p.m. Come on out and enjoy the camaraderie of your fellow seniors.

Alzheimer's Research

Today, 4.5 million Americans have Alzheimer's disease (AD) and the number is expected to increase dramatically as the baby-boom generation ages. The brain disorder strikes an estimated one in 10 people 65 and older and half those 85 or older. Without a cure, the Alzheimer's Association estimates as many as 16 million Americans will have AD by 2050.

Fortunately, distinguished researchers are working on the issue, including William E. Klunk, M.D., Ph.D. and Chester A. Mathis, Ph.D., of the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center; John C. Morris, M.D., of the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis; and Ronald C. Petersen, M.D., Ph.D., of Mayo Clinic-each of whom recently won a MetLife Foundation Award for Medical Research in Alzheimer's Disease.

"The goal of the award is to encourage research and to support the future work of scientists who have already made a significant contribution to our understanding of Alzheimer's disease. These four scientists have contributed to the early detection and diagnosis of this dreaded disease," says Sibyl Jacobson, president, MetLife Foundation. Drs. Klunk and Mathis have developed experimental noninvasive methods of detecting and creating images of the plaques that form in the brain tissue of Alzheimer's sufferers. The researchers use dyes to make the plaques visible to medical imaging equipment. The ability to see these plaques in living patients will help researchers directly measure the effects of therapies now being developed.

Dr. Morris works on ways to identify the earliest symptomatic stages of AD, evaluating new drug therapies in the treatment of dementia, and establishing phenotypes for inherited forms of AD and other dementias.

Dr. Petersen focuses on mild cognitive impairment and whether it becomes Alzheimer's. Those past the age of 65 with mild cognitive impairment are found to be at greater risk of developing AD than healthy individuals the same age.

MetLife Foundation has supported Alzheimer's research through the awards program since 1986. The Foundation also supports the Alzheimer's Association, and has sponsored a documentary on PBS called The Forgetting: A Portrait of Alzheimer's.

Older Drivers May Maintain Safe Driving Skills

Driving has long been a family affair. Be it family road trips, the infamous "backseat driver" in the family or teaching a teen how to drive, driving is a hot topic for families. What's more, families also play an important role in encouraging safe driving practices among their older loved ones.

"Families nationwide are dealing with the sensitive issue of older driver safety," says Elinor Ginzler, AARP's Director of Livable Communities and an authority on older driver safety. "AARP encourages families to talk openly with loved ones about safe driving practices. Older drivers trust the advice of family—be it spouse or children—when it comes to their well-being."

Today, about one in seven drivers is age 65 or older. This figure is expected to rise significantly in the years ahead, increasing the need for safe driving practices. By the time the last baby boomers turn 65, in 2029, about one in four drivers will be age 65 or older. Older drivers face different challenges on the road than do their younger counterparts. Age-related changes such as impaired vision and slower reflexes and response time can affect their driving skills.

Older drivers may be able to maintain safe driving skills as well as extend their driving years by:

- Conducting regular self-assessment of driving capacities
- Attending a driver-refresher course
- Recognizing and addressing vision changes
- Maintaining quick reflexes and flexibility by staying physically active
- Therapeutic interventions from certified driving rehabilitation specialists.

However, if older drivers continue to experience a decline in driving abilities, it might be time for them to consider limiting driving or hanging up the keys altogether. If you or a loved one experiences any of the following signs, it might be time to talk about safe driving practices and transportation alternatives:

- Frequent "close calls" (i.e., near accidents)
- Dents or scrapes on the car or on fences, mailboxes, garage doors, curbs, etc.
- Trouble judging gaps in traffic at intersections and on highway entrance/exit ramps
- Getting lost
- Difficulty seeing the sides of the road when looking straight ahead
- Slower response time; trouble moving foot from gas to brake pedal or confusing the two pedals

- Getting distracted easily or having trouble concentrating
- Difficulty turning around to check over the shoulder while backing up or changing lanes
- Frequent traffic tickets or "warnings" by traffic or law enforcement officers in the last year or two.

"Although most older drivers believe that they should be the one to make the final decision about driving, they also agree that their physician should advise them," says Dr. Carl Soderstrom, Director of the Driver Safety Research Program for the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration. "By providing evaluations about medical fitness to drive, clinicians can help their patients make informed and wise decisions, or become familiar with mobility alternatives in their community."

If you are concerned about a loved one's driving, start a conversation about driving that's based on your observations. It's also important that they understand you're broaching the topic out of sincere concern for their well-being. In recommending driving solutions, offer various options depending on the degree of impairment. For example, suggest that they limit driving to certain times of the day or familiar areas. Additionally, encourage them to gradually begin using alternative transportation, including rides from family and friends, taxis or public transportation.

To help drivers refresh their skills, AARP offers a classroom course, as well as an online driver's safety course, that teaches safe driving strategies to address age-related changes that affect one's driving ability.

To learn more about older driver safety, visit www.aarp.org/families/driver_safety/ or call (888) 227-7669 toll free.

Vision Changes

Just as the body changes with age, our eyes undergo changes, too. Some of these vision changes can be corrected with eyeglasses, contact lenses or surgery; some cannot. Most of these changes are normal, and are not caused by disease or illness. They can, however, cause problems by interfering with a wide range of everyday activities.

The most common age-related vision changes and their effect on everyday activities can include the following:

- Increased sensitivity to glare: Being able to see clearly when exposed to reflected light or bright sunlight especially outdoors on a sunny day or in a hallway with highly polished floors may require filtered lenses or other adaptations to control glare and to see the environment clearly.
- Increased lighting requirements: Many older adults require three to four times more light than they did previously to perform certain types of everyday activities.
- More time required to adjust to bright light and/or darkness: Adjusting to changes in light levels between bright and dark areas can take two to three times longer than it used to.
- Reduced contrast sensitivity: Difficulties seeing an object clearly against a background of the same color becomes more difficult and requires stronger contrast to make it stand out.
- Decreased depth perception: Difficulties judging distances accurately requires close attention to safety cues such as color, contrast and lighting.
- Decreased ability to focus close-up: As the eye muscles that control the switching of focus from far to near begin to lose flexibility, it becomes more difficult to perform everyday activities such as reading a newspaper, writing or sewing.

A new Web site—called VisionAWARE—offers a wealth of free information on eye conditions; blindness and low vision; how to locate vision rehabilitation services and professionals; how to cope with the emotional impact of vision loss; how to maximize all your senses; how to make simple adaptations for taking care of yourself and your home; how to adapt your computer; how to continue enjoying sports, crafts and other leisure and recreational activities; and how to find a vast range of invaluable informational and special equipment resources.

The VisionAWARE site was specifically designed for blind and low-vision adults and their families and caregivers, and was developed with support provided by Reader's Digest Partners for Sight Foundation. To learn more, visit www.visionaware.org.

Suburban Bank & Trust Celebrates Opening Of New Oak Lawn Branch

Suburban Bank & Trust (SBT) celebrated the opening of its new branch building at 10350 Cicero Ave. with a ribbon cutting ceremony and reception on March 15. SBT President and CEO Blanche E. Hill cut the ribbon to signify the official opening of the branch, along with Oak Lawn Village Clerk, Jane Quinlan; Branch Manager Carol Hakala; SBT Vice-Chairman of the Board, David B. Hill III; Oak Lawn Chamber members, and SBT branch staff and guests. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the branch.

The new 3,640 square foot building was designed by GEA Architects of Lombard and is located immediately south of the existing branch building. R. J. Pozzi Construction, Inc. of Hoffman Estates provided general contracting services. Designed as a full service banking center, the new branch features safe deposit and night depository services, three drive-up banking lanes, plus an additional ATM lane. The branch is open to serve customers 7 days a week, with drive-up banking services on Sundays and 24-hour/7-day ATM service.

Founded in 1976, Suburban Bank & Trust is a locally owned and operated community bank with ten branch offices and assets in excess of $627 million. Celebrating 30 years of community banking, SBT offers personalized service to individuals and business customers through its Retail Banking, Commercial Lending, Corporate Cash Management, and Wealth Management, Trust & Investment Services departments. SBT branch offices are open 7 days per week to serve customers. Further information about SBT can be found at www.suburbanonline.com.

Easter Worship Services

District 218 Announces Yearly Progress Report

Nearly all subgroups in Community High School District 218 satisfied the Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) standards established by the No Child Left Behind Act in 2006.

For the first time, all subgroups from Shepard High School satisfied AYP standards.

While Richards High School as a whole met AYP standards, a pair of subgroups (Black students on the math exam, and economically disadvantaged students on the math exam) did not meet AYP. All Richards subgroups achieved AYP on the reading exam. Richards has been the only district school to meet AYP goals the past two years.

For Eisenhower High School, results varied as well. The White and Hispanic subgroups met AYP on the reading exam, while the Black subgroup did not earn AYP. Meanwhile, White, Black and Hispanic subgroups all earned AYP on the math exam. The only subgroups not earning AYP on the math exam were Students with Disabilities and Economically Disadvantaged.

"Obviously, work remains for us. We realize that, and we're dedicating ourselves to providing the finest education possible. Fortunately, we have a wonderful faculty and a devoted administrative team and Board of Education," said Superintendent Dr. John Byrne. "We're proud of the progress our students made this year."

District 218 has substantially altered its curricula, graduation requirements and, in particular, freshman year to better prepare students for the rigors of universities and the labor market. This trend will continue next year with the introduction of small learning communities (SLC) at Eisenhower, Richards and Shepard. The introduction of SLCs satisfies the federal government's sanctions for the failures of specific subgroups to earn AYP.

Designed for freshmen who scored below standard on their high school entrance exam, the SLCs will serve 400 first-year high school students.

With class sizes at 25 and the same teachers interacting with students daily, the program will satisfy the needs of the freshmen who require the most help. "The concept is to personalize education, to allow staff to really get to know each student," Assistant Superintendent for Instructional Services Dr. Kevin McCaffrey said.

SLCs will help freshmen adapt quicker to high school while boosting academic growth. The SLCs will feature transitional level courses in Literacy Workshop, English I, Geography, Algebra 1M/PDS Math, Freshman Transitions, an interdisciplinary course stressing career exploration, test prep, study skills, writing, and other areas; a common planning period for all program teachers at either the start or end of the day; assignment of each student to an advisory upperclassman, who will serve as an advisor (a teacher, social worker, dean or counselor will provide extra support); and, professional development in areas such as teaching within the block and best practices on poor-performing students.

The SLCs represent the latest step in the evolution of education in District 218.

"In recent years, the Board has instituted many changes we feel have enriched our educational experience and enhanced preparation for life after high school," Byrne emphasized.

Examples include

- Graduation requirements – Today, District 218 students must earn 23.5 units of credit, which exceeds state requirements. District 218 in recent years has increased the graduation requirements in English from three years to four, in math from two years to three, and required students to pass courses in geometry and geography.

- EARLY Start – Hosted by District 218 in the summer between 8th grade and freshman year for students posting substandard marks on their high school placement exam. This program immerses students in lessons and activities designed to strengthen their skill foundation for high school.
- FAST Start – Freshmen Achieving Success Together assists freshmen with the transition to high school. Led by homeroom teachers and junior and senior student volunteers, FAST Start helps new students acclimate to their new surroundings. The student and faculty volunteers engage freshmen in activities designed to boost participation in extracurricular activities and enhance academic achievement during the first year of high school.
- For years, District 218 has employed reading and writing initiatives across all content areas. These programs integrate activities designed to enhance reading and writing skills in science, foreign language, social studies, and other academic departments.

Mt. Zion Services

During Holy Week, Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, 10400 Kostner, Oak Lawn, will be holding worship services at the following times: Maundy Thursday, April 5th at 7:30 p.m.; Good Friday, April 6th at 7:30 p.m.; Easter Vigil, Saturday April 7th at 8 p.m.; Easter Sunday, April 8th, breakfast at 9 a.m., worship at 10:30 a.m. and an egg hunt after worship. Worship services are on Sundays at 10:30 a.m. A nursery is provided. For further information, please call (708) 423-6554, between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Editor:

One of several issues I feel very strongly about is the need for the overpass on Central Ave. When the train is on Central cars make a U-turn and go down Cook Ave. and the surrounding streets. Many times residents cannot get out of their driveways. They do not deserve this. They are paying the highest taxes in Oak Lawn. I will come up with a plan for this traffic problem. One plan is to prohibit U-turns at this area. I also would like the light on Central and 107th St. to turn red when the train gates go down with no turn permitted when the light is red.

I will make sure there is increased police protection for all areas of Oak Lawn. We must be concerned for the safety of our citizens.

I will propose to install signs "watch out for children" because many times children run across the street and do not look to see if there are any cars in sight.

The old Dominick's at 111th and Cicero has not been in use too long. I will try to get some type of grocery store at that location because many seniors do not have cars and need a closer store to get food and medication.

I will have weekly office hours and monthly community meetings where I can find out what the problems are and solve these problems.

I want to make Oak Lawn a better place to live. It is time for a change. I can make this possible. I will work with everyone.

I will make sure tax dollars are spent wisely.

Treatment Is Available For Enlarged Prostate

As men age, it's not uncommon that they find they make more frequent trips to the bathroom-especially in the middle of the night. For most men, this inconvenience is often made worse by the need to push or strain while urinating. Some even encounter pain or burning while urinating.

While the majority of men over age 60 experience these symptoms, most are not aware of what causes them. Symptoms such as these may be signs of an enlarged prostate, one of the most common urological disorders affecting men over the age of 60. In fact, 60 percent of men over the age of 60 and up to 80 percent of men over the age of 80 have an enlarged prostate.

An enlarged prostate, or benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH), is not life threatening. It is not a form of prostate cancer, nor does it lead to prostate cancer. However, as many men know, it can cause significant discomfort, inconvenience and awkwardness. BPH symptoms differ depending on the severity of the condition. The most common symptoms include:

- Waking at night to urinate
- Frequent need to urinate (sometimes every two hours or less)
- Pain or burning during urination
- Repeated, sudden or uncontrollable urge to urinate
- Pushing or straining to begin urination
- Feeling like the bladder does not empty during urination
- Dribbling after urination

As a man ages, the chance of developing BPH increases. This is because of growth patterns associated with the prostate. After a male reaches the age of 40, a second round of prostate growth often occurs as a natural part of the aging process.

The prostate is a gland located just below the bladder whose main function is to produce fluid for semen. As it expands, it can squeeze and place pressure on the urethra, like a clamp on a garden hose, thus constricting urinary flow. As pressure builds and the "clamp" tightens, the result can be some of the commonly perceived BPH symptoms.

Although there is no known cure for BPH, there are medications and procedures available to reduce the symptoms. These range from prescription oral medications and surgical procedures to minimally invasive, office-based procedures that can provide rapid symptom relief.

If you think you or a loved one has BPH, you can visit www.understandbph.com or call, toll-free, (877) 274-2273 to learn more about the condition, find information on current treatment options and locate physicians who specialize in the treatment of BPH.

Mental Aerobics: A Key Part Of Avoiding Alzheimer's

According to the national Alzheimer's Association, an estimated 4.5 million Americans have Alzheimer's disease and another 10 to 20 million are at risk of developing the condition. Fortunately, it may be possible to improve memory function and stave off Alzheimer's with the help of a few simple training techniques.

One example is the "Look, Snap, Connect" method, which exercises the brain's memory:

- Look-A reminder to focus your attention on what needs to be remembered.
- Snap-Create a visual image or mental snapshot of what needs to be remembered.
- Connect-Connect the mental snapshots with a story to commit to memory.

"It's important to cross-train your brain by doing regular 'mental aerobics' to improve memory skills and stimulate the brain," says Gary Small, M.D., author of three best-selling books on the subject of memory and aging. "By keeping our minds sharp, we are more inclined to stay physically fit and lead the type of healthy lifestyle that will slow down the aging process."

Game Theory

Radica, a subsidiary of Mattel, recently introduced Brain Games, an innovative handheld game that features five "brain aerobics" based on Dr. Small's research. The game features a free play mode and training mode, and includes games such as Sequence, Flash Card, Thinkfast, Word Hunt and Recall. A scoring system allows players to track their brain-training progress.

"Doing simple mental aerobics like those found in Brain Games can significantly improve memory skills and stimulate the brain," says Dr. Small.

In addition to brain training, Dr. Small's research shows that a few simple steps can help enhance memory power and lower one's risk for Alzheimer's. These include:

- Learning an instrument or foreign language;
- Playing board games, doing crossword puzzles or taking up a new hobby;
- Maintaining a positive attitude and cultivating healthy relationships;
- Reducing stress and emotional clutter; and
- Following a healthy diet and exercise plan.

Check Your Feet

If you think dry, flaky skin on your feet is nothing to worry about, think again.

Dry skin can be more than a minor annoyance, especially for people with diabetes. Of the 16 million Americans with diabetes, 25 percent will develop clinical signs of xerosis, or extremely dry skin on the heels of their feet. One reason is that diabetes causes reduced perspiration, especially with the skin on the feet.

The skin on xerotic heels is perpetually prone to cracking and sealing. Thankfully, the most common of foot problems for diabetics can be remedied with a little extra care and attention.

Manage Your Diabetes: Make healthy lifestyle choices to help keep your blood glucose (sugar), blood pressure, and cholesterol close to normal. Doing so may help prevent or delay diabetes-related foot problems as well as eye and kidney disease.

Check Your Feet Every Day: You may have serious foot problems, but feel no pain. Check your feet for cuts, sores, red spots, swelling, and infected toenails. Find a time (evening is best) to check your feet each day. Make checking your feet part of your everyday routine.

Use Appropriate Products: Although most people apply body lotions to dry, cracked feet, these moisturizers are not designed for skin on feet, which is almost three to five times thicker than skin on the rest of the body. When it comes to treating diabetic skin, experts recommend using an intensive moisturizer to heal and protect skin.

One such moisturizer is dermatologist-recommended Eucerin Plus Intensive Repair Foot Creme, which is clinically proven to smooth and restore feet in just two weeks. With a unique combination of gentle exfoliators and effective moisturizers, it quickly helps heal rough skin and cracked heels.

Trim Your Toenails: An ingrown nail is not only unsightly, it can even make walking painful. Trim toenails straight across and smooth them with a nail file; do not cut into the corners of your toenails. Aside from improper trimming, a nail that curves too much or excessive pressure from tight shoes is usually to blame.

People with diabetes must be aware of how to prevent foot problems before they occur, to recognize problems early and to seek the right treatment when problems do occur. Although treatment for diabetic foot problems has improved, a little extra attention remains the best way to prevent problems.

Thank You To our doctors for dedicating your lives to the practice of medicine.

March 30, 2007 is National Doctor's Day

In honor of National Doctors' Day 2007, St. Francis Hospital in Blue Island would like to thank all of the men and women on its medical staff who have dedicated their lives to the practice of medicine. Your devotion to caring for the body, mind and spirit is gratefully appreciated by our hospital administration and staff, and the thousands of patients whose lives you've touched.

Thank you for making a difference in our lives and in the lives of your patients.

In honor of this day, we hope others will join us in letting their doctors know that their efforts truly make a difference in the lives of others.

Timely Tips For Family Caregivers

Many of us take for granted that we will be able to take care of our personal and financial affairs "tomorrow." However, if you are a family caregiver, particularly for an older adult, you know that you cannot always count on tomorrow.

Health and finances are two areas that may require caregivers to have the input and the legal authority to make decisions on behalf of another person. The issue may be as simple as signing a check for a loved one or as complex as deciding if he or she would want a feeding tube after becoming bedridden and nonresponsive.

Things You Should Know

The number of older adults in the U.S. continues to increase. There are an estimated 35 million people (13 percent of the population) who are over the age of 65, with the number expected to rise to 20 percent or more than 71.5 million Americans by the year 2030.

The increase in the older-adult population in the U.S. has given rise to the specialty of elder law attorneys that focus on the many legal issues specific to older adults. In addition to the many legal complexities, elder law attorneys have experience with older adults and appreciation for many of the physical and mental challenges associated with the aging process. Sources to consider when locating an elder law attorney include:

- The U.S. Administration on Aging, which sponsors statewide legal hotlines for those age 60 and over. To obtain the appropriate number, call (800) 677-1116.
- The state bar association.
- Patient representatives at any nearby hospital.
- National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys (NAELA) at www.naela.org or by phone at (520) 881-4005. Within the site is a search field to find an elder law attorney in your area.

Where There's A Will...

One important legal consideration is the creation of a will. A will is a legal document detailing how an individual wants his or her assets distributed upon death. If an individual dies without a will, called "dying intestate," the state will determine the distribution of assets. Individuals must be competent when their wills are drawn up and may make changes to them as long as they remain competent.

Work with your loved ones to inventory their assets, review outstanding debts, detail beneficiaries and identify any special desires they may have for particular items or monies.

Health Care Matters

As a caregiver, friend or child of an aging loved one, it is important that you know what his or her health care wishes might be should he or she become incapacitated-mentally or physically. To best carry out your loved one's wishes, you may encourage written documentation in the form of an advance directive. Advance directives are designed to convey an individual's wishes about his or her medical care to family and physicians at a time when he or she is otherwise unable to do so. There are two types of advance directives:

- Living Will-Details and records the care individuals do or do not wish to receive at a time when they are no longer able to speak for themselves.
- Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care-Also known as a "health care proxy," this document is usually prepared in addition to a living will. It allows you to appoint an individual, called an agent, attorney-in-fact or proxy, to make medical decisions for you if you are incapacitated and unable to do so.

Caregivers face many challenges as they search for information and make decisions about how best to provide care to their loved ones. One good source of information on legal considerations for older Americans is a free booklet from the MetLife Mature Market Institute called "Legal Matters." It is part of the "Since You Care" series of guides created in cooperation with the National Alliance for Caregiving. It includes information, resources and checklists. You can get a copy by calling (203) 221-6580, e-mailing maturemarketinstitute@metlife.com, visiting www.maturemarketinstitute.com or writing to MetLife Mature Market Institute, 57 Greens Farms Road, Westport, CT 06880.

Diabetic Neuropathy

Diabetic neuropathy (nerve damage) is a serious complication of diabetes that leads to sensations of pain and/or numbness, tingling or "pins and needles" in the feet and hands. Although the majority of people with diabetes experience symptoms associated with diabetic neuropathy, only a small minority have been diagnosed with this condition.

Nerves send messages to and from your brain about pain, temperature and touch. They tell your muscles when and how to move.

Left untreated, diabetic neuropathy can lead to foot injury, infections and even amputations.

Symptoms

Reporting symptoms to your health care provider is important. Place a check mark (✓) next to any symptom you have. Take this list to your next office visit.

- ☐ My feet tingle.
- ☐ I feel "pins and needles" in my feet.
- ☐ I have burning, stabbing or shooting pains in my feet.
- ☐ My feet are very sensitive to touch. For example, sometimes it hurts to have the bedcovers touch my feet.
- ☐ My feet hurt at night.
- ☐ My feet and hands get very cold or very hot.
- ☐ My feet are numb and feel dead.
- ☐ I don't feel pain in my feet, even when I have blisters or injuries.
- ☐ I can't feel my feet when I'm walking.
- ☐ The muscles in my feet and legs are weak.
- ☐ I'm unsteady when I stand or walk.
- ☐ I have trouble feeling heat or cold in my feet or hands.
- ☐ I have open sores (also called ulcers) on my feet and legs. These sores heal very slowly.
- ☐ It seems like the muscles and bones in my feet have changed shape.
- ☐ Other symptoms _____

Treatment

For information about treatments available to relieve pain and reduce burning, tingling and numbness, talk with your health care provider.

The Word
"Service"
Meant Something?

We remember when people took the time to serve others. Our family has been helping families here for many years. As our area has grown, we have grown too, with more specialized services, such as out-of-town arrangements, pre-arrangements, cremations and a grief recovery program.

Even though we have grown, our dedication to service is still the same as it was years ago.

Stroke Is Nation's Number Three Killer

Stroke is the nation's number three killer and the leading cause of long-term disability in the United States. More than 700,000 Americans will suffer a stroke this year. Yet many Americans do not know the symptoms or what to do when they witness someone having a stroke. The following information is provided to you by the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke (NINDS), part of the National Institutes of Health.

"Stroke is an unmistakable event. Few other medical conditions come on so suddenly or are so noticeable to a bystander," said John R. Marler, M.D., associate director for clinical trials at NINDS.

A stroke occurs when blood flow to the brain is interrupted. Brain cells die when deprived of oxygen and nutrients provided by blood. Because stroke injures the brain, if you are having a stroke, you may not realize what is happening. But to a bystander, the signs of a stroke are distinct:

- Sudden numbness or weakness of the face, arm or leg (especially on one side of the body);
- Sudden confusion, trouble speaking or understanding speech;
- Sudden trouble seeing in one or both eyes;
- Sudden trouble walking, dizziness, or loss of balance or coordination; and
- Sudden severe headache with no known cause.

In treating a stroke, every minute counts. New treatments are available that greatly reduce the damage caused by a stroke. But you need to arrive at the hospital as soon as possible after symptoms start. Knowing the symptoms of a stroke and getting to the hospital quickly can help you act in time to save yourself or someone you know from serious long-term disability.

And making changes in your lifestyle can help prevent stroke. NINDS is dedicated to research and education on the causes and treatments and prevention of stroke. Risk factors include family history, high blood pressure, smoking, diabetes, physical inactivity, heavy alcohol consumption, and being overweight. Talk to your doctor. Find out your risks and take action.

More information on stroke is available from NINDS. Order free materials by calling 1-800-352-9424 or by visiting www.ninds.nih.gov/stroke.

Keys To Healthy Aging

What is longevity without health? Adults today are looking not only to extend their lives, but to enjoy their extra years. Researchers at the University of Pittsburgh's Center for Healthy Aging simplified the barrage of health messages aimed at older adults to create the 10 Keys to Healthy Aging. The Center is promoting these sensible strategies for a long, healthy life among residents of Pittsburgh, and they hope to share them across the country. Allegheny County in western Pennsylvania has one of the highest concentrations of adults aged 65 years and older, second only to Dade County, Florida.

- Years of research yielded these keys:
- Prevent bone loss and muscle weakness
- Control blood pressure
- Increase physical activity
- Regulate blood sugar
- Stop smoking
- Maintain social contact
- Participate in screening for cancer
- Get regular immunizations
- Lower cholesterol
- Combat depression.

Dr. Constance Bayles, director of the center, says these strategies can help people take charge of their health and delay or prevent disease and injury as well as speed recovery time.

"Empowering older adults is one of our many missions," Dr. Bayles said.

While some keys seem basic, such as maintaining social contact, activity can become difficult as adults age and become less mobile, she said. Part of the center's work is to help seniors access resources for social contact, physical activity, transportation and other needs.

The Center for Healthy Aging is a Prevention Research Center (PRC) in a network of 33 academic centers, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention funds. Each PRC works closely with a local community to design effective interventions. Nine PRCs belong to a Healthy Aging Network that collaborates on the best ways to promote health for older adults and transform research results into sustainable community programs.

The University of Washington's Health Promotion Research Center (HPRC), for example, developed EnhanceFitness, a physical activity curriculum for older adults that improves flexibility and strength and is shown to reduce hospital visits by participants. The program is now offered at 92 sites in nine states. The HPRC also developed a counseling program that reduces minor depression in seniors.

For more information on PRC research, visit www.edc.gov/prc.

Medicare Paying For Preventive Aneurysm Screening

Hundreds of thousands of Americans who receive Medicare benefits now have access to an important tool for fighting vascular disease: a free abdominal aortic aneurysm (AAA) screening. AAA is a bulge in the wall of the aorta and exists in an estimated 2 million Americans. AAA rupture is one of the leading causes of death in the U.S. and an estimated 15,000 seniors die from AAA rupture each year. In 2007, for the first time, new Medicare beneficiaries at risk for AAA have the opportunity to be screened using painless and noninvasive ultrasound technology.

The Screening Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm Very Efficiently (SAAAVE) Act that was passed by Congress is effective as of January 1, 2007. This free AAA screening is available to men who have smoked at least 100 cigarettes at any time in their lives, and to men and women with a family history of AAA. This screening is part of the Welcome to Medicare physical.

"AAA screening is an important measure that will save thousands of American lives each year," said vascular surgeon Robert Zwolak, M.D., a member of the Society of Vascular Surgery (SVS) and a professor at Dartmouth Medical School. "Our SVS members worked diligently on SAAAVE. These vascular surgeons concentrate their practices on the prevention and cure of vascular disease, and they know the effectiveness of screening in saving lives."

All new Medicare beneficiaries are encouraged to call their doctors and take advantage of this improved access to the free AAA screening. The test is quick and painless, involving a simple ultrasound on the abdomen, similar to a pregnancy ultrasound. AAA often has no warning signs and therefore screening is an effective way to detect the presence of a potentially life-threatening aneurysm.

To learn more about AAA screening and reducing the risk of AAA disease, Medicare recipients should consult their physician or visit www.aneurx.com.

Americans Are Giving Retirement A Makeover

Will retirement be a makeover or a stopover for most Americans? Once regarded as an opportunity for the elderly to stop working and settle down, retirement now seems to signal an exciting new life chapter.

According to a new survey by AXA Equitable, Americans are giving retirement a makeover. Many respondents plan to stay active in retirement with travel and hobbies and some may even take a shot at that second career they've always dreamed about.

Many retirees get more active after they retire. Whether engaged in physical, intellectual or benevolent activities, retirees stay on their feet. Nearly 70 percent of American retirees exercise to stay healthy and 93 percent consider themselves quite or very happy.

More than a third spend retirement on travel, hobbies and special interests. American retirees travel more than their counterparts in other surveyed nations but rarely leave the country.

Around 20 percent are active in sports, volunteerism, gardening/ DIY projects and spending time with children and grandchildren.

Retirement travel is not as prevalent as workers hope. While nearly 60 percent of today's workers expect to travel frequently, only about 31 percent of retirees value travel as much.

A positive financial outlook may contribute to contentment and plans for activity and travel. About 70 percent of retirees are relying primarily on Social Security and pensions for income in retirement and believe that income will be sufficient to meet their needs. Even with all the recent attention it has received, 69 percent are not convinced the current Social Security system is in trouble.

Many plan to continue working past retirement-63 percent-but only 15 percent of retirees currently work for pay. Some retirees will take the opportunity to use their skills and experience to pursue the careers they always wanted. Some plan to continue to work because they are still able.

The global survey, called the Retirement Scope, was conducted for the second year in a row by AXA, a leader in financial advice and wealth management. More than 6,900 working and retired people in 11 countries were surveyed.

For more information about the survey or retirement planning, visit www.axaonline.com.

Tea Reduces Risk

An apple a day may keep the doctor away, but a recent study found drinking tea might keep the cardiologist at bay. The USDA reported that men and women who drank black tea for three weeks reduced their total and bad cholesterol (LDL) levels by an average of 7.5 percent. Researchers concluded that drinking tea may reduce the risk of coronary heart disease. Antioxidants called flavonoids, found in both green and black teas, are thought to be potent weapons in the fight against heart disease.

That news may be especially important for women, given that heart disease kills more women than all forms of cancer combined including breast cancer. A new fashion show called the Red Dress Collection (featured each Fashion Week in February) may help spread the word on tea and women's heart health. Co-Sponsored by Celestial Seasonings and The Heart Truth Campaign, it will showcase celebrities modeling red dresses created by the fashion industry's top designers.

For additional information visit www.celestialseasonings.com/reddress.

Uncover New Clues

The secrets to preventing or curing Alzheimer's disease (AD) are not yet known, but researchers are uncovering new clues all the time, raising hope that it may someday be possible to delay or prevent the disease.

Meanwhile, according to the National Institute on Aging's Alzheimer's Disease Education & Referral (ADEAR) Center, there are a few things people can do now that might reduce the effect of possible AD risk factors. The group offers a free booklet called "Genes, Lifestyles, and Crossword Puzzles: Can Alzheimer's Disease Be Prevented?" that provides the latest AD prevention research findings.

The 28-page booklet also explores potential prevention strategies, including lowering cholesterol and homocysteine levels, lowering high blood pressure levels, controlling diabetes, exercising regularly and engaging in intellectually stimulating activities.

To download or view the publication online, visit the Web site www.alzheimers.org. You can also order the booklet by calling (800) 438-4380.

Midlothian Pearle Vision Offers Optomap Exam

Pearle Vision in Midlothian is first to offer revolutionary modality for retinal disease detection to patients in the southwest suburbs.

Pearle Vision in Midlothian is the first eye care practice in the southwest suburbs to offer its patients the Optomap retinal exam (Optos North America). This revolutionary modality captures and analyzes an image of virtually the entire retina, for the early detection and management of eye disease. Since Optos first introduced the Optomap exam, nearly one million exams have been conducted worldwide, diagnosing serious eye conditions - such as diabetic retinopathy, retinal detachments and macular degeneration - that could have otherwise gone undetected and often progress without symptoms.

The Optomap retinal exam takes a computer-generated image of the retina, which can be immediately evaluated by Doctors Ronald and Deborah Cope at Pearle Vision, 14702 Cicero Ave. There is no pupil dilation, no eye drops, blurred vision or sensitivity to light. The Optomap retinal exam is a simple, quick and important way to maintain good eye health.

"The Optomap increases the quality of the retinal exam by allowing us to view almost the entire retina at the start of the exam, which can have important implications, not only for detecting eye disease, but also in detecting and managing other medical conditions such as diabetes," said Dr. Ron Cope. "We recommend all of our patients have this exam, which has already detected issues in some of our patients which could have otherwise gone undetected."

About Optos

The Optos modality was developed as a patient-friendly examination tool by Douglas Anderson, founder and vice-chairman, Optos, after his son Leif lost the use of an eye when a retinal detachment was detected too late. It incorporates the latest in scanning laser ophthalmoscope (SLO) technology, using low-powered red-green laser beams to capture an image of virtually the entire retina on an "Optomap," a permanent digital record that gives clinicians a view of the retina that is unprecedented with prior technologies.

Since the Optomap Retinal Exam's inception in 1999, millions of exams have been conducted world wide, aiding in the detection and diagnosis of serious eye conditions such as diabetic retinopathy, retinal detachments, macular degeneration, and other pathologies like melanomas.

Seniors Can Make A Difference

America's seniors are a vital resource that can positively affect communities today through volunteerism.

Seniors volunteer for many different reasons. Some seek an opportunity to "give back" to their communities, while others hope to form new friendships. Whatever the reason, seniors can make a difference in their communities by volunteering their time and knowledge.

"Seniors have a wealth of practical experience, from business and academic knowledge, to home repair and economic skills," said Scott Perry, executive vice president and COO of Bankers Life and Casualty Company in Chicago, an insurance company that specializes in the senior market. "Everyone can benefit from seniors who volunteer in their communities, and organizations are reaching out to this valuable resource."

To find a volunteer opportunity that's right for you, start where you live. Look for organizations in your own neighborhood. Consider churches and local charities that provide services to your own friends and neighbors. Web sites such as www.1-800-VOLUNTEER.org can connect you with volunteer opportunities and contact information for each organization.

Some national organizations that need volunteer help:

- Alzheimer's Association-The Alzheimer's Association is committed to winning the fight against Alzheimer's disease, and they rely on 35,000 volunteers nationwide to support this important work. Volunteers are needed to develop and implement programs, and help with special events at the local chapter level. You can get involved by contacting your local chapter of the Alzheimer's Association.
- Meals on Wheels-The Meals on Wheels Association of America (MOWAA) is a national organization supporting programs that provide meal services to people in need. For homebound seniors in communities across the country, Meals on Wheels delivers a hot meal and an essential connection to the outside world. Volunteers are needed for various services, and needs vary from program to program. To learn more, contact the Meals on Wheels program in your community or visit the Meals on Wheels Web site at www.mowaa.org.
- Senior Corps-This nationwide program connects seniors with the organizations and people that need them the most, such as the Foster Grandparent Program, the Senior Companion Program, and the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP). Visit their Web site at www.seniorcorps.org.

Bankers Life and Casualty Company, a national life and health insurer specializing in the insurance needs of seniors, encourages seniors to volunteer in their local communities. To read more articles with tips for seniors, go to www.Bankers.com and click on "Senior Resources."

Fraud Alert: A New Tool To Protect Your Credit

There's good news for anyone who worries that their financial information has fallen into the wrong hands. Consumers now have a new tool at their disposal; they can place a "Fraud Alert" on their credit file.

Fraud Alerts help prevent anyone from opening new accounts in your name. They act as a red flag on your credit report, visible only when businesses access your file to possibly extend you credit. To place an alert on your account, call one of the three credit reporting agencies and ask them to flag your credit file for fraud. Within 24 hours, an alert will be attached to your credit file and your name will be removed from pre-approved credit and insurance applications for two years.

Types Of Fraud Alerts

An "Initial Alert" will be active on your credit report for 90 days. Use this if someone has gained access to personal information that could be used to open accounts in your name, such as your Social Security number or your date of birth. Once an initial alert is in place, potential creditors will need to verify your identification prior to extending credit, so you should provide them with a phone number where you can be easily reached. The alert will help to ensure that you are the only one opening accounts in your name.

An "Extended Alert" is recommended if your identity has been stolen. With an extended alert, your credit file will remain guarded for seven years. In addition, your name will be removed from lists marketing prescreened credit offers for five years. In order to qualify for an extended fraud alert, you will need to provide proof of identity theft, such as a police report.

Active duty members of the military are eligible for a "Military Fraud Alert." This alert allows members of the military on active duty to prevent anyone from opening accounts in their name while they are overseas.

Helpful Hints

- Experian, Equifax and Trans-Union (the three credit-reporting agencies) share data, so after calling one company, the other two will be notified.
- If you need to apply for a loan during the period that your credit file is on alert, notify your lender.
- To remove a fraud alert, you will need to send requests in writing to one of the three credit-reporting agencies.

Update The Medicine Cabinet

Experts say there's one area of the home that's often neglected when it's time for a major updating-the home medicine cabinet. Yet with more than 300,000 over-the-counter medicines available, how do you know what should be in your medicine cabinet and what shouldn't?

Dr. Donnica Moore, a leading women's health expert, columnist and TV personality, offers the following tips on what to have on hand and how to organize your in-home pharmacy so what you need is readily available when you need it.

"The most effective way to tackle the task is to take inventory. Assess what's already there and then make a list of over-the-counter medications and other supplies that should be in your medicine cabinet," advises Dr. Moore.

Some common medications you should have on-hand include:

- Headache/pain/fever medicines: Depending on the ages and specific needs of your family members, you may need to stock several different types of pain relief medicines.
- Aspirin, for example, is considered one of the most universal products: it reduces fever, pain and inflammation; can be taken by many people daily to reduce the risk of heart attack or certain types of stroke; and is even given in emergency situations when someone is having a heart attack. However, aspirin is not recommended for children under the age of 12 without medical supervision or in the last trimester of pregnancy, so acetaminophen (Tylenol) may be needed as well. It's always wise to check with a physician when taking aspirin on a regular basis, particularly if there are heart concerns.
- Cough/cold/flu symptom products: There are actually five different categories of ingredients, including decongestant, cough suppressant, expectorant, antihistamine, and fever/pain reducers. Throat lozenges and mouthwash are also helpful to have on hand.

- Allergy products: These are helpful for allergic reactions of the skin, including those from insect bites or the treatment of certain recurrent skin conditions such as eczema. Stock generic hydrocortisone cream 1 percent (a steroid) or an antihistamine cream (e.g., Benadryl or diphenhydramine cream).
- Products for stomach upset or constipation-related problems: Choose a brand you've had experience with and keep it on hand. Many products in this category will help with more than one type of problem. For example, some products for indigestion also help with nausea or diarrhea as well as calcium supplementation. If constipation is a problem for adult family members, keep a gentle stimulant-laxative on hand such as Dulcolax.
- Antibiotic creams and ointments. For minor cuts, scrapes and burns, keep an antibiotic cream or ointment such as Bacitracin on hand.
- Dr. Moore also advises making a periodic clean sweep of your medicine cabinet and its contents. "Medicine cabinets can become a haven for expired medicines and half-empty bottles of shampoo," she notes. So it's important to stay organized so you know what medications and supplies need to be replenished.

Dr. Moore suggests throwing out medicines that have passed their expiration date-even if an entire bottle remains; tossing "left-over" prescription medications from previous illnesses; keeping all medicines-prescription and OTC-out of the reach of children; and storing all medicines according to package directions.

For more information concerning medicine cabinet essentials, Dr. Moore recommends talking to your family physician or pediatrician www.DrDonnica.com.

How Old Is Too Old To Drive?

Driving has long been a family affair. Be it family road trips, the infamous "backseat driver" in the family or teaching a teen how to drive, driving is a hot topic for families. What's more, families also play an important role in encouraging safe driving practices among their older loved ones.

"Families nationwide are dealing with the sensitive issue of older driver safety," says Elinor Ginzler, AARP's Director of Livable Communities and an authority on older driver safety. "AARP encourages families to talk openly with loved ones about safe driving practices. Older drivers trust the advice of family—be it spouse or children—when it comes to their well-being."

Today, about one in seven drivers is age 65 or older. This figure is expected to rise significantly in the years ahead, increasing the need for safe driving practices. By the time the last baby boomers turn 65, in 2029, about one in four drivers will be age 65 or older. Older drivers face different challenges on the road than do their younger counterparts. Age-related changes—such as impaired vision and slower reflexes and response time—can affect their driving skills.

Older drivers may be able to maintain safe driving skills as well as extend their driving years by:

Conducting regular self-assessment of driving capacities

Attending a driver-refresher course

Recognizing and addressing vision changes

Maintaining quick reflexes and flexibility by staying physically active

Therapeutic interventions from certified driving rehabilitation specialists.

However, if older drivers continue to experience a decline in driving abilities, it might be time for them to consider limiting driving or hanging up the keys altogether. If you or a loved one experiences any of the following signs, it might be time to talk about safe driving practices and transportation alternatives:

Frequent "close calls" (i.e., near accidents)

Dents or scrapes on the car or on fences, mailboxes, garage doors, curbs, etc.

Trouble judging gaps in traffic at intersections and on highway entrance/exit ramps

Getting lost

Difficulty seeing the sides of the road when looking straight ahead

Slower response time; trouble moving foot from gas to brake pedal or confusing the two pedals

Getting distracted easily or having trouble concentrating

Difficulty turning around to check over the shoulder while backing up or changing lanes

Frequent traffic tickets or "warnings" by traffic or law enforcement officers in the last year or two.

"Although most older drivers believe that they should be the one to make the final decision about driving, they also agree that their physician should advise them," says Dr. Carl Soderstrom, Director of the Driver Safety Research Program for the Maryland Motor Vehicle Administration. "By providing evaluations about medical fitness to drive, clinicians can help their patients make informed and wise decisions, or become familiar with mobility alternatives in their community."

If you are concerned about a loved one's driving, start a conversation about driving that's based on your observations. It's also important that they understand you're broaching the topic out of sincere concern for their well-being. In recommending driving solutions, offer various options depending on the degree of impairment. For example, suggest that they limit driving to certain times of the day or familiar areas. Additionally, encourage them to gradually begin using alternative transportation, including rides from family and friends, taxis or public transportation.

To help drivers refresh their skills, AARP offers a classroom course, as well as an online driver's safety course, that teaches safe driving strategies to address age-related changes that affect one's driving ability.

To learn more about older driver safety, visit www.aarp.org/families/driver_safety/ or call (888) 227-7669 toll free.

Alzheimer's Disease And Long-Term Care

With the aging of the U.S. population, Alzheimer's disease is estimated to affect 4.5 million Americans by 2010. This means, in the near future, many families will have to face difficult decisions about long-term care for their loved ones with the disease.

What are some important things families should consider before placing a loved one in a nursing home or assisted living facility? Here, from Lynn Heup, MSN, GNP, RN, a nurse practitioner with extensive experience caring for patients with Alzheimer's disease in the long-term care setting, are a few answers.

Q: How do you know when it's time to place a loved one with Alzheimer's into a long-term care setting?

When there is no other alternative to meet the physical, medical, cognitive, social, emotional, safety, and/or financial needs of your loved one within your own home. Common factors that precipitate placement include functional and cognitive impairment and/or decline, multiple medical comorbidities, recent hospitalization, and any event or decline that requires closer medical supervision and safety monitoring. Each family has to weigh all the variables, but it's important for them to know that they do have options.

Q: What should you look for in a nursing home?

Examine the systems the facility has in place to ensure the safety of its residents. Inquire as to whether staff has been trained to care for geriatric patients and their needs. Ask about the staff-to-patient ratio for all shifts, including the weekend. Make sure the facility is clean, and that doctors visit patients with appropriate frequency and are available to answer your questions.

Q: Should I look for a facility with a dementia care unit?

I suggest you look for a facility that has either a dementia care unit or a clear understanding of the specific needs of someone with dementia.

Q: What type of support should one expect to get from the staff at a long-term care facility?

Staff should be respectful and empathetic to the family and the patient. This means allowing residents to make as many decisions for themselves as possible and listening to their concerns and responding appropriately. Staff should give the patients as much privacy as possible, and should consistently be assigned to the same patients in order to build relationships with them. Overall, it's important for the staff, family and entire healthcare team to work together to reach the patient's goals.

Q: Is it inevitable that dementia patients in a long-term care setting will show behavioral symptoms? Are there treatments that can help?

Many patients with moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease have behavioral issues, which are often the result of unmet needs, such as frustration from being unable to communicate. Interventions include: decreasing or eliminating stimuli that precipitate agitation and aggression, such as changing a resident's schedule, activities, room or unit; music therapy; and family interaction. Prescription medications may also help.

A study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) found that treatment with Namenda (memantine HCl), the first and only NMDA (N-methyl-D-aspartate) receptor antagonist indicated for the treatment of moderate to severe Alzheimer's disease, along with a cholinesterase inhibitor, provides greater cognitive, functional and behavioral benefits to people with moderate to severe Alzheimer's than treatment with donepezil plus placebo. An in-depth behavioral analysis of the JAMA study found that, in patients maintained on stable therapy with a cholinesterase inhibitor, treatment with Namenda was associated with improvement in behavior, such as agitation, irritability, and appetite changes, compared to patients receiving a placebo.

Namenda is available by prescription in the U.S. For more information, ask your doctor about Namenda or visit www.namenda.com. Individual results may vary by patient.

Namenda (memantine HCl) is contraindicated in patients with known hypersensitivity to memantine HCl or any excipients used in the formulation. The most common adverse events reported with Namenda vs placebo (>5% and higher than placebo) were dizziness, confusion, headache, and constipation. In patients with severe renal impairment, the dosage should be reduced.

Two Riders Go The Distance To Find The Cure For Diabetes

The fight against diabetes means something different for everyone—and for some, it means discovering the joy of cycling.

These reasons inspired riders Tom Leonard of Indiana and Eileen Nunley of Maine.

Together, along with 32,000 other cyclists, Leonard and Nunley took part in an event that provides more than a trophy at the finish line. Their finish line has a future goal in finding a cure—a cure for a disease that impacts nearly 21 million children and adults and is the fifth-leading cause of death by disease in the United States.

Leonard nearly became one of those statistics. Because of a condition known as empty sella syndrome, he gained a massive amount of weight. At 581 pounds, he relied on oxygen because of his body mass and was confined to a wheelchair because he was unable to walk far. He developed type 2 diabetes and recalls feeling as if he were "stuck in this body that was more or less dying." Leonard knew he had to act, and he chose to start living. He underwent bariatric surgery and added exercise to his life.

During his recovery, Leonard rediscovered his joy of cycling, which he credits as helping manage his weight loss and diabetes. His joy of cycling led him to participate in the ADA's Tour de Cure cycling event.

In addition to being an avid cyclist, Leonard is also a Tour de Cure team captain and plans to ride 62 miles in support of the association. As Tom says, "This is a cause that directly affects my life."

After losing nearly 350 pounds, Leonard is in control of his diabetes. He no longer requires oxygen or any cardiac or blood pressure medication.

Not all reasons to ride are driven by the health of the individual rider. Eileen Nunley participates in the Tour de Cure, which raises money toward finding a cure for the same disease that took the life of her father.

Nunley's father had been living with type 2 diabetes for 10 years, suffering from complications such as poor eyesight and congestive heart failure.

In 1996, she met a co-worker who was participating in ADA's Tour de Cure in Kennebunk, Maine. She was invited to join her co-worker's team and was happy to ride as a way of honoring the life of her father.

Nunley not only rides in the Kennebunk Tour de Cure, but she has expanded her efforts and travels to participate in the Mount Desert Island (Maine) ride as well. She explains that "the ride has become a special, annual connection to my father." She has recruited other family members to participate in the ride to help find a cure.

In 2006, as team captain for teams in both the Kennebunk and Mount Desert Island rides, Nunley recruited over 30 riders. Together, her teams have raised over $6,000 for the American Diabetes Association.

The Tour de Cure is a ride, not a race, that welcomes people of all experience levels to participate in a fun event to raise awareness about diabetes. Participants form teams, raise money and ride in an event with distances ranging from a few miles to challenging 100-mile "century" rides.

The 2007 Tour de Cure is sponsored by Gold's Gym, Performance Bicycles, LeMond Fitness, Discovery Health Channel and LeMond Racing Cycles—the official bicycle of the Tour de Cure. Getting The Most From Retirement Funds

If you're about to retire, here's some good news and bad news. At least 10 percent of the people who reach age 67 will live to 95! (National Vital Statistics Vol. 52, No. 14, February 18, 2004) Good news indeed, but it also means stretching your precious retirement savings a lot longer.

Here's some advice you can bank on about getting the most from your retirement funds. The first step is speaking to a professional trained in the financial issues that impact you, the retiree. In many cases this will mean speaking to a Certified Retirement Financial Advisor (CRFA™), a professional who will be able to advise you on these important retirement issues:

- How to reduce or eliminate tax on your Social Security income.
- How to harvest your assets to make them last the longest.
- The scientific way to divide your investments to make sure your money outlasts you.
- Long-term care or Medicaid? How these work for financing health care in later years.
- Managing your IRA-why leaving your IRA to your children could turn out to be the opposite of what you hope to accomplish.
- Reverse mortgages-how do they work and can they give you extra income for a comfortable lifestyle?
- How to protect your assets from liability, taxes and catastrophe.
- Why estate planning is critical to everyone no matter your level of assets-don't create needless heartache for heirs.

CRFA™ graduates are experienced financial advisors who take the additional four-day training in specific retiree financial issues. Then, they must pass a four-hour, closed-book exam and complete 15 hours of continuing education annually in financial issues specific to retirees to maintain their competence.

A survey of over 10,000 retirees ranked these three issues of top importance in selecting a financial advisor: 1) Years of experience the advisor has; 2) Whether the advisor is a specialist in retirement issues; and 3) Whether the advisor has credentials from specialized training. To find someone with all three, visit www.retirement-financial-advisor.com.

Technology Drives Vehicle Repairs

Whether they're on the road to retirement or already living on easy street, America's seniors depend on their cars and trucks. Yet trend watchers say many seniors may soon lose the right to decide where to have their vehicles repaired.

Instead, they will have to take their cars, trucks and SUVs to expensive car dealerships to have repairs done. Opponents of this car dealer monopoly say that it would raise the repair costs for seniors by 20 to 40 percent, and would force them to go to mechanics they would rather not do business with. Fortunately, a bill in Congress would help. Called H.R. 2048, it would guarantee all Americans the "Right to Repair" their own cars or to choose their own mechanics.

Technology Drives Repairs

Federal laws and new technologies have resulted in vehicles being more computerized. As a result, increased levels of technology and information are required for maintenance and repairs.

While the automakers make all of this critical repair data available to car dealers, they limit its availability to the independent technicians.

If carmakers refuse to share all of their information, many, if not all, of the 147,000 independent repair shops could go out of business, including up to 50 percent of the American Automobile Association's approximately 7,500 AAA-Approved Auto Repair Shops.

According to RetireSafe, a national organization that represents over 367,000 seniors, the loss of independent repair shops would be devastating for seniors. In addition to a significant rise in repair bills, seniors may be forced to find new mechanics-many of whom may be difficult to physically get to, and some of whom may not provide the customer service seniors might have grown accustomed to.

RetireSafe warns that a lack of fair competition between repair shops could ultimately cost seniors the vehicles they depend on.

If you would like to have additional information, please feel free to visit www.RetireSafe.org.

If You Snooze You Lose When Planning Retirement

When it comes to retirement planning, if you snooze, you lose-in more ways than one. If the debate over Social Security reform has made anything clear, it's that each individual is responsible for planning his or her own retirement-and that means investing enough money to make a difference and paying attention to what's happening to your money once it's invested.

Avoid paralysis by analysis

Sitting on the sidelines and thinking about increasing your contribution to your retirement plan is not the same as doing it. Plus during all the time you are thinking and not acting, you may be missing out on the potential benefits of long-term compounding.

Let's assume you earn $30,000 a year and defer 5 percent of your salary, for a contribution of $1,500 a year to your retirement plan. If you earned 8 percent a year on that investment, you could have $177,202 after 30 years. Not bad.

While $177,202 is a sizeable sum, look at what you could accomplish if you had doubled the contribution. Using the same assumptions for an extra $1,500 a year for 30 years, you could accumulate a total of $354,404.

However, waiting 10 years to double your contributions could result in missing out on $105,619 in accumulated contributions and compounded earnings, based on the assumed 8 percent annual return. Taking action today is in an investor's best interest over the long term.

Be a vigilant investor

Your investment time horizon (how long you expect to keep the money invested) is an important factor when deciding how much money to place in stock, bond and money market funds.

There are no guarantees, but exposure to a moderate mix of stocks, bonds and cash would make sense for most long-term investors. Remember, when it comes to investing, you can't just set it and forget it. It's important to periodically evaluate the mix of investments in your portfolio to make sure you are getting the desired return.

The experts at Diversified Investment Advisors caution that the value of an investment will fluctuate with market conditions. As such, you should consider your ability to continue investing during periods of low price levels. It's important to note, however, that regular investing does not guarantee a profit or protect against a loss in a declining market.

Back Pain Treatment Tips Available

At some point, back pain affects an estimated 8 out of 10 people. It is one of our society's most common medical problems.

A number of factors can increase your risk for back pain. They include:

Age: Back pain becomes more common with age.

Fitness level: Back pain is more common among people who are not physically fit.

Diet: A diet high in calories and fat can lead to obesity, which can put stress on the back.

Heredity: Some causes of back pain, including disc disease, may have a genetic component.

The National Institute of Arthritis and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases funds research to better understand and treat back pain. It recently produced a booklet, "Handout On Health: Back Pain," which offers information and treatment tips.

Why And How To Talk To Your Loved Ones About Aging Issues

The U.S. senior population is growing and expected to double over the next 25 years. Currently, over 12 percent of Americans are senior citizens and, by the year 2011, the first wave of the baby boomer generation will begin turning 65. As America ages, increasing numbers of seniors and their adult children will face critical decisions about life, health and aging.

A new nationwide survey, commissioned by WellPoint and conducted by the Roper Public Affairs and Media Group, found a notable disconnect between seniors and their adult children on critical health and aging issues such as losing independence, long-term care options and being alone. The survey found that:

Adult children believe their senior parents worry more about aging issues than they actually do:

Seniors are comfortable talking about important aging issues but don't do so often:

Each generation is waiting for the other to start the conversation: and Medicare is a big area of confusion for adult children of senior parents.

To meet the needs of the growing and diverse senior population, WellPoint, the nation's largest health benefits company, has launched a new long-term educational initiative-Connecting the Generations-to help seniors and their families facilitate conversations about important health and aging issues and proactively plan for the future. Connecting the Generations is designed to provide valuable education and support to help fill the "gaps" in information between seniors and other generations-to ultimately create a community at large that is more informed, engaged and equipped to address important aging issues.

Starting The Conversation

According to the Roper Survey, 60 percent of adult children say they talk regularly to their senior parents about health matters-yet only 32 percent of seniors report discussing health topics regularly with their kids.

"Talking regularly about important issues related to aging, health, living independently and financial security can be a positive experience," said Dr. Edward Schneider, Dean Emeritus of the Leonard Davis School of Gerontology at the University of Southern California.

"For seniors, engaging in these conversations helps assure them that they have a proactive plan for the future. For adult children, discussing important life issues can offer peace of mind, knowing they have the necessary information to help their parents as needed."

The Time Is Now

The 2006 Medicare enrollment period provides an excellent opportunity to broaden the conversation about aging. WellPoint's Connecting the Generations program recommends the following tips to help you start the conversation:

Get the ball rolling by sending a quick note or e-mail, making a phone call or just mentioning that there are issues that you've been thinking about.

Next, arrange to meet in person, if you can. Choose a time and place where everyone can focus on the conversation.

Before meeting, make a checklist of the topics you'd like to discuss and, if appropriate, share it with the other person as the conversation starter-or use the Connecting the Generations checklist as a starting point.

Prior to the meeting, siblings should reach a consensus on goals. Don't feel the need to cover all the topics in one discussion; it may take a few conversations.

Ideally, families want to have a health plan in place before health problems arise. For seniors, this means talking to your loved ones about your current health situation and providing them with the important information they will need to help you in the future.

How active and engaged you are in life can make a tremendous difference in how you age and your overall quality of life. For seniors, it's important to make sure you're keeping both physically and mentally fit. For adult children, you can do a lot to help and encourage your parents to live well.

Helpful Information

Connecting the Generations includes tools and resources for seniors and their families, including the "Connecting the Generations Conversation Guide"-a 24-page booklet with tips and information for initiating conversations on critical health and aging issues, with practical checklists for future planning. To learn more or to receive a free copy of the booklet, call (866) 406-0984 or visit the Web site at www.ConnectingtheGenerations.org.

New Medicare Recipients Can Protect Themselves From Fatal Diseases

New Medicare recipients can protect themselves from a serious, often fatal disease by being screened for Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm (AAA) before it ruptures.

AAA is an enlargement that develops in weakened areas in the body's largest artery. The enlargement occurs slowly, over several years, with no symptoms. Most people are unaware of their AAA until it becomes large enough to rupture. Rupture causes sudden, severe pain, and death occurs in most people before they can reach a hospital.

Beginning in 2007, a free, one-time, ultrasound AAA screening will be available for at-risk Medicare beneficiaries during their Welcome to Medicare physical. At risk are men who have smoked sometime during their lives and men and women with a family history of AAA. If AAA is detected, patients should consult with a vascular surgeon. Treatment options include medical management with close follow-up for small AAAs and minimally invasive endovascular procedures, or open surgery, for larger aneurysms.

For additional information or to find a vascular surgeon, visit www.VascularWeb.org or call (877) 282-2010.

Defendants, 06 CH 16307 NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE SALE - CONDOMINIUM Fisher and Shapiro file #06-7398D. (It is advised that interested parties consult with their own attorneys before bidding at mortgage foreclosure sales.)

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure entered on February 27, 2007, Kallen Realty Services, Inc., as Selling Official will at 12:30 p.m. on April 20, 2007, at 205 W. Randolph Street, Suite 1200, Chicago, Illinois, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, as set forth below, the following described real property: Commonly known as: 6440 PAMELA LANE UNIT 5, CHICAGO RIDGE, IL 60415. TAX ID# 24-18-218-093-1053. The mortgaged real estate is improved with a dwelling. The property will NOT be open for inspection. The purchaser of the unit other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by 765 ILCS 605.9(g)(1) and (g)(4).

The judgment amount was $95,813.09. Sale terms: 10% of successful bid immediately at conclusion of auction, balance by noon the next business day, both by cashier's checks; and no refunds. The sale shall be subject to general real estate taxes, special taxes, special assessments, special taxes levied, and superior liens, if any. The property is offered "as is," with no express or implied warranties and without any representation as to the quality of title or recourse to Plaintiff. Prospective bidders are admonished to review the court file to verify all information.

For information: Sale Clerk, Fisher and Shapiro, 4201 Lake Cook Rd., 1st floor, Northbrook, Illinois 60062, (847) 498-9990, between 1:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. weekdays only 12859.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS COUNTY DEPARTMENT - CHANCERY DIVISION WMC MORTGAGE CORPORATION AS OWNER AND HOLDER OF THE MORTGAGE LOANS Plaintiff vs. YUSUF AHMAD, et al. Defendants 06 CH 21182 NOTICE OF SALE.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale entered in the above cause on December 13, 2006, an agent of The Judicial Sales Corporation will at 10:30 AM on May 1, 2007, at the office of The Judicial Sales Corporation, One South Wacker Drive, 24th Floor, CHICAGO, IL 60606, sell at public auction to the highest bidder as set forth below the following described real estate: Commonly known as 3544 W. 76TH STREET, Chicago, IL 60652. Understanding Credit Scoring

There's a lot of confusion around credit reports and credit scores - what they're used for, how they're calculated and why they're so important if you want to buy a car or house. Lenders, insurers and even employers review your credit history to decide if you're a worthwhile risk, so here's some background information that may help demystify the whole credit scoring process:

Credit bureaus. There are three major credit bureaus: Equifax www.equifax.com, Experian www.experian.com and TransUnion www.transunion.com. Each tracks how many and what types of credit cards and loans you have, how long your accounts have been open and whether you've paid your bills on time.

Credit report. Upon request from you or a potential lender, a credit bureau will compile a credit report - basically a snapshot of your credit history at that moment. You can order one free credit report a year from each of the three bureaus. (Order through www.annualcreditreport.com; otherwise you'll pay a small fee.) They are required by law to investigate any disputed item and correct inaccuracies.

It's wise to order a free report from one of the bureaus every four months; that way, you'll keep regular, year-round tabs on what's being reported about you. Another tip: If you're planning to borrow to make a major purchase, order your credit reports beforehand so you'll know what lenders will see about your credit history.

It's vital to know what's in your credit reports so you can spot fraudulent activity or errors before they damage your credit standing. For more information on what to do if you suspect identity fraud, go to Practical Money Skills for Life, a free personal financial management site sponsored by Visa USA www.practicalmoney skills.com/security.

Credit scores. Credit bureaus use information in your credit report to create a three-digit credit score. The higher your score, the better your credit rating is. The most commonly used credit scores are called FICO scores, named for Fair Isaac Corporation (FICO), which developed the proprietary software.

Five factors are used to determine your FICO score: payment history, amount owed, length of credit history, newly opened credit accounts, and types of credit used. Scores take into consideration information in all five categories, both positive and negative, but may weigh them differently depending on your individual circumstances.

When you apply for credit or a loan, lenders evaluate one or more of these bureaus' scores along with their own criteria (which may include income, length of employment or other factors), to determine if you are a worthy credit risk. Your overall credit score may affect not only whether or not you get the loan, but also the amount, term length and interest rate.

The differences between excellent, good, fair and poor credit scores can really add up. For example, someone with a top-notch FICO credit score - say above 720 - might qualify for a mortgage rate one or more percentage points lower than someone with poor credit. For a typical 30-year, $200,000 mortgage, this could add up to an extra $50,000 in interest payments over the life of the loan.

If you would like to have more information on how credit reports and credit scores work - and to purchase a copy of your score - go to www.myfico.com. Remember, it's always a good idea to know what's in your reports ahead of time so you can correct errors before they harm your credit rating.

Search And Rescue Team

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) recently met with Dept. of Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff to ask him to consider Chicago's eligibility for a federally funded search and rescue team. Durbin also discussed the impact of the fiscal year 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats.

"Chicago is the third largest city in the country, yet year after year, we are not included in the 28 cities that receive federal funds for urban search and rescue teams. The State of Illinois has done a tremendous job in funding its own urban search and rescue team, but I expressed my frustration to Secretary Chertoff over the lack of federal support," said Durbin. "Our state deserves to have federal help in fielding these trained and equipped urban search and rescue teams when local resources are overwhelmed."

Currently, there are 28 FEMA-certified urban search and rescue teams that operate as a disaster response task force. The teams operate around the clock, and include engineers, medics and other technical experts, specially trained search dogs and an average of $4.5 million of equipment. The State currently spends approximately $1 million for training each year and has spent $3 million in equipment over the last couple of years in funding its own urban search and rescue team.

In the meeting, Durbin also expressed serious concerns about the impact of the President's FY 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats. The budget the President presented to Congress recently cuts funding for state and local law enforcement assistance by $1.3 billion, dramatically decreases funding for FIRE grants and eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program.

Durbin also raised concerns that the President's budget reduces funding for the FIRE program which provides equipment and training to fire departments in Illinois and across the country to help them prepare and respond to terrorist incidents. Last year, in Illinois, over $13.6 million was awarded to IL fire departments.

The President's budget completely eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program, which provides funding to fire departments to hire additional firefighters and first responders. Last year, $4.4 million was awarded to Illinois fire departments for hiring/recruiting additional firefighters.

No-Interest Loans Available

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich announced $1.9 million in no-interest loans to help fire departments and fire protection districts purchase much-needed fire trucks. This is the second phase of a loan program that has already helped 63 fire departments obtain new fire trucks.

The Fire Truck Revolving Loan Program, administered by the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM), provides no-interest, 20-year loans to local fire departments and fire protection districts for the purchase of fire trucks. The maximum loan award is $250,000. The loan program was created by legislation signed by Gov. Blagojevich in 2003.

Applications for the loans are available on the OSFM website at www.state.il.us/osfm. The agency also will mail applications to each fire department in Illinois. Applications will be accepted from Feb. 1 through April 15. A nine-member review committee comprising representatives of the banking industry and the fire services will review the applications. Loans will be awarded on the basis of need.

In August 2004, 63 fire departments were selected to receive the initial revolving loans. Payments on those loans go into the revolving loan fund, and will be used for this second round of loans.

Air Quality Report

Air quality in Illinois was either good or moderate 90 percent of the time throughout Illinois in 2005, according to the 35th Annual Air Quality Report, released by the Illinois EPA.

While this is a decrease from the air quality numbers in 2004, it is consistent with the air quality trends the state has experienced in the past. Air quality trends still show air pollution levels well below the standards on a statewide basis.

In 2005, Illinois as well as other Midwestern and Northeastern states experienced one of the most unusual air quality episodes in recent history. For the first time in Illinois, Air Pollution Action Days were called outside of the ozone season, May through September, with three action days being called in February due to elevated levels of fine particulate matter. Scientists determined that a combination of a stagnating regional air mass and combustion of winter fuels region-wide was the main cause of this incident.

This unusual episode provided the Illinois EPA with the opportunity to thoroughly discuss fine particulate matter, which led to additional public education about the causes and health concerns of this pollutant.

"While annual trends show the statewide levels of pollutants well below the federal standards, there are still some areas in Illinois where improvement is still needed," said Illinois EPA Director Doug Scott. "The Illinois EPA continues its commitment to improve air quality throughout the state and the region."

Cold Weather Killer

Each year, nearly 5,000 people in the United States are treated in hospital emergency rooms for carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning. This number is, however, believed to be an underestimate of those poisoned because many people exhibiting the symptoms of CO poisoning mistake these symptoms for the flu or are misdiagnosed.

CO poisoning can kill without warning, as your family sleeps. CO gas has no warning properties - you can't smell it, see it, or taste it - even at harmful or life threatening levels. And, since so many deaths occur as the result of defective or poorly operated home heating devices, CO has been termed the "silent cold weather killer."

CO is a colorless, odorless, toxic gas. It is produced by the incomplete combustion of solid, liquid, and gaseous fuels. Appliances fueled with gas, oil, kerosene, or wood may produce CO. If such appliances are not installed, maintained, and used properly, CO may accumulate to dangerous and even fatal levels in cars, homes, or poorly ventilated areas like basements.

CO is produced when fuels are burned, therefore, any fuel-burning appliance in your home is a potential CO source. Electrical heaters and electric water heaters, toasters, etc., do not produce CO under any circumstances. Under normal circumstances, CO should not be detectable in the typical home or workplace.

When fuel-fired appliances are kept in good working condition, they produce very little CO. But improperly operated or improperly vented appliances can produce elevated - or even fatal - CO concentrations in your home. Likewise, using kerosene heaters or charcoal grills indoors, or running a car in a closed garage, can cause levels of CO high enough to result in CO poisoning or even death.

Common sources of CO include the following wood- or gas-fueled appliances: room heaters; furnaces; charcoal grills; cooking ranges; water heaters; automobiles run in closed garages; fireplaces; portable generators; and wood-burning stoves.

Any person or animal in spaces shared with a device capable of generating CO should be considered at risk of CO poisoning. CO exposures especially affect unborn babies, infants, and people with anemia or a history of heart disease. Breathing low levels of the chemical can cause fatigue and increase chest pain in people with chronic heart disease.

Although not always experienced, the initial symptoms of CO poisoning are similar to the flu, but without the fever. They include: dizziness, fatigue, headache, nausea, and irregular breathing.

It is critical to note that death from CO poisoning can occur with some or all of these symptoms never being experienced, in which case the overexposed victim simply falls asleep and never regains consciousness.

Dangerous levels of CO can be prevented by proper appliance maintenance, installation, and use. Timely inspections of potentially CO-producing equipment, and the use of CO toxic level concentration alarms, are also key to avoiding a CO fatality.

Tips To Remain Safe During Spring's Seasonal Activities

ComEd wishes to offer its customers safety tips to assist them with seasonal activities, and remind those customers seeking financial assistance with their utility bills that Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) and Power Up funds remain available.

ComEd encourages all customers to keep safety in mind as they begin spring-cleaning and landscaping chores. According to the National Safety Council, homeowners are seven times more likely to be injured at home than at work. To prevent injuries, ComEd offers these electric safety tips for working inside and outside the home:

Inspect Your Home:

Make sure outlets and extension cords are not overloaded.

Examine electrical cords to make sure they are not frayed, damaged or placed under rugs.

Use proper watt light bulbs in all light fixtures and lamps, and replace bulbs with energy-efficient compact fluorescent bulbs (CFLs).

When possible, install ground-fault circuit interrupters in areas that get wet, such as kitchens, bathrooms or outdoors.

To avoid the risk of fire or electric shock in an older home that may not be equipped for today's electrical demands, hire a licensed professional to replace worn and outdated circuitry and add additional outlets to accommodate appliances and electronics.

Test smoke detector batteries. Replace if necessary.

Use Electrical Tools Wisely:

Inspect electrical tools and look for frayed power cords, broken plugs or cracked housings.

Never use damaged tools.

Never use electrical tools in the rain or in wet areas.

Use three-pronged outlets and plugs.

Always wear appropriate protective equipment like face shields, glasses, gloves and boots.

Call Before You Dig:

Whether planting a tree, building a fence or laying a building foundation, contact with an underground power line can be fatal. Before digging or driving equipment into the ground, contact the appropriate one-call system at least 48 hours before working. The one-call center will contact the appropriate utilities, which will then come out and mark their underground facilities.

Within the Chicago city limits call: DIGGER (the Chicago Utility Alert Network) at 312-744-7000. Outside the Chicago city limits call: JULIE (the Joint Utility Locating for Excavators) at 800-892-0123 or visit their website (<http://www.illinoisitcall.com>)

Work Safely Outdoors:

Use extension cords marked for outdoor use.

Call a licensed professional if home repairs require work near power lines.

Look up, stay away, stay alive - even momentary contact with electric lines can injure or kill.

Always keep people, equipment and moveable items at least 10 feet away from power lines.

Contractors and other professionals needing to work within 10 feet of a power line should call 800-Edison-1 (800-334-7661) in advance to make arrangements to have ComEd protect the work area.

Be aware of power lines that run through tree limbs and branches.

A qualified contractor should always trim trees located near aerial power lines.

Additionally, ComEd reminds customers who require additional financial assistance to manage their utility bills that limited LIHEAP and Power Up program funds remain available this spring.

LIHEAP Assistance:

LIHEAP-eligible customers can request an application through April 30, or until funds run out. Households with incomes up to 150 percent of the federal poverty level are eligible for LIHEAP support, which comes in the form of a one-time grant applied to energy bills. To request LIHEAP assistance, contact one of the local administering agencies across ComEd's service territory. In Chicago and suburban Cook County, the number to call is 312-456-4100.

Power Up Program:

For customers not eligible for LIHEAP, ComEd's Power Up program provides an energy assistance grant of up to $400 to households with income between 150 percent and 200 percent of the federally determined poverty level. Customers can apply for a Power Up grant at a LIHEAP designated intake site, which will determine the applicant's eligibility. For information, call the Energy Hotline (800) 571-2332.

CAGW: Senate Sweetens Supplemental

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) has blasted the Senate for adding special interest spending to the emergency war supplemental bill. Scheduled for markup last week, the Senate Appropriations Committee bill totals $121.5 billion - $18.5 billion more than the president requested for operations in Iraq and Afghanistan and disaster relief. Like the House version, the Senate bill is packed with spending items unrelated to overseas military operations.

"Funding for sugar beets and sugar cane has no place in an emergency bill, especially with the Farm Bill coming up later in the year," CAGW President Tom Schatz said. "The Senate has matched the House's insatiable appetite for pork while satisfying their sweet tooth."

Below is a list of the most egregious special-interest goodies in the supplemental. An expanded list can be found at www.cagw.org.

$425 million for education grants for rural areas;
$388.9 million for a backlog of Dept. of Transportation projects;

$165.9 million (including $60.4 million for salmon fisheries in the Klamath Basin region) for fisheries disaster relief;

$48 million in disaster construction money for NASA;
$25 million for asbestos abatement at the Capitol Power Plant;

$24 million to sugar beet producers;
$20 million for reimbursements to Nevada for "insect damage;"

$3.5 million for guided tours of the Capitol;
$3 million for sugar cane; and

Allows the transfer of funds from holiday ornament sales in the Senate gift shop.

Emergency spending is basically a giant loophole. The costs of supplemental bills are not counted in official annual budget figures, but still get added to the national debt. The projects and programs slipped into supplementals often would not pass muster in the regular budget process. Presidents are historically reluctant to veto funding meant for the troops, which makes such bills a magnet for pork; President Bush has threatened to veto this year's bill.

"Emergency spending bills are often called Christmas trees for the plentiful gifts that are tucked in for lawmakers and special interests, but this is the first with holiday ornaments already included. Taxpayers must play the Grinch and stop Congress from celebrating Christmas in March," Schatz concluded.

Citizens Against Government Waste is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization dedicated to eliminating waste, fraud, abuse and mismanagement in government.

Transfer Responsibility For Agriculture Inspections

U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) and Dick Durbin (D-Ill.) recently introduced a bill that would transfer responsibility for conducting agricultural inspections at all points of entry in the United States from the Dept. of Homeland Security (DHS) back to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS).

APHIS controlled agriculture inspections prior to March 2003. But the responsibility was transferred to DHS as part of the Homeland Security Act, which combined the inspection activities of the Dept. of the Treasury's Customs Service, the Dept. of Justice's Immigration and Naturalization Service, and USDA's APHIS into the newly created Dept. of Homeland Security's Customs and Border Protection (CBP).

A Government Accountability Office (GAO) report released in 2006 revealed that since the USDA transferred responsibility for port inspections, fewer agricultural inspections have been conducted at key points of entry and the morale of agriculture specialists has been low.

The USDA estimates that agricultural pests cost the American agricultural industry $41 billion annually. In California alone, pest infestations cost farmers about $3 billion a year.

California farmers continue to battle against serious agricultural pests, such as the glassy-winged sharpshooter, the Asian long-horned beetle, the Mediterranean fruit fly, among others.

During the time that DHS has been in charge of agriculture inspections, Fresno County, California experienced its first fruit fly outbreak, quarantine and eradication. According to the Fresno County Dept. of Agriculture, the pest was the Peach Fruit Fly, which is indigenous to Asia. This pest is no known to occur in Mexico and had to enter the country through one of the federal ports of entry in smuggled fruit carried in by a passenger. The eradication effort cost approximately $1 million.

In Illinois, a destructive insect known as the Emerald Ash Borer has been discovered in several areas. The Ash Borer is a bright green beetle that kills trees by burrowing into their bark and destroying the tree's ability to bring water from the roots to upper branches. Infected trees usually begin to die within two to three years.

The church is at 9411 S. 51st Ave. and is handicapped accessible. All are welcome.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

But Look At Their Human Rights Abuses

I misread the Chicago Sun-Times editorial caption — "Despite new name, U.N. rights panel still a disgrace," (3/19/07) — mistakenly substituting U.S. for U.N. and subliminally reading facts into editorial opinion.

On rereading the caption, of course, I immediately noticed that "U.S." was really "U.N." and quickly gathered that the thrust of the piece was more Israel sensitive than human rights sensitive. The editorial argued that until the council can "tackle fundamental issues such as genocide in Sudan" and stop neglecting "human rights outrages around the globe," the U.N. Human Rights Council "is a disgrace."

Huh? How can editorial journalism criticize the U.N. council for wearing one-sided human rights blinders when the U.S. has a vice-president who refuses to denounce water-boarding, when the U.S. has an attorney general who approved a torture memo, when U.S.-led coalition forces permit Abu Ghraib and Camp X-ray sites of abuse to remain standing despite world outrage, and when people are snared and snatched by the CIA off the streets of anywhere, Planet Earth, and rendered to known torture centers around the world without a peep by sleek whisper jets?

The U.S. under present leadership is just as deserving of a seat on the U.N. Human Rights Council as any thug nation or insurgent force anywhere. CNN just aired a piece,

"Death Squads," documenting torture atrocities perpetrated by Shiites on Sunnis in secret Saddam prisons, tit-for-tat, just as Saddam's henchmen tortured Shiites.

Shame on all torture and shame on all the torturers!

Shame on every American, every Israeli, every Shiite, every Sunni, every Palestinian and every other scumbag who tortures or abuses another human being. Double shame on those human rights abusers who use their positions of authority and trust to impose suffering upon another.

I cannot find words strong enough, words encompassing enough, or words loud enough, to adequately condemn the mistreatment of anyone by another, whether the mistreatment is by this faction or that, or this country or that, or for this reason or that.

Shame on human rights abuses and shame on human rights abusers — now and forever. Amen.

Oh, and shame on anyone who spends even a single word, editorially or otherwise, in an effort to deflect the sting of well-deserved criticism for human rights abuses by pointing a finger at the abuses inflicted by others — lest the floor become our human rights ceiling.

Tour Chicago's Elegant North Shore

The Friends of the Oak Lawn Library will host a narrated bus tour along Chicago's Lake Michigan shoreline from the Lakeview neighborhood to the suburb of Lake Forest on Wednesday, May 16th. Registration begins in person from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturday, April 7th at the library, 5300 W. 95th St.

On this all-day jaunt up Chicago's elegant north shore, participants will see the Charles Gates Dawes House, Grosse Point Lighthouse and stately Northwestern University in Evanston, visit the spectacular 135 ft. high dome and beautifully landscaped grounds at the Baha'i Temple in Wilmette, and enjoy a box lunch and tram ride through the Chicago Botanic Gardens in Glencoe. The cost is $62 for Friends members and $67 for others. The bus will depart from the library at 9 a.m. and return at 4 p.m. Please be advised that this trip is not wheelchair accessible.

After the in-person registration closes, you may call the library to find out how to purchase tickets, (708) 422-4990.

Voter Registration Grace-Period Begins

Suburban Cook County residents had until Tuesday to register to vote in the April 17th Consolidated Election. Currently, 1.37 million people are registered to vote in the suburbs, Cook County Clerk David Orr said.

Anyone who missed the Tuesday deadline still has the opportunity to register under the new grace-period registration law. Grace-period registration runs now through Tuesday, April 3rd.

There is only one way and place to register during the grace period. Unregistered voters must sign up at the Clerk's downtown office, 69 W. Washington St., Room 500. Two pieces of identification must be shown at the time of registration.

Grace-period registrants must vote absentee. This can be done in-person at the Clerk's downtown office immediately after signing up to vote, or by requesting an absentee ballot by mail, which can be completed at home and returned to the Clerk's office prior to Election Day.

For additional information about voter registration or the April 17th election, visit www.voterinfo.net.

Recall Infant Sling Carriers

Attorney General Lisa Madigan is alerting consumers to a March 22nd recall of infant sling carriers announced by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission in cooperation with Infantino, LLC. The recall is necessary because infants may fall from these infant sling carriers due to a plastic slide on the fabric strap that can break and cause the strap to fail.

The recall involves the Infantino Slingrider™ carriers with item numbers: 141-210; 151-210; 151-528; and 151-534. The Slingrider™ consists of a fabric carrier with a strap attached that is worn by the user to carry an infant up to 20 pounds. The carriers were sold in black or khaki fabrics. "Infantino" is printed on the plastic slider located on the strap and the item number is printed on a label inside the Slingrider™.

Products labeled "Made in Thailand" or "New 2007 Design" are not included in the recall.

The Slingrider™ was sold at Target Stores, Babies R Us, BJ's Wholesale Club, Modcraft and other retailers nationwide from July 2006 to February 2007 for approximately $30.

Based on this recall, Madigan urged parents to stop using these carriers immediately and contact Infantino for instructions on returning the Slingrider™ and receiving a free product replacement. There have been 10 reports of plastic sliders breaking, including eight reports of infant falls. Four of these falls involved impact injuries where the child was taken to the emergency room. One of the children fractured her skull as a result.

Madigan's office sent out investigators pursuant to the Illinois Children's Product Safety Act to spot check to see that retailers have posted the recall notice in a prominent location in stores and have removed the products from shelves.

Consumers can sign up to receive e-mail notification of recalls as they are issued at www.cpsc.gov. Consumers can select to receive notification from several topics, including: infant or child product recalls, sports or recreation product recalls, outdoor product recalls and household product recalls. Last year 466 products were recalled by the Consumer Product Safety Commission and e-mail notification provides an alternative for consumers to make sure they learn of any recalled products that they may have in their home.

The Illinois Department of Public Health's Web site also provides a direct link to www.recalls.gov where citizens can find up-to-date recall information about past and current recalls.

Deadly Diesel Emissions

CTA and Pace buses are among the dirtiest – and deadliest – in the country. That's one finding in a new report on diesel pollution issued by the American Lung Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago and the Illinois Campaign to Clean Up Diesel Pollution, a coalition of over 45 groups.

"Chicago has one of the highest risks for cancer due to diesel pollution of any city in the country," says Anna Frostic, ALAMC's Environmental Health Advocate. "And we lag far behind New York, Los Angeles, Boston and Dallas in cleaning up our diesel bus fleets."

The Coalition is calling for equipping CTA and PACE buses with clean technology to reduce diesel pollution by more than 90%.

"Diesel emissions are almost impossible to avoid," says Frostic. "That's why we need to retrofit diesel vehicles with particulate filters to reduce their harmful emissions."

These findings build on the conclusions of another new report, issued by the Clean Air Task Force, which suggests that pollution levels inside CTA and PACE buses are four times deadlier than the air outside.

The Coalition is urging support for Illinois Senate Bill 268, which would create a public funding mechanism for retrofits of diesel vehicles in Illinois. It also calls on the Illinois General Assembly to require the clean-up of the CTA and PACE diesel bus fleets by 2010 as part of any effort to increase and stabilize funding for public transit in Northeastern Illinois.

Other report findings include:

The cancer risk of diesel exhaust is 8 times greater than the cancer risk from all other 133 air toxics tracked by EPA combined.

Diesel exhaust causes 878 deaths, 1,193 heart attacks, and 19,162 asthma attacks in Illinois every year.

Half a person's exposure to deadly particulate pollution occurs during morning and evening commutes, even though commuting only accounts for about 6 percent of the day.

Ensure Safety Of Elevators

In an effort to make elevators, escalators and other conveyance devices in Illinois safer, the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM) is working to ensure that people who inspect, install and perform maintenance on such devices are properly trained and have the necessary skills. About 30 people are killed and approximately 17,000 others are injured each year in the United States in incidents involving elevators and escalators.

Conveyance devices covered under the state's Elevator Safety and Regulation Act include elevators, escalators, moving sidewalks, dumbwaiters, platform lifts, stairway lifts and automated people movers.

Under the law, anyone who installs or works on conveyances in Illinois must obtain a license from OSFM by April 1st. To be licensed, workers must demonstrate the knowledge and skill needed to work with conveyances through a certificate of successful completion of study issued by the National Elevator Industry Educational Program and/or a certificate of completion of an elevator mechanic apprenticeship program that is registered with the U.S. Dept. of Labor's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training. Once licensed, elevator contractors and maintenance workers must complete at least eight hours of continuing education requirements each year.

Conveyance inspectors must show proof of insurance and a Qualified Elevator Inspector Certificate to be licensed by OSFM.

The law also requires all conveyances to be registered with OSFM. Building owners have until July 1st to register existing conveyances, while all new conveyances must be registered by the contractor installing the device. Licensed elevator mechanics may service an unregistered conveyance only once after that deadline and must inform the owner that the device must be registered before it can be serviced again.

Building owners are also required to report any accident involving a conveyance that causes personal injury or property damage in excess of $1,000. The accident report must be submitted to OSFM by close of business the next business day following the accident.

Conveyances in residential structures are exempted from requirements of the law. In addition, municipalities with more than 500,000 residents that administer their own elevator safety programs are also exempted from the state law.

West Nile Virus Grants

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently announced $2.5 million in grants to local health departments for surveillance and control efforts of mosquitoes that carry West Nile virus or other mosquito-borne diseases. In 2006, the Illinois Dept. of Public Health (IDPH) received reports of 215 human cases of West Nile virus in Illinois and ten deaths due to West Nile virus-related illness.

Funding for the grants comes from a special 50-cent fee on new tires. The fee was put into place in 2003 to create a public health emergency fund to help pay for human, mosquito and bird surveillance for mosquito-borne disease.

Eighty-seven local health departments in areas of the state that documented West Nile virus activity last year will receive West Nile virus prevention grants this year for surveillance, testing of birds and mosquitoes, training, mosquito larviciding and public information.

The primary responsibility for local health departments concerning West Nile virus is surveillance because it must be conducted statewide. Mosquito control is a secondary objective for local health departments and some assist municipal mosquito control programs. Historically, municipalities conduct mosquito control operations. In preparation for the upcoming season, local municipalities and mosquito abatement districts need to plan and budget for adequate mosquito control measures.

West Nile virus activity has occurred in Illinois throughout the summers of 2001 through 2006. During 2002, Illinois led the nation with more than 800 human cases and more than 60 deaths. After the cool summers of 2003 and 2004, West Nile virus activity in Illinois resurged during the hot summers of 2005 and 2006. How active West Nile virus is during 2007 may be dependent on summer temperatures. Additional information about West Nile virus can be found on the Dept. of Public Health's Web site at www.idph.state.il.us/cnvhealth/wnv.htm.

Grants were awarded to the following local health departments for April 1, 2007 through March 31, 2008: Cook County, $566,318.81, and Will County, $116,256.18.

Mass Evacuation Initiative

An initiative offered by U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) to improve mass evacuation planning is an important part of legislation currently being debated on the Senate floor to implement the recommendations of the 9-11 Commission.

"Recent studies of Illinois terrorism preparedness – both those done by the federal government and the self-evaluation done by the state – point to serious shortcomings in planning for mass evacuations. While most cities and states have evacuation plans, the lack of training drills makes it difficult to address problems that can take place during actual disasters," said Durbin. "With this legislation we can help states like Illinois plan evacuation drills and work out solutions to problems before lives are at risk in a real emergency."

Most eligible state homeland security funding is spent on personnel and equipment and not on planning and evacuation exercises. Senator Durbin's initiative outlines that states can use grant money to establish mass evacuation plans, prepare the execution of such plans, and conduct evacuation exercises.

In a report release June 16th by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS), Illinois ranked 11th in the national in terrorism preparedness. In that evaluation, which graded 10 categories of emergency preparedness, Illinois received its lowest marks for its evacuation preparedness abilities.

The June 16th DHS analysis of preparedness was based on a complex scorecard for each city and state in the nation, rating their plans for evacuations, medical care, sheltering of victims and several other categories. Illinois' sufficiency in each category was reviewed separately by federal and state disaster officials, and two scorecards were produced. In both scorecards, the state scored worst in mass evacuation capabilities.

The DHS study noted that successful evacuation, particularly a mass evacuation, encompasses more than physically moving a population from the area at risk to a safe haven. The effectiveness of evacuation planning hinges on the adequacy of the other factors such as communications between emergency personnel, effective emergency warning systems, dependable and accessible emergency public information programs and the availability of health and medical services.

EPA Can Regulate The Global Warming Gas Carbon Dioxide

Statement from Governor Rod R. Blagojevich: "I applaud the U.S. Supreme Court for ruling that carbon dioxide is a pollutant and that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has the authority under the federal Clean Air Act to regulate greenhouse gases, in contrast to the Bush Administration's claim that it lacks such authority."

For too long, President Bush and USEPA have failed to act to reduce greenhouse gases. With this ruling, I am hopeful that we will soon see long overdue federal leadership to address global warming. In Illinois, we have challenged this failure of federal leadership with an aggressive plan to reduce greenhouse gases.

Yesterday's (4/2) long-awaited environmental decision came on the eve of the second meeting of the Illinois Climate Change Advisory Group, which I created to address the urgent issue of global climate change. The group's mission is to help me to identify measures to cost-effectively reduce greenhouse gases in Illinois.

As part of our state's fight against global warming, I announced a statewide goal to slash the production of greenhouse gases to 1990 levels by 2020 and 60 percent below 1990 levels by 2050. These goals are part of our long-term strategy to combat global climatic change and builds on steps the State has already taken to protect the environment and public health against the effects of global warming.

The impact of global warming in Illinois and around the world could be devastating, and we have chosen to act now because scientists worldwide have warned that we must address climatic change within the next decade to avoid serious and irreversible consequences."

Vendors Wanted

The Custer's Last Stand Festival of the Arts is accepting exhibitor applications from artists, crafts people, antique dealers, food vendors and selected retail businesses. This show, which won the 1993 and 2001 Northshore Magazine prestigious Annual Reader's Poll for "Best Art Fair" will take place on June 16th and 17th in Evanston. The festival starts at 10 a.m. and runs till 9 p.m. each day.

This Northshore tradition takes place in Old Town Evanston and in addition to exhibits by national artists and craftspeople this festival features three show stages, 28 restaurants, and a Children's Activity Park. This year marks the opening of the organization's restored train station, The Evanston Arts Depot. The highly acclaimed Piccolo Theatre, www.piccolothatre.com, is among the featured talent at this year's fair. About 60,000 people attend every year.

For an application call (847) 328-2004, e-mail: applications@custerfair.com or write to: Custer's Last Stand, P.O. Box 6013, Evanston, IL 60204-6013 or visit www.custerfair.com.

Top Ten Mistakes Taxpayers Make

Ever make a mistake on your tax return? If so, you're not alone. Mistakes can cost you money - taxpayers often miss deductions or tax credits. They can also draw unwanted attention to your return from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and could result in penalty fees. The National Society of Accountants (NSA) identified these "Top Ten Mistakes" that taxpayers make:

1. Using the wrong column in the tax table. For each level of income, tax rates listed in the tax table are usually different for taxpayers who are single, married filing jointly, married filing separately, and heads of households. It can be easy to pull a number from the wrong column.
2. Not claiming the right number of exemptions. Children count as exemptions up to age 23 - make sure they are claimed on the return as exemptions with the current exemption amount, which often increases year-to-year.
3. Not adding state income tax refunds as taxable income. It's easy to forget the state tax return refund you got last year. Remember that this counts as taxable income on your federal return if you itemized last year.
4. Not being aware of tax credits. The federal government offers many tax credits, including earned income, energy, education, fuel, elderly, child care, child tax, and foreign tax credits. Many states offer renters' credits. Take advantage of these if they apply to you.
5. Not calculating and comparing the Alternative Minimum Tax. Every taxpayer must calculate this alternative tax to see if it applies to their situation. Failure to do so could result in additional taxes and penalties.
6. Not claiming a refund of excess FICA (Social Security) tax. If you changed employers in 2006 and earned more than $94,200 (the 2006 income limit that applies to FICA tax) the employers together may have withheld more FICA than you owe. Make sure you calculate this and claim a refund if appropriate.
7. Not attaching W-2 forms and other forms. This common mistake is easy to make, so double check to make sure they are included.
8. Not entering Social Security numbers on all tax documents. In addition to the main return, documents such as Schedule A and other tax schedules should all have complete information, including Social Security numbers.

9. Not signing the return. After all the calculations, don't forget this important step!
10. Not enclosing the check for any payment owed. Yes, you must write a check if you owe money. Don't forget to include it!

"With the complex tax code we have today, it's easy to see how mistakes can happen," says NSA President Robert H. Fukuhara, Jr. CPA, ABA, ATA, of Fujieki, Fukuhara & Company, Honolulu, Hawaii. "Plus, taxpayers only have to fill out returns once a year - that's just enough time to forget key steps they did a year ago. Most NSA member accountants fill out hundreds of tax returns each year, so we know how to catch mistakes before they happen."

NSA represents accountants who specialize in serving individuals and small-to-mid-size businesses. For more information about NSA and to find an accountant who can assist with financial and tax issues, visit www.nsaact.org or call (800) 966-6679.

Common Sense Legislation

Congressman Dan Lipinski recently introduced H.R. 1705, The Bulb Replacement in Government with High-Efficiency Technology (BRIGHT) Energy Savings Act. Introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives, the legislation would direct the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) to replace commonly used low efficiency light bulbs with high efficiency bulbs whenever a new bulb is installed in a GSA-owned office building. Lipinski introduced the bipartisan legislation with Rep. Bob Inglis (R-SC) and was joined by over 35 other members of the House as original cosponsors of the legislation. Lipinski is a member of the House Committee on Transportation & Infrastructure, which has jurisdiction of the GSA.

"Americans are rightly concerned about the impact of foreign energy dependence on our national security and the effect of global climate change on the future of our planet," said Lipinski. "The BRIGHT Energy Savings will help us address both of these issues by cutting down significantly on energy use by the federal government, and at the same time it will save millions of taxpayer dollars. It's a win for the environment, a win for national security, and a win for American taxpayers."

The GSA is the federal agency which owns and administers office space for civilian federal agencies. The federal government owns approximately 1,800 facilities with about 174 million square feet of space. At least 3 million lights throughout the Federal government could be upgraded to high efficiency bulbs. One type of high efficiency bulb that could be used is the Energy Star-certified Compact Fluorescent Light bulb, also known as a CFL. CFLs use approximately 75 percent less energy than incandescent bulbs to provide the same amount of light and they last approximately 8-10 times longer. Replacing an ordinary bulb with a comparable CFL saves up to $74 in energy costs over the bulb's lifetime.

Even higher efficiency light bulbs are close to commercial application including improved halogen technologies as well as new light-emitting diode (LED) technologies.

"With CFLs already in the marketplace and other high efficiency bulb technologies right around the corner, the future really is now," explained Lipinski. "Much of this new technology represents American ingenuity and innovation. The BRIGHT Energy Savings Act will mean reduced energy consumption, lower greenhouse gas emissions, and saved taxpayer dollars. It's a common sense, practical measure that is simply the right thing to do."

Medical Marijuana Bill Clears Senate Committee

Members of the Illinois Senate Public Health Committee passed a medical marijuana bill 6-4 after receiving written and oral testimony from medical professionals, patients and policy experts recently.

S.B. 650, introduced by Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago), is one of about a dozen medical marijuana bills currently under consideration by state legislatures across the country. Medical marijuana policy experts said they expect the bill, which would protect from arrest seriously ill patients who use medical marijuana with a doctor's recommendation, to go to the Senate floor for a full vote within a month.

Committee members heard testimony from multiple sclerosis patients and Illinois Drug Education and Legislative (IDEAL) Reform board member Julie Falco of Chicago. They also considered written testimony from several other patients and experts, including registered nurse and multiple sclerosis patient Gretchen Steele of Coulterville, and psychiatrist Dr. Zulima Hurtado of Round Lake Park, who argued that her experience treating patients indicated medical choices are best left between doctors and patients.

"Medical treatment as a whole should be a choice between a doctor and the patient," she wrote. "The operative word being choice."

A registered nurse, Steele testified that medical marijuana was able to effectively and safely treat her symptoms when other more dangerous drugs failed.

"I can tell you from firsthand experience that marijuana works better to control the spasticity, neuropathic pain, and tremors than do any of the myriad prescription medications that I currently take," she wrote to the committee. "The fact that it is perfectly legal for my doctors to prescribe morphine, OxyCodone, diazepam, hydrocodone, and other drugs that are not only highly addictive but have many unpleasant side effects, yet it remains illegal to recommend marijuana, is beyond reasoning."

Although federal law makes patients who use doctor-recommended medical marijuana criminals, 11 states have effective laws protecting patients for whom serious research proves the medicine is safe and effective, including those suffering from symptoms associated with life-threatening diseases such as cancer, HIV/AIDS, multiple sclerosis, and hepatitis C.

Recently, Committee members made a sensitive, compassionate decision to square the state's laws with the facts about medical marijuana," said Karen O'Keefe, MPP assistant director of state policies. "Thanks to them, seriously ill patients here may soon be able to focus on fighting their debilitating symptoms, and not on the fear of arrest and jail for simply following their doctor's treatment regimen."

With more than 20,000 members and 100,000 e-mail subscribers nationwide, the Marijuana Policy Project is the largest marijuana policy reform organization in the United States. MPP believes that the best way to minimize the harm associated with marijuana is to regulate marijuana in a manner similar to alcohol. For more information, visit www.MarijuanaPolicy.org.

Legislation To Help Failing School Districts

As part of his ongoing work to clean up Calumet Public School District 132, state Rep. Bob Rita (D-Blue Island) recently announced that he has introduced legislation that would allow the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE) to assume control of school districts failing for academic or administrative reasons.

"This bill will help protect our children from officials that refuse to operate in the best interests of the students," Rita said. "I know firsthand from the problems I saw last year in Calumet School District 132 that we can't let bad situations in our schools escalate to the point that students and their families pay the price. This bill offers a system of checks and balances that will make sure every child is getting the best education possible."

House Bill 1466 allows the ISBE to investigate a school or district and certify if there is academic difficulty. Schools on academic early warning status, meaning they have not met adequate yearly progress criteria for two consecutive years, may see the Board take control if they do not meet the criteria for a third straight year. Currently, the ISBE can only take control for financial reasons.

Rita's legislation also allows the Board to become involved if a school has not provided the required percentage of qualified teachers for two consecutive years, or if there are documented and substantiated acts of mismanagement in hiring practices. Calumet District 132, in the last few years, was reported to have hired unqualified special education personnel and asbestos contractors.

"While I believe that local control in school districts is important, I can't sit back and let some schools get away with malfeasance," Rita said. "We need to meet and maintain high academic standards throughout the state, and that means school districts have to be held accountable for what they teach and who teaches it. Students and their families should expect nothing less."

For more information on House Bill 1466, contact Rep. Rita's district office at (708) 396-2822.

All Points Southwest

By THOMAS E. GAVIN

Last week the U.S. Senate approved an emergency spending bill that included a provision from Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) that places a two year moratorium on a Medicaid rule that would take up to $623 million in federal funding from Illinois' Medicaid program. The proposed rule could affect hospitals in as many as 42 states.

"With passage of this emergency spending bill, Cook County's Stroger Hospital, as well as other hospitals throughout the country are one step closer to protecting their critical Medicaid funds. This is money that helps hospitals provide basic services to the uninsured and those with limited insurance," said Durbin.

Background preceding this action included the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) proposing a rule in January that would impact more than 57 million Americans and two million Illinoisans who rely on the Medicaid program, as well as health care providers who deliver essential services to them. The proposed rule (CMS-2258-P) imposes cost limits for public health care providers and alters the definition of "public" status. Specifically, the proposed rule would limit payments to government safety-net providers by capping reimbursement payments, redefining eligible public providers, and imposing new restrictions on non-federal funding sources.

In February, Durbin sent a letter to the Senate Finance Chairman and Ranking Member, urging them to prevent CMS from implementing their proposed plan to dramatically cut Medicaid funding. Forty-two additional senators from both parties joined in signing Durbin's letter.

The Durbin provision in the bill would be paid for by changing an existing Medicaid program that requires brand name drug makers to provide a 15% rebate on any drug it sells through the Medicaid program. Durbin's provision raised that to 20%, and the additional money provides funding for the Medicaid hospital payment program.

Durbin's amendment passed the Appropriations Committee mark-up as well as the full Senate by a 51-47 vote. The bill now goes to the House-Senate Conference Committee for consideration.

State Rep. Bob Rita (D-Blue Island) tells All Points that legislation he introduced to create the Southwest Suburban Railroad Redevelopment Authority, passed in the House. The purpose of this body would be to improve existing, and relocating outdated railroad crossings throughout the Southwest Suburbs.

Rita's House Bill 566 creates a new local government agency which will work on improving railroad tracks running through the Bloom, Thornton, Calumet, Bremen, Orland, Worth, Rich and Palos townships. House Bill 566 also gives the Authority the power to buy, sell, and exchange properties for the purpose of relocating railroad tracks. I will also have the power to submerge tracks and separate the grades at railway crossings.

The Authority will consist of five members appointed by the governor. Two members must reside in the Authority's territory. Two members must be former public officials who have lived in the Authority's territory. Finally, one member must be a current or former employee of a railroad company with ties to the area the Authority serves.

The Augustinian Friars of the St. Rita High School Monastery invite all friends and benefactors to a Mass of Dedication and Blessing of nine new Shrines on Sunday, April 15th at 9 a.m. at the St. Rita Shrine Chapel, 7740 S. Western Ave., Chicago. The "Nine New Shrines" are part of a class beautification project. Represented are Our Mother of Good Counsel, Our Lady of Czestochowa, St. Monica, St. Patrick, St. Martin de Porres, St. Francis Xavier Cabrini, St. Theresa Benedicta of the Cross, St. Therese of Lisieux, Pope John Paul II, and Mother Teresa. A continental breakfast will follow. For reservations contact Sr. Ardis Cloutier, O.S.F., at (773) 925-6600, ext. 6623 or accloutier@stritahs.com.

The Greater Illinois Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society has developed an excellent fund raising vehicle by participating in the Illinois Income Tax Check-Off Program, benefiting the Multiple Sclerosis Direct Assistance Fund, along with sixteen other charitable organizations.

Illinois residents have the opportunity to help people living with multiple sclerosis, a chronic, often disabling disease, by donating to the MS Direct Assistance when preparing their state income tax return.

Medical bills have an extreme impact on patients living with MS. It costs an average of $50,000 per year to pay for medications, therapy, medical equipment and other expenses associated with treating the disease. The Income Tax Check-Off Program generates the finances needed for the MS Direct Assistance Fund to provide health care services to individuals who could not afford it otherwise. Donations can be made through Section 10, Line F of the income tax return form. The deduction will be deducted from your refund, or if you owe money to the state, the amount will be added to what you owe for the year. All check off programs are tax deductible on the following year's tax refund and can be in any amount of $1 or more.

The Illinois Department of Transportation started a beautification and landscaping project April 2nd, along LaGrange Road (US 12/20/45) from the Cal Sag Channel to IL Rte. 171.

The landscaping and forest management project was developed mutually with the Forest Preserve District of Cook County. The work consists of tree and shrub planting, selective clearing of invasive vegetation, weed spraying, and reforestation.

The beautification project will include planting 980 trees from 171st to 175th St in Orland Township. Landscape and environmental improvements will be evident along LaGrange Road from the Cal Sag Channel to Archer Ave. in Lyons and Palos townships.

The project's first stage will run through May 31st, consisting of the layout and planting of all trees and plants. The second stage will begin June 1st through Dec. 31st and will consist of watering, weeding and periodic inspections of the new plantings to insure they are healthy and that they are getting established. The third stage will be from April 1 to May 31, 2008 and will consist of clean up, care, and replacement, of any plantings if necessary.

No lane closures are scheduled, but IDOT urges motorists to be on the lookout for workers and vehicles in the area of the project.

Criticize President Bush's Emergency War Spending Bill

Citizens Against Government Waste (CAGW) recently criticized the House of Representatives for out-of-control spending and related policy provisions in the emergency war supplemental bill. President Bush requested $103 billion in emergency spending for operations in Iraq and Afghanistan and disaster relief. The House Appropriations Committee included an additional $21 billion in the U.S. Readiness, Veterans' Health and Iraq Accountability Act, 2007, that is being marked up today.

"By passing earmark reforms, Congress signaled that it was serious about restoring fiscal responsibility to the budget process," CAGW President Tom Schatz said. "It seems the commitment to reform was short-lived, as Congress fattens up the emergency spending bill with special-interest goodies."

A list of spending and policy provisions in the supplemental that are unrelated to military operations include $500 million for emergency wildfires suppression (the Forest Services currently has $831 million for this purpose); $400 million for rural schools; $283 million for the Milk Income Loss Contract program; $120 million to compensate for the effects of Hurricane Katrina on the shrimp and menhaden fishing industries; $100 million for citrus assistance; $74 million for peanut storage costs; $25 million for spinach growers; $25 million for livestock; $4 million for the Office of Women's Health at the Food and Drug Administration; and a minimum wage increase, which is the subject of separate legislation. An expanded list can be found at www.cagw.org.

Supplemental appropriations bills are exempt from spending caps and other budget controls, which makes them magnets for projects and programs that might not stand up to the scrutiny of the budget process. Members of Congress know that the President is unlikely to veto a bill that is meant to meet the needs of troops in the field. The Senate version of the fiscal 2006 emergency appropriations bill included $700 million for the "Railroad to Nowhere" in Mississippi, but public criticism led conferees to remove that provision and others in order to pass a final version in line with the President's request.

"Members of Congress will pay a price if they go back to the usual pork-barrel politics. Taxpayers must demand that Congress remove the waste and bloat from the final bill and stop the routine abuse of emergency spending," Schatz concluded.

Pryme Timers

The Pryme Tymers, a very active fellowship that meets at Trinity Church, 9230 S. Pulaski Rd. in Oak Lawn, invites the entire community to their meeting on Thursday, April 12th at 11 a.m. The entertainment, "Duo Harmonika," is a breathtaking presentation by 2 men that make their instruments sound like an entire orchestra. With songs from the 30s, 40s and 50s, you'll be able to sit back, relax and reminisce. A beef stew luncheon, prepared by Chef Pitluck, will be served at noon. The cost is $6 and reservations are required. Call the church office at (708) 422-5111 or Tom Panush at (708) 636-7548 by Friday, April 6th. Transportation is provided upon request. Canned goods is also collected for the Salvation Army Food Pantry.

Illinois State Black Chamber Of Commerce Endorses Tax Fairness Plan

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich accepted the endorsement recently from the Illinois State Black Chamber of Commerce for his Tax Fairness Plan, which is an ambitious proposal to help small businesses by providing greater access to affordable healthcare, improving education and relieving their tax burden by asking big businesses to pay their fair share. This innovative plan closes corporate loopholes and gives working families the relief they deserve, while helping small business owners have better access to quality healthcare for their employees and themselves.

While the Blagojevich Administration has expanded access to healthcare to more than 560,000 working families with Illinois' FamilyCare and All Kids programs, access to quality healthcare continues to be a concern for the 1.4 million adults statewide that remain uninsured today, especially for many small business owners who have been unable to provide healthcare for their employees. The cost of healthcare for business has been growing five times faster than the rate of inflation, and the number of firms offering health benefits to their employees has fallen by at least 8 percent since 2000.

To address this crisis, Gov. Blagojevich has proposed Illinois Covered - a plan that will ensure all 1.4 million uninsured have access to quality, affordable healthcare, and that will help many middle-income families and small businesses that are currently enrolled in health insurance plans save thousands a year on healthcare costs. One of the components of the governor's plan include Illinois Covered Choice, which creates an affordable and comprehensive insurance plan that anyone without employer-sponsored health insurance in Illinois can purchase. This statewide pool of coverage will offer Illinoisans lower and stable rates. Business groups will be able to connect many of their members with this new affordable insurance, and small business owners can also purchase this product on behalf of their employees.

Illinois Covered Rebate will lower premiums for moderate to middle-income Illinoisans ($20,000-$80,000 for a family of four) to help them afford their health insurance. The rebate will vary based on income, and those with lower incomes would get a larger rebate.

The governor's Tax Fairness Plan implements a Gross Receipts Tax (GRT) that has been embraced by many economists because of its broad base and low rates. States including Washington, Delaware and Hawaii have had a GRT for years and recently, Ohio and Texas have adopted a form of the tax. The GRT will only apply to businesses that make more than $1 million each year, which means 75 percent of all businesses in Illinois will be exempt. The GRT will tax service industries at a low 1.8 percent rate, while manufacturers, construction, retail and wholesale companies will be taxed at an even lower .5 percent. Exports will not be taxed. The plan also mitigates costs being passed on to consumers by excluding certain goods, such as retail food and pharmaceuticals.

Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady Of Controversy

On Saturday, April 28th, the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum (ALPLM) will unveil Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady of Controversy, a one-of-a-kind exhibit that will reveal the many controversial aspects of Mary Todd Lincoln. This exclusive temporary exhibit can only be seen at the ALPLM and will include dozens of artifacts - many on display to the public for the first time.

The exhibit will provide the first major retrospective of the controversial First Lady. Visitors can explore the life of Mary Todd Lincoln beginning with her childhood through her courtship with Abraham Lincoln to her role as wife and mother and eventually as the First Lady of the United States. The exhibit will also examine the darker times of Mrs. Lincoln's life including the tragedy surrounding the Civil War, the death of her son Willie, the assassination of President Lincoln, and the estrangement from her son, Robert Todd Lincoln.

Guests can explore dozens of artifacts that provide an intimate look at Mrs. Lincoln such as her clothing, accessories, jewelry, photos and letters. The exhibit also showcases newly uncovered documents related to two special elements of controversy - the First Lady's precarious finances, and her insanity trial, confinement to the Bellevue Sanitarium and release. These artifacts, on public display for the first time, include:

Illinois Sen. Orville Hickman Diary Passages - These passages from the diary of the Lincolns' close associate

Sen. Hickman include revelations of misdeeds and unflattering information about Mrs. Lincoln.

Telegrams from Mrs. Lincoln - These newly discovered telegrams provide insight into the financial turmoil created by the First Lady's shopping indulgences. Within the telegrams, Mrs. Lincoln uses the pseudonym of the White House housekeeper Mary Ann Cuthbert to communicate with merchants to whom she owed money.

Mrs. Lincoln's Correspondence with Francis Spinner, United States Treasurer - These letters follow Mary Lincoln's fight to obtain the remainder of Lincoln's salary for 1865, following his assassination. Congress paid Mrs. Lincoln $22,000 of the $25,000 owed, some of which was placed in an account for a select listing of merchants from which to draw.

Copies of Mrs. Lincoln's Arrest Record and Related Documentation - This collection of records documents her arrest record and Mrs. Lincoln's outstanding debts that were used as evidence against her during her insanity trial.

Mrs. Lincoln's Correspondence with Dr. Willis Danforth - This letter to her doctor depicts Mrs. Lincoln explaining her addiction to chloral hydrate as an underlying cause for her "insanity."

Letters from Mrs. Lincoln's Confinement at Bellevue Sanitarium and Subsequent Release - Uncovered letters regarding Mary Lincoln's confinement and release from the sanitarium in Batavia, Ill. show her sense of betrayal to her only living son Robert. Two days after the county court declared Mary Lincoln "restored to reason" she writes that "my heart fails me, when I think of the contrast between himself [Robert] and my noble, glorious husband."

Mrs. Lincoln's Correspondence with Her Son Robert - In this angry letter, Mrs. Lincoln demands that Robert return all the items she believed he had stolen from her while confined in Batavia. "Send me all that I have written for, you have tried your game of robbery long enough... You have injured yourself, not me, by your wicked conduct."

In conjunction with the opening of the Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady of Controversy, the play The Last of Mrs. Lincoln will be performed for six performances, May 4th to 6th and May 11th to 13th, in the museum's Union Theatre. James Prideaux's powerful, Tony-Award-winning drama spans the final 17 years of Mary Todd Lincoln's life following the assassination of her husband. For tickets, call (217) 558-8934.

Mary Todd Lincoln: First Lady of Controversy will run from April 28th through Oct. 28th. Exhibit access is included with a general admission ticket to the museum. Temporary Gallery tickets are available for $4.50.

Nikki Greenlee Stars As The Killer Queen

Actually, it's a fantasy come true, especially for theater lovers and 70s rockers...as We Will Rock You premieres at the Jedlicka Performing Arts Center. The hit musical, based on the music of the rock group Queen, has only been performed in the U.S. once before. And Beverly/Morgan Park's A. Nikki Greenlee will star at the "Killer Queen."

Nikki first got into acting after her 6th grade teacher, who was also the school choir director, suggested that she audition for the Lyric Opera Children's Chorus. She did and her first professional role was as a street urchin in Bizet's Carmen in 1990. After that, she appeared in Boito's Mephistopheles. She was also active in her high school drama club.

Nikki grew up in an extended family that includes her mother, grandparents, aunt and little sister. She credits her mom and sister as the funniest comedy duo she ever saw. Up until just two months ago, Nikki was in school studying fine art and preparing for a career as a serious oil painter. She has just decided to dedicate herself to pursuing an acting career. Her real hope is to combine her two passions somehow.

Nikki feels her role as the Killer Queen will be the most fun she's had on stage. "I am not too villainous in real life," she remarks. "But I think it's great that I get to be a super-villain and use my sense of humor in the role."

Friday and Saturday night performances begin April 20th at 7:30 p.m. and run through May 5th, so you'll want to see it before Another One Bites the Dust. There is a Sunday matinee on April 29th at 3 p.m. Tickets are $14. Located just 10 minutes away from downtown Chicago, JPAC is one block north of the I-55 Stevenson expressway, at 3801 S. Central Ave. in Cicero. For tickets or information, call (708) 656-3948 or visit www.jpactheatre.com.

ENTERTAINMENT NEWS

This Summer, Crack The Case

Imagine entering a crime scene and being the one responsible for noticing and collecting every trace of evidence. The pressure's on: your analysis of the evidence must be scientifically sound to crack the case.

You've seen the hit television crime drama, CSI: Crime Scene Investigation on CBS. Now, beginning May 25, the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago will host the world premiere of CSI: The Experience, an immersive, interactive forensic science exhibit related to the TV show. The bilingual exhibit (English and Spanish) will run through Sept. 3rd.

In CSI: The Experience, guests will play the role of crime scene investigator, learning scientific principles and real investigative techniques as they try to solve one of three crime scene mysteries. Two state-of-the-art crime labs will help guests piece together the evidence. With input from investigators from the television show, along with their real-life forensic science counterparts, guests will formulate a hypothesis, validate their findings based on scientific evidence and try to crack the case.

From DNA and fingerprint analysis to forensic anthropology and toxicology, visitors will be captivated by hands-on science in a multi-media environment with dazzling special effects—direct from the CSI television series. A video introduction by cast members from the TV show will welcome guests into the exhibit, lead them through the experience, and then evaluate their crime-solving savvy as they exit.

"This exhibit blends science, technology and innovation into one phenomenal experience that guests will enjoy and learn from," said David Mosen, president and CEO of the Museum of Science and Industry. "It's also our hope that in experiencing this exhibit, children will discover the many different and vital careers that exist within the field of science, and become excited about them."

"With the launch of this exciting new exhibit, we're extending the CSI brand beyond entertainment and licensed merchandise into an engaging learning experience," commented Elizabeth Kalodner, executive vice president and general manager of CBS Consumer Products.

The National Science Foundation (NSF) provided $2.4 million to the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History to develop the exhibit for a national tour of science museums, as well as an online learning adventure. According to Sandra Welch, NSF's program officer for informal science education, this unique project will advance science learning in museums across the country in an exciting new way. "The show CSI has inspired its millions of fans to become interested in forensic science. Recognizing the role the show plays in society, we think this connection with the exhibit will help draw many people into a high quality science learning experience."

The exhibit's "investigators" will enter one of three different crime scenes where they will identify evidence and record findings on a special investigation card. The crime scenes vary in intensity, with the mildest being the presentation of skeletal remains discovered in a remote desert.

In "A House Collided" a car has run through the living room window of a house in a quiet suburb. In the driver's seat is a man with his seatbelt on; he is slumped over. The windshield is shattered and the car door is shut. In the living room, there are muddy shoeprints, drops of blood and a stain near a sofa. A pizza box is open with pepperoni pizza spilled on the floor. A beer bottle is by the car door, and a hand print of blood (or is it pizza sauce?) is found on the car hood.

In "Who Got Served?" a young woman has been found dead in an alley behind an old Las Vegas motel. She is sprawled beneath a dumpster overflowing with trash and is wearing a waitress outfit with a nametag that reads "Penny." There is a tire tread across her abdomen, and tossed nearby is a photo of her, which has been ripped in half. No other injuries are visible. Amongst the trash are a handbag and a cell phone.

In "No Bones About It!" a hiker has stumbled across what looks like a human skull sticking out of the ground. It is partially buried by silt and debris. Other bones are scattered underneath the dirt. The skull has a visible hole in it; and among the remains, there are still tattered remnants of a coat and what appears to be a backpack.

After exiting the crime scenes, guests will refer to a large wall of crime scene photos and clues they may have missed. They will then analyze evidence in two highly interactive lab areas, each featuring multiple stations that allow for various evidence testing.

Guests who are investigating "A House Collided" will compare fingerprints of the victim to the evidence, examine blood spatter patterns, observe the shoes of the victim and tracks found in the room, compare fibers on the victim's clothes with fibers in the room, analyze the victim's blood-alcohol level, compare DNA of the victim with evidence and eventually discover the cause of death.

For "Who Got Served?" the investigation will include reviewing evidence within a cell phone, examining the contents of the handbag, inspecting the purse and headshot for fingerprints, establishing the time of death, reviewing DNA samples, testing powder from the handbag at the scene, and discovering the cause of death.

Sleuths working on "No Bones About It!" will analyze the bullet from the found skull, analyze hairs found with the body, examine a seed found in a pocket of the jacket, study a DNA sample from a tooth, test the DNA of an animal's hair, examine a femur bone to establish the height of the victim, compare dental records to the victim and discover the cause of death.

At the end of the exhibit, guests will present their findings in a re-creation of the office of Gil Grissom—the enigmatic CSI head investigator. They will answer a series of multiple choice questions, based on their scientific findings, on touch screens located in this area. After completing these questions, a case summary is generated and guests can match their results to those of expert crime scene investigators!

CSI: The Experience was developed by the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History with support from CBS Consumer Products, the cast and crew of the television show, and the National Science Foundation. This exhibit, geared toward guests ages 12 and up, requires a ticket with a specified entry time. Tickets, which include Museum general admission, are $19 for adults, $17.50 for seniors and $14 for children 3-11. There is a discount for City of Chicago residents. Advance tickets are on sale now at www.msichicago.org or by calling (773) 684-1414. Groups of 20 or more are eligible for a discount when they book in advance.

Chicago Neighborhood Tours

Chicagoans and visitors can dive into spring with Chicago Neighborhood Tours, a division of the Chicago Office of Tourism. Nine half-day excursions invite visitors to explore the rich historic, artistic and cultural heritage of the city's neighborhoods and communities. Neighborhood Tours include Hyde Park & Kenwood, Ukrainian Village, Little Italy, Pullman Historic District and Wicker Park & Bucktown. Special Interest Tours feature the new Chicago's Magnificent Churches tour and the delicious Taste of the Neighborhoods. Tours are scheduled each Saturday through April and May. (Please note: "The White City Tours" scheduled for April 21st and May 12th are sold out.)

During the Wicker Park & Bucktown Neighborhood Tour on April 14th take a closer look at these side-by-side historic neighborhoods. After touring St. Hedwig's Church in Bucktown, enjoy a guided walking tour to view many of the Victorian mansions in Wicker Park. Time is allotted to roam the shops throughout the neighborhood.

On April 28th learn about the architectural styles of two neighboring lakefront communities on the Hyde Park & Kenwood Neighborhood Tour. Highlights of the tour include a visit to the Oriental Institute Museum, a short walk through the University of Chicago's Quadrangle, a visit to St. Thomas the Apostle Church, and a drive past some of the historic mansions and homes in Kenwood.

The Little Italy Neighborhood Tour on May 5th includes an in-depth walking tour of the Taylor Street area, home to generations of Italian families and businesses. Visit the Shrine of Our Lady of Pompeii and continue on a guided tour of the national historic landmark, the Jane Addams Hull-House Museum, the nation's first social settlement house where early Italian immigrants received English language instruction and day care for working mothers.

Enjoy the Ukrainian Village Neighborhood Tour on May 12th and journey to this quiet, Old World neighborhood filled with magnificent churches, ethnic museums and Eastern European restaurants. Stop first at the Ukrainian National Museum and Saints Volodymyr and Olha Church. Continue on to the magnificent Holy Trinity Russian Orthodox Church, designed by Louis Sullivan in 1899.

On May 19th, learn the story of this urban historic district built by railroad magnate George M. Pullman to house workers from his legendary rail car factory on the Pullman Historic District Neighborhood Tour. Highlights of the day will be a guided walking tour of the Pullman Historic Landmark District, including a visit to the Hotel Florence and the Pullman United Methodist Church.

Delve into the great flavors of the city on April 21st and May 19th during the mouthwatering Taste of the Neighborhood Tour. Visitors join ethnic food guide Evelyn Thompson as she leads them on a culinary safari to numerous ethnic restaurants, delis and bakeries throughout the city to sample delectable dishes.

The first of the Summertime Sampler Tours begins on May 31st with Uptown, Andersonville and Lincoln Square Tour. Learn about the culture and history of these three distinct neighborhoods on one three-hour tour.

To make reservations for Chicago Neighborhood Tours, call (312) 742-1190 or visit the Web site at www.ChicagoNeighborhoodTours.com. Tours depart by motor coach from the Chicago Cultural Center, 77 E. Randolph St. at Michigan Ave., at 10 a.m. (check-in at 9:30) and return either at 2 p.m. or 2:30. The cost for each Neighborhood Tour is $25 ($20 for seniors/students) and includes refreshments. The cost for each Special Interest Tour is $50 ($45 for seniors/students) and includes lunch.

Summertime Sampler Tours depart by motor coach from the Chicago Cultural Center at 10 a.m. (check-in at 9:30) returning at 1 p.m. every Thursday from May 31st to Aug. 30th. The cost for each Summertime Sampler Tour is $20 (no additional discounts) and includes a light snack.

ASIAN CARP ELECTRIC BARRIER II STILL NOT OPERATIONAL: I keep harping on the potential for Asian carp to have dramatic impact on the commercial and recreational fishing and boating in the Great Lakes. This is a very serious problem, and the powers that be are dragging their feet on completing the electric barrier in Romeoville, that will supposedly keep the Asian carp from entering Lake Michigan via the Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal.

Barrier I is obsolete and deteriorating; it was supposed to be supplemented with Barrier II several years ago. Ed Landmichl, Sr. has been leading the charge to get the barrier operational, although he and I both feel the Asian carp will find other ways to enter the Great Lakes. To prove that Barrier II is not in operation as claimed, he and a friend visited the sight on March 16th of this year and took a photo clearly showing the electrical cables were not hooked up (see accompanying photo).

What's wrong with this picture? - Ed Landmichl with unattached cables for Asian carp barrier.

Landmichl is pursuing the possible sighting of leaping Asian carp in the Chicago River near Archer Ave. and Halsted St., the area known as "Bubbly Creek" during the Stock Yards era.

ILLINOIS DEER HUNTERS HARVEST NEARLY 200,000 IN 2006-07 SEASON: The harvest total for the Illinois Firearm Deer Season was 115,379, while hunters took 5,939 deer during the Muzzleloader-only Deer Season. Archery hunters harvested a statewide total of 65,170. The late-Winter Antlerless-only Deer Season took 9,075 deer in the 67 counties open for the season.

FISHING INFORMATION BOOKLET: The 2007 Illinois Fishing Information Guide is now available at many IDNR offices, license and permit locations and online at <http://dnr.state.il.us/fish/digest>. Regulations in the 2007 guide are effective April 1, 2007 through March 31, 2008. Illinois Free Fishing Days for 2007 are June 8-11. No license is required at that time, a great way to see if you like fishing.

WING SHOOTING CLINICS: The IDNR and partnering organizations will host a series of wingshooting clinics for beginning shooters and more experienced hunters this spring and summer.

At the free youth-women's clinics, Saturday sessions generally provide instruction for youngsters ages 10-15, while Sunday sessions are used to provide instruction for girls and women ages 10 and older. Youth participants must be at least 4 feet 6 inches tall and weigh at least 75 pounds. Instructors are certified by the National Sporting Clays Association.

Hunter clinics are designed to enhance the wingshooting skills of women and men ages 16 and older. Hunters with wingshooting skill levels from beginner to advanced are encouraged to attend.

A small fee is assessed each hunter clinic participant to cover the cost of clay targets and refreshments. For information, go to <http://dnr.state.il.us>.

BILL SAFEGUARDS HUNTING ON FEDERAL LAND: Legislation to protect quality hunting on federal lands has been introduced in Congress. U.S. Senator Saxby Chambliss (R-Georgia) introduced SB 408, the Hunting Heritage Protection Act. A key element of the bill is a stipulation for "no net loss" of hunting on federal land. Under the provision, the government is directed to maintain, within the confines of the law, current levels of federal hunting lands. It requires the opening of compensatory huntable land if an area is closed to the sport. Senate Bill 408 awaits debate in the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Several states, including Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Mississippi and West Virginia, have recently passed "no net loss" laws that protect state hunting land. Sportsmen's grassroots support paid off in each of these states, and is needed to ensure passage of SB 408.

Take Action! Sportsmen should contact their U.S. Senators. Let them know SB 408 is important for the future of hunting and will help ensure America's outdoor heritage for years to come. To find your Senator, call (202) 224-3121.

Free Boating Safety Course

With spring underway, Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources (IDNR) Acting Director Sam Flood urges individuals planning to spend time out on the water to participate in one of the department's free boating safety education courses. The free courses provide an important and potentially lifesaving review of boating laws and regulations and instruction on safe and attentive boating.

Safety education courses are a key to the state's boating safety effort. Nationwide, nearly 90 percent of all reported fatalities on boats involved boat operators who had not received boating safety instruction.

People between 12-18 years of age who operate a motorized watercraft by themselves are required by law to possess a boating safety certificate. State law also requires that anyone under the age of 13 must wear a life jacket while aboard any watercraft under 26 feet in length at all times the boat is underway, unless they are below deck in an enclosed cabin or operating on private property. And all persons, regardless of age, are required to wear a life jacket while operating a personal watercraft or jet ski.

Statistics compiled by the IDNR Office of Law Enforcement show that 17 people died and 66 other people were injured in boating-related accidents on Illinois waters in 2006. There were a total of 78 boating accidents involving 118 watercraft last year.

In 2005, there were 16 fatalities and 100 others who were injured in 115 boating accidents involving 152 vessels.

Accident reports indicate that of the 17 people who died in Illinois boating accidents in 2006, 11 may have survived had they been wearing a life jacket. In those fatal accidents, all 17 people who died were on boats in which the boat operator either had not taken or it was not known whether they had taken a formal boat safety education course.

Among the primary causes of boating accidents are careless or reckless operation, operator inattention, equipment failure, hazardous water conditions and alcohol use.

Safety course schedules are available by phoning (800) 832-2599 or by checking the IDNR web site at <http://www.dnr.state.il.us>. Illinois also offers an online boat safety education course through the IDNR web site at <http://dnr.state.il.us>. There is a $15 fee charged for the online course.

National Safe Boating Week is observed each year just before the Memorial Day holiday. This year's National Safe Boating Week observance is May 19th to 25th.

Bulldogs Finish Strong At National Tournament

The South Suburban College (SSC) Men's Basketball Team placed 7th in the nation after a hard fought 64-58 win over Des Moines Area Community College (DACC) at the NJCAA National Tournament in Danville, IL. Des Moines came into the game defensively ranked #1 in the nation, and it was evident in the first half as they held the Bulldogs scoreless for the first 5:30 of the game. DACC led by as many as 13 points and held a 32-23 halftime lead. SSC shot just 7 of 28 in the first half. The Bulldogs started to find their offense in the second half, however, as they returned to score 41 points to seal the victory.

SSC was led in scoring by Kris Harris with 29 points. Harris was 12 for 13 from the foul line and hit a 3-pointer with 53 seconds remaining in the game to give the Bulldogs the lead for good at 57-55. Larry Swann chipped in 9 points, and overall nine Bulldogs got into the scoring column. SSC came into the game defensively ranked 9th in the country, and it was a steal by Elijah Muhammad Cunningham with 20 seconds left and the Bulldogs holding a 60-58 lead that sealed the victory.

"It was a great win for the college and our basketball program," said SSC Head Coach John Pigatti. "DMAC is a great program rich in basketball tradition, and to finish 7th in the nation is quite a feat. I am extremely proud of our players and staff for their efforts all year."

SSC opened the tournament with a loss last Wednesday against defending national champs Cecil Community College by the score of 73-69. The Bulldogs bounced back on Thursday with a 100-89 victory over Hamilton Community College, NE, to set the stage for Saturday's match-up.

Pigatti added, "To come back and win two games in the national tournament after the tough loss to Cecil is a credit to the character of these players. Going 2-1 here and ending the season with a victory makes the entire experience a positive one."

The 2007 campaign was John Pigatti's first year as Head Coach of the Bulldogs. The future looks bright for a Men's Basketball program that earned their first national tournament berth since 1987. For more national tournament news, visit <http://www.njcaa.org/>.

Join March Of Dimes WalkAmerica

On Sunday, April 29th, thousands of volunteers and families throughout the Chicago area will walk to save premature babies in the 37th annual March of Dimes WalkAmerica. The first and best-loved charity walk event in the nation, WalkAmerica remains March of Dimes largest national fundraising event! Last year, over 20,000 walkers in Illinois raised more than $3.2 million to help fund lifesaving research to prevent birth defects, premature birth and infant mortality.

There are six WalkAmerica walksites in the Chicagoland area, including the largest at Grant Park in Chicago. The other start/finish locations include: Naperville River Walk in Naperville, Pottawatomie Park in St. Charles, Sunset Woods in Highland Park, Busse Woods in Schaumburg, and Yankee Woods in Tinley Park. At each location the Walk begins at 9 a.m. Along with fresh air, walkers will find entertainment, refreshments and learn more about the March of Dimes mission along the route.

Funds raised through WalkAmerica will support research and education for March of Dimes national Prematurity Campaign. Prematurity is a bigger problem than most people realize. This year, more than 500,000 babies will be born premature. Of those babies that survive a premature birth, many will face lifelong health problems, such as blindness, deafness and mental retardation. In Illinois more than 23,300 babies are born premature every year.

Prematurity is the leading cause of death in the first month of life. Since 1981, there has been a 27% increase in the rate of preterm birth in the United States. There is no known cause for nearly 50% of these premature births. In response to this growing problem, the March of Dimes launched a nationwide multimillion dollar campaign to raise public awareness and reduce rates of preterm birth.

March of Dimes WalkAmerica has raised more than $1 billion for healthy babies since it began in 1970. Ninety-two cents of every dollar raised in Illinois goes into community service, advocacy, research and education programs to help all babies have a healthy start in life.

Locally, the March of Dimes Illinois Chapter provides over $280,000 in community grant funding to local hospitals and community organizations for direct service programs, throughout the state. Additionally, WalkAmerica proceeds will be directed toward advocating for expanded health care benefits for parents and children in the state of Illinois through KidCare and expanding newborn screening.

Building on our pioneering history in genetics research, the March of Dimes continues to invest in medical research. Over $2,500,000 in research grants comes to Illinois researchers, all working to improve healthy outcomes for babies.

The Greater Chicago Executive WalkAmerica Committee is chaired by Ed Gallagher, TCF Senior Vice President/Director of Human Resources at TCF Bank. Furthermore, the 2007 March of Dimes WalkAmerica Ambassador Family for the lakefront walk site is the Hanson Family. They have 2 1/2 year old twin girls, Alexandra and Ryan, who were born two months premature.

The 2007 national WalkAmerica sponsors are CIGNA, Continental Airlines, Famous Footwear, Farmers, FedEx and Kmart. Kmart is March of Dimes number one corporate partner having raised more than $55.5 million to save babies. Additional national sponsorship is provided by Discovery Health, Grain Foods Foundation, Mead Johnson Nutritionals and Outdoor Services. Local sponsors are Advocate Good Samaritan Hospital, CIGNA, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Illinois, Ernst & Young, FedEx, LaSalle Bank Corporation, Northwestern Memorial Hospital and TCF Bank. In-kind and media sponsors include Absopure, American Airlines, Jewel, and NBC5/Telemundo.

For Walk locations and to find out how to participate in WalkAmerica, call the March of Dimes at 1-800-244-WALK or online at www.walkamerica.org.

The March of Dimes is a national voluntary health agency whose mission is to improve the health of babies by preventing birth defects, premature birth and infant mortality. Founded in 1938, the March of Dimes funds programs of research, community services, education, and advocacy to save babies and in 2003 launched a campaign to address the increasing rate of premature birth. For more information, visit the March of Dimes Web site at marchofdimes.com or its Spanish language Web site at nacer-sano.org.

Watercolor Classes

Afternoon and evening sessions of Watercolor Classes will begin at The Log Cabin Center for the Arts, 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park, on Wednesday and Thursday, April 11th and 12th.

The watercolor classes feature expert critique and guidance in composition, values, textures, negative painting, brush stroke usage, and more. A 6:30 p.m. Wednesday class, taught by Lenox Wallace, begins April 11th and features structured lessons for beginning watercolorists. A 6:30 p.m. Thursday class, also taught by Wallace, begins April 12th and is an ongoing class of advanced painters, each working individually with an end of class critique by the instructor. A 1 p.m. Thursday class, taught by Lois Hrejsa, begins April 19th and provides structure for beginning painters and ongoing guidance and critique for experienced watercolorists.

Watercolor classes cost $95 for a six-week session. Advance registration is required. For further information, call (708) 361-3650.

HOLY WEEK SCHEDULE

Maundy Thursday, April 5 - 7:30 p.m.

Finally, we hear the words of forgiveness that we've been missing in Lent. We remember the events of Jesus' last hours by washing feet and eating the Holy Supper.

Good Friday, April 6, 7:30 p.m.

On this night we read the story of the crucifixion, or the Passion. We pray for our world, and meditate on the mystery of the cross and salvation.

Easter Vigil, Saturday, April 7, 8:00 p.m.

On this night, we strike new fire, a sign of the first work of the Creator, and the one who is the Light of the World.
We tell some of our "family stories" from the Old Testament, and renew our baptism

Easter Sunday, April 8, at 10:30 a.m.

Former Evergreen Park Trustee Dies

The Village of Evergreen Park is mourning the death of former Village Trustee Ruth Gilke who was a member of the Board of Trustees for eight years. Gilke was the first female trustee in Evergreen Park.

She was dissatisfied with the state of village politics when her husband, Paul, talked her into running for office. Gilke formed the Concerned Citizens of Evergreen Park with a full slate of five candidates. Ms. Gilke was elected along with Village Clerk Cathy Aparo. Both were on the board from 1973 to 1981.

Gilke and her husband lived in Evergreen Park for 45 years before moving to Schaumburg where she died of complications from Alzheimer's Disease at the Sunrise of Schaumburg senior living community on March 20th. She was 73.

Gilke was a member of the League of Women Voters since the mid-1960's. After she became a member, she attended Wilson Junior College (now Kennedy-King College) and was a member of the Citizen's committee. She became a public speaker to local organization where she encouraged support for the establishment of Moraine Valley Community College in Palos Hills. She was also a reporter for the Southtown Economist.

On the Village Board, Gilke backed a parental responsibility act that passed and proposed that the village hire an employee to plan meeting and activities for senior citizens.

After losing the election in 1981, Gilke went to work at the First National Bank of Evergreen Park.

Besides her husband, Paul, Gilke, she is survived by her children Paula Babcock, Lisa Ochoa, and Matthew and nine grandchildren. Services will be held at 11 a.m. on Saturday at the Trinity United Methodist Church, 605 W. Golf Rd. in Mt. Prospect.

Durbin Chairs Confirmation Hearing For Judge Kapala

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) introduced Judge Frederick Kapala to the Senate Judiciary Committee as he began his confirmation process. Kapala has been nominated to fill the sole federal judgeship in Rockford, IL. Kapala's name was sent to the President for his consideration by former Speaker Dennis Hastert in consultation with Durbin and Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL).

Kapala has served with distinction as a state court judge in Illinois for the past quarter century. From 1982 to 2001, he was a circuit court judge in Rockford, serving over the years as the presiding judge of the criminal division and the juvenile court. In 2001, he was elevated to the Illinois Appellate Court, and he has served on that court - the second highest state court in Illinois - for the past six years.

Kapala served in the United States Army, both in active and reserve duty, from 1970 to 1980, after attaining the rank of Captain. He graduated from the University of Illinois law school and Marquette University. Before he put on a judicial robe in 1982, Judge Kapala worked in private practice and served as a Special Assistant Attorney General in the Illinois Attorney General's office prosecuting consumer fraud complaints. He has been an active member of over two dozen community groups and legal associations, and he has been a community leader in organizations that have helped at-risk children and families, the mentally ill, and people dealing with alcoholism. Kapala and his wife currently reside in Rockford with their two daughters.

"Judge Kapala is an outstanding public servant in the Rockford community," said Durbin. "He is a highly respected judge with a reputation for fairness that makes him an excellent choice for the U.S. district court. I was happy to join my colleagues in submitting his name to the President to fill this important vacancy and look forward to voting for him on the Senate floor."

The President traditionally respects the wishes of a home-state senator of his own party in making federal district court nominations. In cases where both U.S. senators are of the opposite party from the President, he usually consults with the highest ranking elected official of his own party. The State of Illinois has a long tradition of seeking bipartisan cooperation in the recommendation of federal district court nominees for Presidential consideration.

Quilt Lovers Luncheon

Quilt lovers are invited to a program and luncheon at The Center, 12700 Southwest Highway in Palos Park, on Tuesday, April 10th.

Quilter/artist Denise Dulzo will display her handmade quilts and discuss the classic folk art of quilt-making. Dulzo creates both traditional quilts and artistic freeform three-dimensional quilts.

The luncheon begins at 12 noon at a cost of $14 per person, and requires advance reservations. The 1 until 2 p.m. program will follow the luncheon. For reservations and further information, interested persons should call The Center at (708) 361-3650.

Join the Friends of the Calumet-Sag Trail on Tuesday, April 10, at 7 p.m. at the Blue Island Public Library, 2433 York Street, to discover how the proposed 26-mile shared-use trail can transform the Chicago Southland. This month, the Friends of the Calumet-Sag Trail will discuss the proposed trail alignment and upcoming trail- and community-related activities. The Blue Island Public Library is at York Street, just west of Western Ave., and the Friends of the Calumet-Sag Trail meeting is open to the public.

For additional information, call (312) 427-3325, ext. 226 or go to <http://calsagtrail.org>.

Harris Sponsors Free Homebuyers Seminars

Harris will be sponsoring free "Homebuyer Workshop" seminars in communities across Chicagoland. The bank's experts will be offering insights and advice for first time homeowners. Topics discussed include, but are not limited to: How to choose a mortgage loan program; Low down payment mortgage options; Advantages of mortgage pre-approval; and Tax advantages of homeownership.

The following free seminars will take place on April 14th and 17th.

On April 14th from 10 a.m. to noon Harris Kenwood, 901 E. 47th St., will hold a workshop sponsored by Residential Mortgage Sales and Harris Kenwood.

Also on April 14th there will be a workshop at the Chicago Public Library, Brighton Park Branch, 4314 S. Archer Ave. from 10 a.m. to noon sponsored by Residential Mortgage Sales and the Chicago Public Library.

Harris Joliet-Loekport, 78 N. Chicago St., will host the seminar on April 17th from 7 to 9 p.m. This event is sponsored by Residential Mortgage Sales and Harris Joliet-Loekport.

Aglow Speaker

The Oak Lawn Chapter of Aglow International will meet on Thursday, April 12th at Mama Luigi's Restaurant, 7500 S. Harlem Ave., Bridgeview.

The speaker for April is Father Dimitri Sala (pictured), a Franciscan Friar-Priest. His full time Evangelical and Apostolic ministry is part of a life of prayer.

Based in Chicago, he has had many retreats, apostolic leadership workshops, healing services and missions including a summer street ministry. With his team, he has ministered to many ages, denominations, religious and laity groups.

Father Dimitri has been a featured speaker in regional and national conferences and has appeared on Christian television. His articles have also been published in pamphlets as part of his ministry. He is on fire for God who is always faithful.

Dinner tickets at $13 will be available at 6:30 p.m. at the door. Dinner is served promptly at 7 p.m. Reservations are required by April 9th. For additional information and reservations call June at (708) 424-1656.

Chapter And Verse: Connecting To Poetry

In celebration of National Poetry Month, the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library presents Chapter and Verse: Connecting to Poetry in the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library on display now through September. This temporary exhibit highlights poetry found in the collection of the library as well as popular Illinois poets.

Featured in the exhibit are Illinois poet Vachel Lindsay's poetry and art. On display are "The Tree of Laughing Bells," "The Lotus and the Rose" and the series of six "Village Improvement Parade" images in its collection as well as the version of "Lucifer" in the library's collection, "Machinery," and several smaller sketches. Also in display is the handwritten version of "Abraham Lincoln Walks at Midnight" dated Nov. 19, 1930 and signed by Lindsay.

The exhibit also features the four Poet Laureates of Illinois. Four panels celebrate the work of Howard B. Austin, honored by Gov. Henry Horner in 1936, Carl Sandburg and Gwendolyn Brooks, both appointed by Gov. Otto Kerner, in 1962 and 1968, and Kevin Stein, the current Poet Laureate, appointed by Gov. Rod Blagojevich in 2003. Austin's family kindly assisted the library in its efforts to gather the works of this largely unpublished Central Illinois poet whose good-natured address in song to Gov. Horner at a Democratic Ladies Meeting was rewarded with the Poet Laureate designation.

Also on display is the oldest item in the exhibit, a 1792 broadside celebrating the courage of officers and soldiers killed in a conflict titled "The Columbian Tragedy," as well as a tribute to the state song, "Illinois, Illinois."

A selection of manuscript poems is also displayed, including a Valentine's Day composition by a young Susan Lawrence Dana. Poetry books bound in gilt-lettered leather, marbled paper and wood, and the delightful miniature books published by publisher Ward Schori of Evanston, Illinois are among the other items in the collection.

Campaign songs, political satire and tributes written to celebrate the passing of Ulysses S. Grant and other Illinois citizens are there, as well as poetry and images from the American Civil War. A collection of "carrier's addresses" is on display from 19th century newspapers. These addresses accompanied the New Year's Day newspaper and gave a digest of the year just passed and the thoughts on the year just begun. Cases on the second floor have also been used to present poems from around the state.

The library will be scheduling additional programming to coincide with the exhibit through its closing in the fall.

The items in the exhibit include selections from the Published Collection, the Audio-Visual Collection, and the Manuscripts Collection of the Illinois historical materials.

The Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information, visit www.alplm.org.

Mental Illness Support Group

The NAMI (National Alliance on Mental Illness) support group for relatives and friends of individuals with serious mental illness (brain disorders) will be held at 7 p.m., Thursday, April 12th, at the Church of Christ, 206th and Crawford, Matteson.

Sponsored by the local affiliate of the National Alliance on Mental Illness, the meeting provides participants with an opportunity to meet others in similar circumstances and discuss concerns, share insights and information, as well as messages of comfort and hope.

Led by experienced volunteers, the group meeting is held on the second Thursday of the month throughout the year at the same time and location. There is no charge to attend. For additional information about this meeting or about NAMI and local activities, call John Rowley at (708) 798-3862.

40th Anniversary Of The 1967 Tornado

Ask nearly any longtime Oak Lawn resident where they were on April 21, 1967 and you will hear a story of fear, hope, devastation, service or relief. To honor the 40th anniversary of the tornado that ripped through the Village of Oak Lawn and other regions of the southwest Chicago area, the Oak Lawn Public Library has partnered with Oak Lawn Community High School to offer a series of free public programs.

- Tornadoes of Northeast Illinois - 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 19th at the library, 5300 W. 95th St. - Local historian Betsy Green discusses memorable tornadoes from the last 125 years in Chicago and the suburbs, including the 1967 Oak Lawn tornado.
- Local History Room Grand Opening - 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, April 21st and 1 to 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 22nd at the library - Be among the first to see the library's new Local History Room. View an exhibit of photographs, newspaper articles and memorabilia from the 1967 tornado. Browse the resources available to patrons researching Oak Lawn history. Light refreshments.
- 1967 Tornado History Presentation - 12 noon on Saturday, April 21st at the library - The library's new Local History Coordinator, Dr. Maureen Gilligan, will narrate a slide show presentation examining features in their tornado anniversary exhibit and moderate a short discussion. Learn about that fateful day through eyewitness accounts, storm survivor stories, newspaper coverage, film clips, photographs and other records maintained in the library's local history archives.

Tornado Sculpture Dedication - 2 p.m. on Saturday, April 21st at Oak Lawn Community High School, 95th St. and Southwest Highway - As one of the many buildings struck by the 1967 tornado, the high school will unveil a student-created sculpture commemorating the destruction and rebuilding of their pool and gymnasium. Distinguished ceremony speakers will include Michael Riordan, OLCHS Principal; Paul Merzlock, Lead Forecaster, National Weather Service Chicago; Skip Sullivan OLCHS staff member and alumnus; Jim Purpura, National Weather Service Meteorologist-in-Charge and OLCHS alumnus; and Dave Heilmann, Oak Lawn Mayor. Survivors will have an opportunity to record their stories on video and audio for the school's web site archives. Light refreshments. Commemorative polo shirts will be available for purchase. On April 21st, OLCHS has generously agreed to provide limited free shuttle service between the library and the high school from 1 to 4 p.m. For details, call (708) 741-5857.

Tornado Memories Open Mic - 1:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 22nd at the library - Do you have a firsthand experience to share? Was your life affected by the 1967 Oak Lawn tornado? Did you help out with rescue and cleanup efforts? Members of the community are invited to share their memories at this open mic forum. Sign in at the door to speak. Five-minute time limit. This event will be videotaped.

For more information, call the library at (708) 422-4990 or visit the web site, www.oaklawnlibrary.org.

Free Public Mental Health Seminar

NAMI Southwest is sponsoring a free public seminar on Tuesday, April 17th at 7:30 p.m. at Pilgrim Faith United Church of Christ, 9411 S. 51st Ave. The speaker will be Rosie Bradley, Director of Nursing at Central Plaza Residential Home. She will discuss the progress in treatments of mental illness over the years and the scope of rehabilitative care offered at long-term care facilities today.

NAMI Southwest is a group of families, friends, consumers and professionals providing support, education and advocacy. Its purpose is to eradicate mental illness and improve the quality of life for those suffering from these diseases. We hold monthly support group meetings for families of persons with mental illness on the first Tuesday of each month at 7:45 p.m. at Pilgrim Faith United Church of Christ and Sunshine Club socialization meetings on the third Friday of each month at 6:30 p.m. at Oakview Center.

If you would like to have more information on the upcoming speakers meeting and support services for families of persons with mental illness, please feel free to contact NAMI Southwest at (708) 425-0925.

Knitting Class

The Worth Township Senior Knitting Class will be starting again on May 3rd. Classes are held in the Worth Township Center, 11601 S. Pulaski, Alsip. This will be a 12 week course. Call (708) 371-2900, Ext. 28 to register or if you have any questions.

Changes In Medicare Seminar

A Seminar/Luncheon sponsored by Thrivent Financial for Lutherans will be held at St. Paul Lutheran Church (gym), 4660 W. 94th St. on Wednesday, April 11th starting at 10:30 a.m. The seminar, "Changes in Medicare for 2007" will address the changes in co-pays, premiums and how it affects seniors.

Call Alan Moravec at (773) 550-1378 to make a reservation. Speakers include Attorney James Scheibel, Laura Garcia from Medicare and Craig Hitchcock, Regional Director of John Hancock on where Medicare stops.

Scholastic Bowl Teams Win Title

Both the varsity and junior varsity Scholastic Bowl teams from Shepard High School recently captured conference championships of the South Suburban Conference. For the varsity, it was the team's second straight conference title.

"Coaching these kids is a real pleasure," said varsity coach and science teacher Joey Sparenberg. "When I see them answering some of the questions presented to them during the meets, I am completely amazed as to how smart our kids are at Shepard. I attribute our winning record to the talent and effort of the kids."

Overall, the varsity team posted a record of 17-4 at all competitions. They won the SSC title and just missed advancing to the state finals by placing second out of six teams at the IHSA sectional. The junior varsity, coached by English teacher Christine Adduci, posted a perfect record of 17-0.

Individual highlights include players Nick Moeller and Connor Reynolds earning All-South Suburban Conference honors.

Scholastic Bowl is an academic competition in which teams of students representing different schools answer questions relating to science, math, social sciences and other subjects in a format resembling the game show "Jeopardy." Points are awarded for correct answers. The team accumulating the most points wins a meet.

Elks Celebrate 45 Years Of Service

In addition to swearing in new officers and St. Patrick's events the Oak Lawn Elks #2254 celebrated 45 years of service to the community.

Chartered in 1962, the Elks started out at 5301 W. 95th St. In September 1970, the lodge moved to its present location at 10720 S. Central, Chicago Ridge. Originally chartered with 710 members and through the years a few thousand have come and gone. Presently the lodge is 800 plus members strong and always looking for new members.

Over the years the lodge has supported everything from veterans, needy children, Boy Scouts and the state's large project "Crippled Children." They started helping when the tornado came through Oak Lawn with a $10,000 cash donation to help the victims and families.

Local Irish Dancers added to the lodge's birthday and installation celebration.

The lodge supports a variety of other charities and causes. During the holidays the Elks have been supplying food and toys to 105 local families. The Crippled Children Program and service to the veterans at Manteno are year around projects. The Elks are all about helping people. "We care and we share," according to Exalted Ruler, Tim Allen.

The new officers sworn in during installation were Tim Allen, Exalted Ruler-Elect; Dick Moran, Esteemed Leading Knight; Bill Holm, Esteemed Loyal Knight; Kellie Hummel, Esteemed Lecturing Knight; John Finn, Secretary; Norman Gates, Treasurer; Bob Cook, Trustee and Rich Means, Tiler. Also Don Carstens, Inner Guard; Patricia Carstens, Chaplain; and John Moesle, Esquire, who were chosen by the Exalted Ruler-Elect.

Various plaques were also awarded to Ron Green, Elk of the Year; John Joyce, Citizen of the Year and Special Awards to Mary Livingstone, Kellie Hummel, and Bob Cook.

To the Voters of High School District Number 229

A los votantes del Distrito de Escuelas Secundarias Número 229

"Shall the limiting rate under the Property Tax Extension Limitation Law for Oak Lawn Community High School District Number 229, Cook County, Illinois, be increased by an additional amount equal to .22% above the limiting rate for levy year 2005 and be equal to 1.791% of the equalized assessed value of the taxable property therein for levy years 2006, 2007, 2008 and 2009?"

(1) The approximate amount of taxes extendable at the most recently extended limiting rate is $14,232,984, and the approximate amount of taxes extendable if the proposition is approved is $16,226,145.

(2) For the 2006 levy year the approximate amount of the additional tax extendable against property containing a single family residence and having a fair market value at the time of the referendum of $100,000 is estimated to be $36.20.

(3) Based upon an average annual percentage increase in the market value of such property of 0.50%, the approximate amount of the additional tax extendable against such property for the 2007 levy year is estimated to be $60.67, for the 2008 levy year is estimated to be $66.78 and for the 2009 levy year is estimated to be $82.81.

(4) If the proposition is approved, the aggregate extension for 2006, 2007, 2008 and 2009 will be determined by the limiting rate set forth in the proposition, rather than the otherwise applicable limiting rate calculated under the provisions of the Property Tax Extension Limitation Law (commonly known as the Property Tax Cap Law).

"(Debe la tasa limitativa bajo la Ley de Limitación de Extensión al Impuesto sobre la Propiedad para el Distrito Comunitario de Escuelas Secundarias de Oak Lawn Número 229, Condado de Cook, Illinois, aumentarse por un monto adicional igual al 0.22% sobre la tasa limitativa para el año fiscal 2005 y ser igual al 1.791% del valor avaluado equiparado de la propiedad gravable allí para los años fiscales 2006, 2007, 2008 y 2009?"

(1) El monto aproximado de impuestos extendibles bajo la tasa limitativa extendida más recientemente es $14,232,984, y el monto aproximado de impuestos extendibles si la proposición es aprobada es de $16,226,145.

(2) Para el año fiscal 2006, se calcula que el monto aproximado del impuesto adicional extendible contra una propiedad que contiene una residencia unifamiliar y que tenga un valor justo de mercado al momento del referéndum de $100,000 es de $36.20.

(3) Basado en un aumento del porcentaje anual promedio del valor de mercado de dicha propiedad del 0.50%, se calcula que el monto aproximado del impuesto adicional extendible contra dicha propiedad para el año fiscal 2007 será de $60.67, para el año fiscal 2008 se calcula que será de $66.78 y para el año fiscal 2009 se calcula que será de $82.81.

(4) Si se aprueba la proposición, la extensión agregada para los años fiscales 2006, 2007, 2008 y 2009 se determinará por la tasa limitativa establecida en la proposición, en lugar de la tasa limitativa que sería aplicable calculada bajo las disposiciones de la Ley de Limitación de Extensión al Impuesto sobre la Propiedad (comúnmente denominada Ley de Capitalización del Impuesto sobre la Propiedad).

Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

by
Lucinda K. Lysen, RD, RN, BSN

THE LATEST ON FOOD AND YOUR JOINTS

If you're reading newspapers and magazines regularly these days, you will notice a lot more on what to do for aching joints when it comes to eating the right foods. What scientists have discovered is that in some cases, quite a bit can be done with food and supplements to curb the inflammation that arthritis can cause.

RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS

I pay particular interest to RA because I have it. I can tell you also that what is listed here seems to truly work for me, in the right "doses." We all, however, have different "doses," depending on our size (weight), exercise level, metabolism, etc. There are no miracle answers to the formula.

Eat fish. Omega-3 fish oil is a powerful anti-inflammatory, as I have indicated in other columns. Recent Danish research shows that people who ate an extra ounce of fatty fish like salmon a day, cut their risk of developing RA by almost 50 percent.

Cut meat. In other research, meat promoted inflammation and RA, while vegetables helped to deter it, and a vegetarian diet cut symptoms.

Take fish oil and olive oil. High doses of fish oil or fish oil and olive oil cut joint pain, morning stiffness, and fatigue, and added handgrip strength a recent study documented. Daily doses: 3000 mg of fish oil and 2 teaspoons of olive oil. See a doctor before taking mega doses of fish oil.

FOR OSTEOARTHRITIS

Lose weight. In obese arthritis, a 10 percent weight loss boosted knee joint function by almost 30 percent.

Get antioxidants. The Arthritis Foundation says that antioxidants and vitamins may fight OA, although evidence is mixed. In one study, a high intake of vitamin C-rich foods cut the risk of cartilage loss and progressive knee pain by over two-thirds.

Try fish oil. Doses are unclear.

Take supplements. The best bet for relieving moderate to severe knee pain, according to a recent National Institutes for Health study: glucosamine-chondroitin. It helped 80 percent of patients; a placebo helped 54 percent. Daily dose: 1500 mg glucosamine hydrochloride and 1200 mg chondroitin sulfate. Contrary to some reports, it did not raise blood glucose, cholesterol, or blood pressure.

Alzheimer's Disease In U. S. Rises

The Alzheimer's Association reports that in 2007 there are now more than 5 million people in the United States living with Alzheimer's disease. This number includes 4.9 million people over the age of 65 and between 200,000 and 500,000 people under age 65 with early-onset Alzheimer's disease and other dementias. This is a 10 percent increase from the previous prevalence nationwide estimate of 4.5 million.

Increasing age is the greatest risk factor for Alzheimer's, and with 78 million baby boomers beginning to turn 60 last year, it is estimated that someone in America develops Alzheimer's every 72 seconds; by 2050 it will be every 33 seconds.

These new estimates, as well as other data concerning the disease and its effects in the report, "2007 Alzheimer's Disease Facts and Figures," are issued today as hundreds of advocates gather in Washington, D.C., for the Alzheimer's Association's annual Public Policy Forum and a hearing chaired by Sen. Barbara Mikulski.

The report details the escalation of Alzheimer's disease that now is the seventh leading cause of death in the U. S. and the fifth leading cause of death for those over age 65. It also includes data that convey the burden that Alzheimer's imposes on individuals, families, state and federal governments, businesses, and the nation's health care system. For example: Without a cure or effective treatments to delay the onset or progression of Alzheimer's, the prevalence could soar to 7.7 million people with the disease by 2030, which is more than the population of 140 of the 236 United Nations countries.

By 2050, as many as 16 million Americans could have Alzheimer's, more than the current total population of Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles and New York City combined.

In 2005, it is estimated that unpaid caregivers of people with Alzheimer's and other dementias provided 8.5 billion hours of care, valued at almost $83 billion. In Illinois, caregivers provided 309,000,000 hours of unpaid care at a value of $3 billion.

As the prevalence impact of Alzheimer's grows, so does the cost to the nation. The direct and indirect costs of Alzheimer's and other dementias amount to more than $148 billion annually, which is more than the annual sales of any retailer in the world excluding Wal-Mart.

"Alzheimer's Disease Facts and Figures clearly shows the tremendous impact this disease is having on the nation; and with the projected growth of the disease, the collective impact on individuals, families, Medicare, Medicaid, and businesses will be even greater," says Kent Barnheiser, president and CEO of the Alzheimer's Association - Greater Illinois Chapter.

"However there is hope," he said. "Currently, there are nine drugs in Phase III clinical trials for Alzheimer's, several of which show great promise to slow or stop the progression of the disease. This, combined with advancements in diagnostic tools, has the potential to change the landscape of Alzheimer's."

"We must make the fight against Alzheimer's a national priority before it's too late," Barnheiser said. "The absence of effective disease modifying drugs, coupled with an aging population, makes Alzheimer's the health care crisis of the 21st century."

According to the latest statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, from 2000-2004 death rates have declined for most major diseases -- heart disease (-8 percent), breast cancer (-2.6 percent), prostate cancer (-6.3 percent) and stroke (-10.4 percent), while Alzheimer's disease deaths continue to trend upward, increasing 33 percent during that period.

Medicare currently spends nearly three times as much for people with Alzheimer's and other dementias than for the average Medicare beneficiary. Medicare costs are projected to double from $91 billion in 2005 to more than $189 billion by 2015, more than the current gross national product of 86 percent of the world's countries. In 2005, state and federal Medicaid spending for nursing home and home care for people with Alzheimer's and other dementias was estimated at $21 billion; that number is projected to increase to $27 billion by 2015.

Alzheimer's is a progressive disease that destroys brain cells, memory and a person's ability to learn, reason, make judgments, communicate and carry out daily activities. The Alzheimer's Association -

Greater Illinois Chapter serves 68 counties in Illinois with offices in Bloomington, Carterville, Chicago, Joliet, Rockford, Skokie and Springfield. For more information, visit www.alz.org/illinois or call (800) 272-3900.

Seek Chronic Sinusitis Sufferers

The University of Chicago Medical Center is looking for people with chronic sinusitis and/or nasal polyps to participate in a six-month research study.

The National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases says one in seven people in the U.S. suffer from chronic sinusitis, which is a frequent or ongoing inflammation of the air-filled spaces behind the forehead, cheeks and eyes. Those with chronic sinusitis often test positive for allergies and may have nasal polyps, a deviated septum, or other aggravating factors.

Some people manage the symptoms fairly effectively with oral decongestants, steroidal nasal sprays or oral steroids. Others continue to suffer in spite of everything they've tried.

Dr. Robert Naclerio, Chief of Otolaryngology - Head and Neck Surgery, at University of Chicago Medical Center, says there's a segment of the population with chronic sinusitis that has difficulty breathing, is losing its sense of smell, or continues to experience sinus pain in spite of treatment, which is why these people are looking at alternative methods of treatment.

The University of Chicago Medical Center research study is evaluating the use of a study drug that has proven successful in treating severe asthma and which may be successful in treating chronic sinusitis.

Study subjects receive an injection at the University of Chicago Medical Center every two to four weeks for six months. Frequency depends upon their weight and the level of antibody in the blood (antibodies are proteins manufactured by the body to neutralize foreign proteins in the body). Half of the subjects will receive a placebo. Half will receive the study drug. Participants are not required to give up whatever other treatments they are undergoing for chronic sinusitis during the study.

"We realize the prospect of taking a placebo is disheartening, but this study will really be of interest to those whose symptoms are incredibly bothersome in spite of treatment," says Dr. Naclerio. "There are many people out there seeking other options, because what's available isn't working for them."

People interested in learning more about the research study should call (773) 702-5889 for details or email Marcy deTineo at madetineo@surgery.bsd.uchicago.edu.

Uses 'Team' Approach To Help Patients Manage Heart Failure

According to the American Heart Association, nearly five million Americans are living with congestive heart failure, also known as heart failure. It is a chronic, long-term condition in which your heart can no longer pump enough blood to the rest of the body. It does not mean, however, that your heart has stopped or is about to stop working.

While there is no cure for heart failure, there is hope for people who have this life-threatening condition. Heart failure patients can live a full and enjoyable life with the right treatment and attention to their lifestyle, says Stacie Ward, RN, MS, CCNS, supervisor of the St. Francis Heart Failure Clinic.

"We are trying to improve the patient's quality of life and decrease hospital admissions by offering a more comprehensive approach toward managing their heart failure," Ward said. "Intravenous therapy for heart failure is only one part of the disease management. There are many other components."

At St. Francis, health care experts take a "team" approach to educate and help patients manage their heart failure. This involves creating an ongoing dialogue between the patient, their family members, the primary care physician, cardiologist and hospital staff.

"We (at St. Francis) are the hub of the team," she said. "We ensure everyone is notified of the patient's status."

Self-management is crucial in managing heart failure, Ward said. At the St. Francis Heart Failure Clinic, a customized management program is designed for each patient.

"We do an entire assessment of the patient, including their lab work, medical and surgical history, salt and fluid intake, and much more," Ward explained. "We need to make sure they are in a wellness state. As they feel better, they are more eager to learn and more inclined to manage their heart failure."

Patients are taught how to manage their diet, fluid intake, body weight and make any necessary changes in their lifestyle and exercise program. They learn the importance of complying with their prescribed medication, management program, testing and follow-up visits.

"Heart failure is an under-managed disease, and education is the most important thing," Ward said. "Education equals control for the patient."

L. Tammy Duckworth, director of the Illinois Department of Veterans' Affairs, and Lt. Governor Pat Quinn on March 30th joined the Illinois Lottery to unveil a new Veterans Cash Lottery Ticket. Two for the Dough. The first four Veterans Cash grant recipients, Braveheart Therapeutic Riding Center, Catholic Charities' St. Leo Campus, the Midwest Shelter for Homeless Veterans and the American Legion, were also announced at the event. Combined, these four organizations will be receiving over $380,000 to help provide a wide range of services to Illinois veterans including health care, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder treatment, disability benefits, and housing assistance.

The Veterans Cash lottery introduced in Feb. 2006 is the first lottery ticket where 100 percent of proceeds go to support Illinois veterans. Proceeds from the sale of this ticket are deposited into an interest bearing account in the State Treasury called the Illinois Veterans Assistance Fund. The Illinois General Assembly appropriates this money solely to IDVA who will award the money in grants, fund additional services or conduct research relating to veterans' Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, homelessness, health insurance costs and disability benefits.

IDVA has $2 million in Veterans Cash grants to give out by June 2007. The first four grant recipients announced on March 30th at the James R. Thompson Center received grants ranging from $55,073 to $125,000 for various services.

The American Legion, Illinois State Chapter, will receive $100,000 to support its Veteran Service Officers to enhance outreach.

Midwest Shelter for Homeless Veterans in Wheaton will receive $125,000 to continue to expand its transitional living facility for homeless veterans by providing the veterans with educational programs, job counseling and PTSD treatment.

Braveheart Therapeutic Riding Center in Pawnee will receive $100,000 to create a new program for veterans with spinal cord injuries and Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder.

Catholic Charities' St. Leo Campus for Veterans in Chicago will receive $55,073 to purchase a new handicapped accessible van for its campus which houses homeless veterans.

To date, Veterans Cash has raised more than $3.2 million for the Illinois Veterans' Assistance Trust Fund. The new ticket, Two for the Dough, is expected to generate more than $3 million for Veteran services throughout the state.

Two for the Dough is currently available at all Illinois Lottery retail locations. Each ticket costs $2 and has a top prize of $20,000.

For more information on Two for the Dough, visit the Illinois Lottery web site at www.illinoislottery.com or for more information on Illinois veteran programs and initiatives or to apply for a Veterans Cash grant, visit the IDVA web site at www.state.il.us/agency/dva. L. Tammy Duckworth and Lt. Governor Pat Quinn at a press conference at the James R. Thompson Center on April 1st announced the steps that are being taken to pay families who have lost loved ones in the war.

The plan unveiled April 1st by the Blagojevich administration addresses the needs of the 22 families with approved claims but who are still waiting for the money. The plan calls for the Court of Claims to pay off four of the outstanding claims in full amount. One million will be borrowed from the Veterans Care health insurance program and will be distributed equally to the remaining families awaiting their money, each receiving $50,000. The Governor's office and IDVA is again vigorously working with state legislators this year for a supplemental appropriation bill. Once this supplemental appropriation is passed by both chambers of the 95th General Assembly, the rest of these families' claims will be awarded by the Court of Claims, with the most outstanding ones first. The $1 million borrowed from the Veterans Care health insurance program will be returned once the supplemental is approved with an additional requested $1 million from the supplemental for the program.

In the Governor's 2008 budget, he increased his request for the Line of Duty Compensation benefits to $15 million.

Leader For Early Childhood Education

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich announced recently that Illinois is being recognized as a national leader for its commitment to making quality preschool available to all three and four-year-olds, according to a report published by the National Institute for Early Education Research of Rutgers University. Unlike other states, Illinois has increased its funding for early childhood education through Gov. Blagojevich's Preschool for All, which the report says will continue to increase access in the future.

"Preschool for All is a top priority of ours because we know how much quality teaching and learning at an early age helps kids succeed in the future," said Gov. Blagojevich. "We're doing the right thing for the future of our children and the future of Illinois by making quality preschool available to all of our children."

Illinois' high-quality state-funded pre-kindergarten program earned a 2nd place nationally for the percentage of three-year-olds enrolled and 13th place for percentage of four-year-olds, according to The State of Preschool 2006: State Preschool Yearbook. Illinois' pre-kindergarten initiatives also meet nine of ten quality benchmarks cited by the report. The annual Yearbook ranks all 50 states on access to, resources for, and quality of state preschool initiatives for the 2005-2006 school year.

"Unlike the national picture, Illinois' funding per child increased," said NIEER Director W. Steven Barnett. "Low and moderate income working parents need to know from year to year whether they can count on their state to provide quality preschool for their children."

"We know that we improve lifelong learning when we can get kids into preschool; they're more likely to complete high school and less likely to be placed in special education," said Jesse H. Ruiz, Chairman, Illinois State Board of Education. "Gov. Blagojevich's Preschool for All gets more of our students started off on the right foot, something that will pay dividends for the rest of their lives."

Building upon the success, the Illinois State Board of Education is moving forward with Gov. Blagojevich's Preschool for All expansion by accepting proposals from potential providers for the 2007-2008 school year. Public and private entities with experience in providing educational, health, social and/or child development services to young children are encouraged to submit proposals.

Under the state budget recently introduced by Gov. Blagojevich, an additional $60 million would be available for Preschool for All, on top of the $45 million included in the current budget. The additional funding during Fiscal Year 2008 will allow for another 12,000 children to have access to high-quality preschool. The goal is to continue to increase funding until all children whose families want them in preschool have access to it by fiscal year 2011.

"We know that students who go to preschool make better progress in math, language and social skills as they continue their education," said Christopher Koeh, Interim State Superintendent of Schools. "Preschool for All is opening up the doors for those students whose families want to give their children this opportunity, but may not be able to afford it."

Preschool for All will allow every community to offer high-quality preschool in a variety of settings, including public and private schools, childcare centers, licensed family childcare homes, private preschools, park districts, faith-based organizations and other community-based agencies. It requires that preschools be staffed by experienced teachers who hold bachelor's degrees and specialized training in early education and provide at least two and one-half hours per day of high-quality programming designed to foster all of the skills - social, emotional, physical and cognitive - that all young children need to have.

The Illinois State Board of Education has posted the Request for Proposals on their Web site at <http://www.isbe.net/earlychi/preschool/default.htm>. The information is available in both English and Spanish. Proposals must be delivered to the Illinois State Board of Education no later than May 3rd.

Gov. Blagojevich has made early childhood education a top priority for his administration, fulfilling his promise to increase investments in the Early Childhood Block Grant program by $135 million over the past four years. His commitment to expanding early childhood education has gained national attention, including being cited by Pre-K Now as a "Pre-K budget hero" for continuing his push for preschool expansion despite difficult budget conditions.

Retail Merchants Annual Retail Day

The Illinois Retail Merchants Association has set Wednesday, May 2nd as the date for Retail Day 2007 in Springfield.

This annual legislative event brings retailers face-to-face with leaders of Illinois government to discuss relevant topics of concern. The event begins with registration at 11:30 a.m. and a luncheon at 12:30 p.m. The keynote speaker will be Neil Newhouse, a partner and co-founder of Public Opinion Strategies, a national political and public affairs survey research firm.

At 2 p.m., break-out sessions will address several legislative issues concerning the retail community. Attendees will then have a chance to meet legislators one-on-one to discuss the issues. A Gala Reception including live music, food, and drinks will be held from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Tienda de la Victoria, located on the corner of Second and Adams streets in Springfield.

To make reservations to attend this event, contact IRMA at 800/572-5044 or email dbasowski@irma.org by Wednesday, April 25. Individual registrations are $75 per person. The event will include lunch, break-out sessions to learn about current legislative issues, and a visit to the Statehouse including opportunities to meet individual legislators.

Overnight accommodations are at the President Abraham Lincoln Hotel and Conference Center, 701 E. Adams Street, Springfield. Call (217) 544-8800 or 866/788-1860.

Free Earth Day Event

Come learn what all the commotion is about during "Earth Day 2007," held at the Forest Preserve District of Cook County's Sand Ridge Nature Center, 15891 Paxton Ave. in South Holland. This free event held on Saturday, April 21st from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. features fun, educational activities for the whole family to enjoy. There will be guided wildflower hikes, puppet shows, environmental displays and much more.

The theme for Earth Day this year is "Global Warming: Being Hot is Not Cool!" Many fun activities are planned to help visitors learn about global warming and climate change. Parents and children will learn simple things they can do to help. There will be giveaways so guests can actively combat global warming. Other activities include a children's craft and an "Earth Day Jeopardy!" game. The master gardener will demonstrate how to start seeds in your own home.

Admission is free. Activities are ongoing or repeated at scheduled times. Individuals, families and scout groups are encouraged to attend. For additional Earth Day information, contact Sand Ridge Nature Center at (708) 868-0606.

Water And Resources Development Bill

Last week, U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) applauded the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works approval of the Water and Resources Development Act (WRDA). The WRDA bill includes Congressional authorization for locks and dam modernization on the Upper Mississippi and Illinois Rivers and authorizes specific projects for navigation, ecosystem restoration, and flood and storm damage reduction. The bill will now move to the Senate floor for debate.

"Passing WRDA will mean over 50,000 new jobs for the region, shorter shipping times, and improved business for Midwest producers along the river," said Durbin. "The Mississippi River transports $12 billion worth of products every year, affecting agriculture, commercial and labor interests across the state. We must update and modernize the waterways to remain competitive in the years to come."

The most significant provision in the bill would increase lock and dam capacity and improve the ecosystem of the Upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers. The legislation would authorize $2.1 billion for replacing and upgrading locks and dams and another $1.65 billion for ecosystem restoration. "Updating these locks is critical for industry and agriculture in Illinois - more than half of Illinois' annual corn crop is shipped to export markets on the Upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers. Shipping via barge on the river keeps exports competitive and reduces transportation costs for Illinois farmers and businesses," said Durbin.

"This bill also includes critical projects that protect not only the ecosystems of the Mississippi and Illinois rivers but the Great Lakes ecosystem as well. Today, the Asian Carp threatens a $4.1 billion sport and commercial fishing industry in the Great Lakes. The bill passed today recognizes the threat of the Asian Carp by authorizing the permanent operation of the barrier system to prevent the Asian Carp from entering the waters of the Great Lakes," Durbin said.

The Committee bill also included a provision that was included last year as an amendment that would establish independent review panels for U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects. This issue has received significant attention in the wake of the Gulf Coast hurricanes, which showed that major levee failures in New Orleans occurred because of faulty design, construction or maintenance. The Corps of Engineers is responsible for carrying out the majority of the projects contained in the WRDA legislation.

The provision would establish an independent panel of experts to review projects costing more than $40 million, projects requested by a state governor, projects for which the director of a federal agency has said could have a significant adverse impact, or projects that the Army's secretary has found to be controversial. The provision also calls for an independent safety review for critical flood damage reduction projects. The independent review process will not lengthen the time line for projects to be completed.

"We have been waiting seven long years for a bill to reauthorize navigation projects all over the country. Now the real work begins as we work on the floor of the Senate to pass this bill and to modernize the Mississippi waterway so our region can remain competitive in the years to come," said Durbin.

The House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure approved a similar version of the Water Resources and Development Act (H.R. 1495) on March 15. It is expected to be debated in the House after the Congressional recess.

Encourage Customers To File For Assistance

Peoples Gas and North Shore Gas, subsidiaries of Integrys Energy Group, Inc. (NYSE: TEG), are continuing to help customers manage natural gas bills and get the financial assistance they need to assure their natural gas service continues uninterrupted. Each year the company enters into a self-imposed moratorium on disconnections of residential heating accounts between Dec. 1 and March 31 to ensure customers have heat during the coldest months of the year even when they are unable to pay for service. The moratorium on shutoffs for non-payment ends April 1.

"We want customers to know that there are many ways to manage their natural gas bills and avoid disconnection of service," said Rod Sierra, Vice President of Public Affairs. "There is still funding available through LIHEAP and Share the Warmth to help those who may need financial assistance to pay their gas bill."

The company regularly shares the following information with customers:

• Payment Arrangements: Customers can pay a portion of their past due balance while making payments towards current bills. Peoples Gas customers can enroll by following the prompts when dialing 1-866-556-6601 and North Shore Gas customer can do the same by dialing 1-866-556-6004.

• Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP): LIHEAP provides energy grants to individuals who earn at or below 150% of the poverty level. Eligibility is based on income and family size. For more information, Peoples Gas customers should call CEDA at 1-800-571-CEDA (2332) and North Shore Gas customers should call the Community Action Partnership of Lake County at 1-847-249-4330.

• The Share the Warmth Program: Share the Warmth offers eligible customers a matching grant of up to $200. These grants are funded through donations from the City of Chicago, customers, employees and Peoples Gas and North Shore Gas. For more information, customers can contact the Salvation Army at 1-773-725-1100.

• Financial Assistance: Customers may be eligible for tax relief and other financial assistance programs administered by the city, state and federal governments. Customers can contact the Chicago Tax Assistance Center at 1-312-744-1000 or 311.

• Budget Payment Plan: This plan helps keep bills consistent throughout the year. Customers can visit KeepingUWarm.com to enroll.

Customers who have not paid their gas bills for more than two months are eligible for disconnection of service. Disconnection only occurs after written contact by the company. In many instances, the company also attempts to contact customers by telephone to encourage them to make payment arrangements. Once disconnected for non-payment, customers are required to pay the full balance of the account, plus a security deposit and a reconnection charge.

Annual Skydiving For MS 10

Join us for the 10th Annual Skydiving for MS - MSX. It's guaranteed to be a fun day for all - complete with volleyball, horseshoes, airplane rides, live music, a raffle with great prizes and other activities throughout the day - and of course - SKYDIVING! Attendance For State Parks Is On The Rise

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich announced recently that attendance figures at Illinois' more than 120 state parks and natural areas in 2006 were the largest they have been since 2002. Attendance figures for 2006 show 44,482,810 people visited a state park last year, eclipsing 2005 attendance figures by 316,429.

"Millions of people and families from Illinois and across the nation enjoy every year the beauty of our state parks and the many activities they offer. This great boost in tourism also helps strengthen the economy of the state's regions," said Gov. Blagojevich.

As one of only eight remaining states that do not charge visitors to enter state parks, Illinois' park attendance has grown steadily over the last four years and currently ranks among the top five states in the nation for park attendance, according to the National Assn. of State Park Directors annual information exchange.

The Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources (IDNR) manages state parks and recreational sites located on nearly 482,000 acres of land (ranking sixth in the nation in total acreage in state parks and recreation areas).

Those looking for an overnight visit to Illinois state parks will find everything from RV and primitive campsites to cabins and lodges. (Illinois ranks in the top four in the nation in the number of lodges.)

Illinois state parks and recreation areas offer a diversity of activities for day visitors, and places third in the nation in the number of day visitors to parks. Regardless of the purpose of your trip - whether a family picnic, fishing, a float down the river, hunting, wildlife observation, canoeing, photography or touring miles of trails on foot, bicycle, horseback, or depending on the season, snowmobile or cross-country skiing - the IDNR offers thousands of acres of opportunities to explore the Prairie State.

Last year the governor's budget called for an additional $1.5 million to enhance parks and natural areas throughout the state through projects like pavilion roof replacement to the replacement of water and sewer systems on state park property.

In June 2006 Gov. Blagojevich officially opened the World Shooting and Recreational Complex in Sparta, expanding recreational opportunities throughout the southern Illinois region.

10th Anniversary Of NEA's Read Across America Day

First Lady Patricia Blagojevich recently celebrated the National Read Across America Day by announcing the March selections for her Children's Reading Club - Eric Carle's The Grouchy Ladybug and Shel Silverstein's A Light in the Attic. The Children's Reading Club, a recommended reading list made up of books the First Lady and her daughters enjoy at home, encourages parents to read with their children and engage in early development of reading skills.

The Children's Reading Club March selection The Grouchy Ladybug has delighted readers of all ages with the story of a bad-tempered bug who won't say "please" or "thank you," won't share, and thinks she is bigger and better than anyone else. As children follow the Grouchy Ladybug on her journey, they will learn the important concepts of time, size and shape, as well as the benefits of friendship and good manners.

A Light in the Attic is a classic and an award-winning collection of poetry and drawings from Shel Silverstein for children at a middle school reading level. Shel Silverstein is the author-artist of many books of prose and poetry. He was a cartoonist, playwright, poet, performer, recording artist, and Grammy-winning, Oscar-nominated songwriter.

The First Lady launched the Children's Reading Club literacy initiative in March of 2005, and has selected books such as Charlotte's Web, Harriet the Spy, The Growing-up Feet, Henry Huggins and Number the Stars for the recommended list. Each month's book selection is featured on the First Lady's web site,

Adopt A School Library Month

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin recently introduced legislation that would designate September 2007 as Adopt a School Library Month. This legislation reaffirms what studies have consistently shown: children are more likely to succeed when they have access to a high quality library at school. Sen. Norm Coleman (R-MN) is a co-sponsor of this legislation.

"Some of my favorite childhood moments were spent losing myself in a book about far-away places, exciting adventures and historic figures," said Durbin. "Sadly, today, many children do not have access to new books that could establish them as lifelong readers. In fact, some libraries in Illinois are unable to purchase new books and must rely on donations from the community. We can not expect our students to compete in today's global economy unless we provide them with the tools they need to succeed."

Increasingly, school libraries are facing <http://www.illinois.gov/firstlady>. The First Lady hopes the recommended list will enable parents to find books the whole family can enjoy. The Children's Reading Club applies to all children, but specifically targets children between the ages of seven and twelve.

National Read Across America Day is a yearly celebration culminating on March 2nd, the birthday of beloved children's author Dr. Seuss. The event serves to emphasize the importance of reading and learning in America. Sponsored by the National Education Assn. (NEA) and Dr. Seuss Enterprises, National Read Across America Day encourages children to get excited about reading.

As First Lady, Patricia Blagojevich has worked tirelessly to promote initiatives that help Illinois families bring up happy, healthy and successful children. In addition to her work with children's literacy, the First Lady spearheaded the Illinois Pediatric Vision Awareness Initiative, the first state sponsored campaign in the U.S. to specifically target Amblyopia, or 'lazy eye,' in children. Mrs. Blagojevich has also brought attention to Healthy Families Illinois, a program that helps prevent child abuse by supporting high-risk parents. In addition, she has promoted the Prevention Development Resource Project, a partnership between the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and Prevent Child Abuse Illinois, and the governor's landmark All Kids health care plan that provides access to affordable, comprehensive health insurance for every uninsured child in the state.

extraordinary obstacles in the effort to provide students with high quality resources. These circumstances are not due to lack of concern by librarians, school officials or members of the community. Rather, school leaders are working with limited budgets and unforgiving performance standards.

Durbin's legislation will designate the month of September to raise public awareness about the important role that school libraries play in the academic success of every child in America. During the month, the federal government, states, local governments, schools, nonprofit organizations and businesses will have an opportunity to highlight some of the great work that can be done on school libraries with ceremonies, programs and other activities. Durbin said this has the potential to jumpstart community efforts to replenishing bookshelves, revitalizing technology and redecorating our libraries.

Jesse White Receives National Award

Secretary of State Jesse White was honored last week with a Public Service Award from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) for the leadership role his office has played to strengthen Illinois' graduated driver licensing (GDL) program and reduce teen driving crashes and fatalities.

White received the award at the 25th annual National Lifesavers Conference held this year in Chicago. The goal of the conference, which draws a variety of traffic safety organizations and advocates from throughout the nation, is to combat traffic crash fatalities and injuries. Approximately 2,500 people attended this year's conference.

Last summer Secretary White established the Teen Driver Safety Task Force to examine and propose legislation to strengthen Illinois' GDL program in a manner that enhances the safety of young, novice drivers and reduces teen fatal crashes. Several recent studies have shown that comprehensive GDL programs significantly reduce traffic crashes and fatalities involving teen drivers.

Using the Task Force's final recommendations as a blueprint, White's office drafted Senate Bill 172. Highlights of the legislation include giving teens more time to obtain valuable driving experience while under the watchful eye of a parent or guardian, limiting in-car distractions, and requiring the teens to earn their way from one stage to the next by avoiding traffic convictions. This proposal has received widespread acclaim from leading state and national traffic safety organizations that believe the legislation will make Illinois' GDL program one of the best in the nation.

Senate Bill 172, sponsored by Sen. John Cullerton, unanimously passed the Senate Transportation Committee on March 1st and awaits consideration of the full Senate.

Community Support

A local teen has been selected to attend a special summer school for future leaders and has very little time to raise $4,150 so he can get there.

Paul Depre Jr., a 16 year old sophomore at Oak Lawn Community High School, found out that he has been selected to attend the 2007 session of the Junior Statesmen Summer School at Princeton University in New Jersey. But Paul has very little time to raise the money to pay his room, board, travel, and other expenses. While his family is paying half, Paul must raise the balance.

Anyone wishing to make an individual sponsorship to help Paul Depre Jr. can send a check to: Admissions Director, The Junior Statesmen Summer School, 1725 K Street NW, Suite 1214 Washington, DC 20006. Checks are to be made payable to the Junior Statesmen Foundation and include a note that Paul Depre Jr. is the intended beneficiary.

The 68th annual session of the Junior Statesmen Summer School will be held from June 24 to July 19. While there, students take college-level courses in American Government and Speech.

They also participate in nightly student debates of controversial public policy issues in a Congressional Workshop. Highlighting the month-long session will be frequent meetings with high-level group of leaders from government, business and the media. This nonpartisan speakers program gives future leaders a chance to share ideas with today's political powerbrokers.

Paul was accepted into this prestigious program because of his outstanding academic record and potential for leadership. This program only accepts 250 students nationwide annually. Paul is not only a good student, he is also active in extra-curricular and community activities. Tennis team, Relay for Life, SADD, School Improvement Team, Mathletes, Skills USA, Chess Club, are just some of the activities that this energetic sophomore participates in.

22nd Annual Hunger Walk

More than 4,000 people will join the march against hunger on Saturday, June 16, at Montrose Harbor. The 22nd Annual Hunger Walk directly benefits 600 food pantries, soup kitchens and shelters that are member agencies of the Greater Chicago Food Depository. Funds raised help participating agencies provide nutritious food to nearly 500,000 people in need in Cook County every year. This year's goal is to raise more than $300,000.

In addition to an approximately 2.5-mile walk, the Hunger Walk features an array of fun activities for the whole family. Festivities include entertainment by the Jesse White Tumblers, choral groups and more as well as face painting, caricature artists, jugglers and stilt walkers. Hunger Walk participants receive an event T-shirt, goodie bag, beverages and snacks.

Every week, nearly 90,000 people turn to the Greater Chicago Food Depository and its network of member agencies for food assistance. Most agencies are run entirely by volunteers and raise their own operating funds in addition to assistance they receive through the Greater Chicago Food Depository in the form of equipment, grants and training opportunities. The Hunger Walk is a unique fundraiser which helps agencies raise money through an event planned and coordinated by Greater Chicago Food Depository staff and volunteers. Presenting sponsors for this year's event are Jewel-Osco and Pepsi, and the media sponsor is ABC 7. Other sponsors include: ConAgra Foods, Quaker, Home Run Inn and Lifeway.

Corporate teams are encouraged to sign up in advance. Registration on the day of the event begins at 8 a.m., and step-off is at 9:30 a.m. Free parking is available on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, call the Greater Chicago Food Depository at (773) 247-3663 or log onto www.chicagosfoodbank.org.

AIDS Endorses Illinois Covered

The AIDS Foundation of Chicago (AFC) recently rallied at the State Capitol to support Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich's "Illinois Covered" healthcare plan. Over 150 AIDS advocates gathered at the State Capitol wearing "Super Hero" T-shirts in an effort to encourage legislators to be "super heroes" by passing the governor's plan to expand access to quality, affordable healthcare to all Illinoisans during the group's seventh annual Illinois HIV/AIDS Lobby Day.

The governor announced Illinois Covered, his plan to ensure that all Illinoisans have access to quality, affordable healthcare, during his fiscal year 2008 budget address. The plan is a major step toward slowing the spread of HIV/AIDS throughout Illinois.

Of the approximately 40,000-42,000 Illinoisans living with HIV/AIDS, about 20,000 are either uninsured or do not have adequate coverage to meet their healthcare needs. Under Illinois Covered, they would be among the tens of thousands of moderate and low-income residents who would have access to affordable health coverage once the plan is implemented. Illinois Covered will give Illinoisans living with HIV/AIDS access to health coverage that will pay for prescription drugs and treatments that will extend their lives.

REAL ESTATEHouses For Sale

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS COUNTY DEPARTMENT - CHANCERY DIVISION WMC MORTGAGE CORPORATION, AS OWNER AND HOLDER OF THE MORTGAGE, PLAINTIFF, vs. YUSUF AHMAD, et al. Defendants. 06 CH 21182 NOTICE OF SALE

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale entered in the above cause on December 13, 2006, an agent of The Judicial Sales Corporation will at 10:30 AM on May 1, 2007, at the office of The Judicial Sales Corporation, One South Wacker Drive - 24th Floor, CHICAGO, IL, 60606, sell at public auction to the highest bidder, as set forth below, the following described real estate, commonly known as 3544 W. 76TH STREET, CHICAGO, IL 60652. Property Index No. 19-26-401-043. The real estate is improved with a single family residence.

The judgment amount was $228,850.03. Sale terms: 25% down of the highest bid by certified funds at the close of the auction, the balance, in certified funds, is due within twenty-four (24) hours. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The Purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney if this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4).

Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale. Understanding Credit Scoring

There's a lot of confusion around credit reports and credit scores - what they're used for, how they're calculated and why they're so important if you want to buy a car or house. Lenders, insurers and even employers review your credit history to decide if you're a worthwhile risk, so here's some background information that may help demystify the whole credit scoring process:

Credit bureaus. There are three major credit bureaus: Equifax www.equifax.com, Experian www.experian.com and TransUnion www.transunion.com. Each tracks how many and what types of credit cards and loans you have, how long your accounts have been open and whether you've paid your bills on time.

Credit report. Upon request from you or a potential lender, a credit bureau will compile a credit report - basically a snapshot of your credit history at that moment. You can order one free credit report a year from each of the three bureaus. (Order through www.annualcreditreport.com; otherwise you'll pay a small fee.) They are required by law to investigate any disputed item and correct inaccuracies.

It's wise to order a free report from one of the bureaus every four months; that way, you'll keep regular, year-round tabs on what's being reported about you. Another tip: If you're planning to borrow to make a major purchase, order your credit reports beforehand so you'll know what lenders will see about your credit history.

It's vital to know what's in your credit reports so you can spot fraudulent activity or errors before they damage your credit standing. For more information on what to do if you suspect identity fraud, go to Practical Money Skills for Life, a free personal financial management site sponsored by Visa USA www.practicalmoneyskills.com/security.

Credit scores. Credit bureaus use information in your credit report to create a three-digit credit score. The higher your score, the better your credit rating is. The most commonly used credit scores are called FICO scores, named for Fair Isaac Corporation (FICO), which developed the proprietary software.

Five factors are used to determine your FICO score: payment history, amount owed, length of credit history, newly opened credit accounts, and types of credit used. Scores take into consideration information in all five categories, both positive and negative, but may weigh them differently depending on your individual circumstances.

When you apply for credit or a loan, lenders evaluate one or more of these bureaus' scores along with their own criteria (which may include income, length of employment or other factors), to determine if you are a worthy credit risk. Your overall credit score may affect not only whether or not you get the loan, but also the amount, term length and interest rate.

The differences between excellent, good, fair and poor credit scores can really add up. For example, someone with a top-notch FICO credit score - say above 720 - might qualify for a mortgage rate one or more percentage points lower than someone with poor credit. For a typical 30-year, $200,000 mortgage, this could add up to an extra $50,000 in interest payments over the life of the loan.

For more information on how credit reports and credit scores work - and to purchase a copy of your score - go to www.myfico.com. Remember, it's always a good idea to know what's in your reports ahead of time so you can correct errors before they harm your credit rating.

Fund Chicago Search And Rescue Team

U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) recently met with Dept. of Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff to ask him to consider Chicago's eligibility for a federally funded search and rescue team. Durbin also discussed the impact of the fiscal year 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats.

"Chicago is the third largest city in the country, yet year after year, we are not included in the 28 cities that receive federal funds for urban search and rescue teams. The State of Illinois has done a tremendous job in funding its own urban search and rescue team, but I expressed my frustration to Secretary Chertoff over the lack of federal support," said Durbin. "Our state deserves to have federal help in fielding these trained and equipped urban search and rescue teams when local resources are overwhelmed."

Currently, there are 28 FEMA-certified urban search and rescue teams that operate as a disaster response task force. The teams operate around the clock, and include engineers, medics and other technical experts, specially trained search dogs and an average of $4.5 million of equipment. The State currently spends approximately $1 million for training each year and has spent $3 million in equipment over the last couple of years in funding its own urban search and rescue team.

In the meeting, Durbin also expressed serious concerns about the impact of the President's FY 2008 budget on Illinois' ability to respond to natural disasters and terrorist threats. The budget the President presented to Congress recently cuts funding for state and local law enforcement assistance by $1.3 billion, dramatically decreases funding for FIRE grants and eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program.

Durbin also raised concerns that the President's budget reduces funding for the FIRE program which provides equipment and training to fire departments in Illinois and across the country to help them prepare and respond to terrorist incidents. Last year, in Illinois, over $13.6 million was awarded to 11 fire departments.

The President's budget completely eliminates the SAFER firefighter-hiring program, which provides funding to fire departments to hire additional firefighters and first responders. Last year, $4.4 million was awarded to Illinois fire departments for hiring/recruiting additional firefighters.

Text Message Lawsuit

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently filed a lawsuit in Federal court in Springfield against C & C Global Enterprises, L.L.C., www.resortsellers.com, Neela Pundit and Charles Rossop, the operators of www.webuyresorts.com and www.resortsellers.com, alleging that they sent millions of unsolicited text messages to Illinois consumers and wireless phones across the country in violation of the federal Telephone Consumer Protection Act and the state Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act.

Beginning on about Nov. 3rd, 2006, Illinois residents began receiving unsolicited text messages alerting them that "We have someone interested in buying or renting your Time Share" and directing the recipient to log on to www.webuyresorts.com or www.resortsellers.com for more information. The web sites vanished from the Internet a few days after consumers began complaining about the unsolicited messages.

Madigan's Consumer Protection Division has received 66 written complaints and 190 complaints by phone from consumers complaining that they received these unsolicited text messages from the defendants.

Blanketing cell phone customers with unsolicited text messages costs consumers. Depending on a consumer's cell phone plan, the consumer either is charged a fee for each message received or her monthly bucket of text messages, for which she pays a monthly fee, is reduced. In addition, receiving and viewing text messages uses precious battery power, which could leave consumers unable to make necessary calls, including emergency calls.

Madigan's lawsuit also raises allegations concerning other aspects of the defendants' business. Specifically, the suit alleges that the defendants' unsolicited text message tells consumers they have a buyer or renter for their time share, but many of the recipients of the unsolicited text message do not own a time share. In addition, Madigan alleges that the defendants accept payment for time-share listing services and then fail to provide the listing. The defendants could not possibly provide the time share listing because they do not request sufficient information from customers to develop a time share sale listing, such as the address of the time share and the unit number, the complaint alleges.

Madigan's lawsuit seeks a nationwide injunction against the defendants, prohibiting them from violating consumer protection laws. In addition, the lawsuit seeks civil penalties of $50,000 and additional civil penalties of $50,000 for each violation of the Consumer Fraud Act found to be committed with the intent to defraud. Madigan also requests that the court order the defendants to pay restitution to affected consumers.

No-Interest Loans Available

Governor Rod R. Blagojevich announced $1.9 million in no-interest loans to help fire departments and fire protection districts purchase much-needed fire trucks. This is the second phase of a loan program that has already helped 63 fire departments obtain new fire trucks.

The Fire Truck Revolving Loan Program, administered by the Office of the State Fire Marshal (OSFM), provides no-interest, 20-year loans to local fire departments and fire protection districts for the purchase of fire trucks. The maximum loan award is $250,000. The loan program was created by legislation signed by Gov. Blagojevich in 2003.

Applications for the loans are available on the OSFM website at www.state.il.us/osfm. The agency also will mail applications to each fire department in Illinois. Applications will be accepted from Feb. 1 through April 15. A nine-member review committee comprising representatives of the banking industry and the fire services will review the applications. Loans will be awarded on the basis of need.

In August 2004, 63 fire departments were selected to receive the initial revolving loans. Payments on those loans go into the revolving loan fund, and will be used for this second round of loans.

Air Quality Report

Air quality in Illinois was either good or moderate 90 percent of the time throughout Illinois in 2005, according to the 35th Annual Air Quality Report, released by the Illinois EPA.

While this is a decrease from the air quality numbers in 2004, it is consistent with the air quality trends the state has experienced in the past. Air quality trends still show air pollution levels well below the standards on a statewide basis.

In 2005, Illinois as well as other Midwestern and Northeastern states experienced one of the most unusual air quality episodes in recent history. For the first time in Illinois, Air Pollution Action Days were called outside of the ozone season, May through September, with three action days being called in February due to elevated levels of fine particulate matter. Scientists determined that a combination of a stagnating regional air mass and combustion of winter fuels region-wide was the main cause of this incident.

This unusual episode provided the Illinois EPA with the opportunity to thoroughly discuss fine particulate matter, which led to additional public education about the causes and health concerns of this pollutant.

"While annual trends show the statewide levels of pollutants well below the federal standards, there are still some areas in Illinois where improvement is still needed," said Illinois EPA Director Doug Scott. "The Illinois EPA continues its commitment to improve air quality throughout the state and the region."

Tips On Hiring A Lawn Care Service

April is National Lawn Care Month when more than 40 million homeowners will begin thinking about caring for their lawns. Not sure how to hire a lawn or landscape service? The Professional Landcare Network (PLANET) can help.

Lawn care companies offer services ranging from fertilizing and pest control to aerating, mowing, and plant health care. Residential property values, the environment, and the community all benefit from healthy, thick lawns.

Experts at PLANET suggest homeowners think quality as well as price when calling in a pro. According to the Harris survey, good references and reputation ranked number one in the selection of a lawn and landscape service. When selecting a company, consumers should ask for the following items: a detailed listing of services and costs, a written estimate and length of service, a list of references, and evidence that the company meets all state licensing requirements.

It is also important to make sure the company is a member of a professional association and to check the company's service record by calling the local Better Business Bureau. Members of PLANET can be found by using the pro locator service at www.landcarenetwork.org/ LandcareNetwork.org. PLANET also offers a rigorous certification program, which includes three designations for lawn care professionals: Certified Turfgrass Professional (CTP), Certified Turfgrass Professional of Cool Season Lawns (CTPCSL), and Certified Ornamental Landscape Professional (COLP).

"When you hire a professional, you're entering into a partnership," states Jim Martin, CLP, PLANET's president. "The role homeowners play in maintenance of their lawn is key to enhancing the lawn's health and performance and to getting the most out of the service provider."

PLANET advises homeowners to follow these basic maintenance practices: Watering, water deeply but not too often and Mowing, mow often, never removing more than one-third of the leaf surface. Make sure the mower blade is sharp, and grasscycle the clippings by leaving them on the lawn.

PLANET is the association of members who create and maintain the QUALITY OF LIFE in communities across America. With more than 4,200 member companies and affiliates, these firms and their employees represent more than 100,000 green industry professionals. For more information on PLANET visit LandcareNetwork.org or call the PLANET office at (800) 395-2522.

Credit Score Confusion

If you're one of the millions of Americans who don't know their credit scores, you could be missing out on an opportunity to save money on your mortgage, cars, jewelry, electronics, vacations and anything else you may charge.

Your credit score is an estimate of your credit risk, which is based on your credit report. Lenders use this number to determine how likely you will be to repay a loan or line of credit in a timely manner. The higher the score, the more likely you'll receive a lower interest rate, and ultimately save money.

Only 27 percent of consumers understand that credit scores measure credit risk - not credit knowledge, amount of credit or attitude toward credit, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

"There are many misconceptions circulating about the function and purpose of credit scores," said Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, a national non-profit credit counseling agency. "Yet, this three-digit number can impact you financially nearly every day of your life."

American consumers have an average of 13 credit obligations on record at a credit bureau, according to Fair Isaac Corporation, which pioneered the most common credit score, called the FICO score. These obligations include commonly-used credit cards, store cards, gas cards and installment loans, each of which has an impact on your credit score.

To help sort out the confusion, Sullivan answers six common questions about credit scores:

Do I have only one credit score? No, lenders are not required to report to each of the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian and Trans Union. Each agency may have different information on your report, and therefore, a different score.

If I continually check my credit report, will that lower my credit score? You can check your report directly from the three credit bureaus as many times as you want, and it will not affect your credit score. To obtain a free credit report, visit www.annualcreditreport.com.

If I cancel a credit card, can that lower my credit score? Yes, canceling credit cards can actually decrease your score. For instance, if you have $50,000 in available credit and owe $10,000, then you owe 20 percent of your available credit. If you close an account with a $30,000 credit limit, you will then owe the same $10,000 but it will be 50 percent of your available credit. That lowers your credit score. It also affects the history part of your score, lowering it even further.

Does my salary affect my credit score? Your credit score is based on the amount of credit and debt you have, not how much money you make. If you receive a raise, and your credit and debt remain the same, your credit score will not improve. If you receive a raise and use that extra money to pay down your debt, then your credit score will improve.

Does shopping for a loan lower my credit score? While multiple inquiries do show up on your credit report, they do not necessarily damage your score. If the same types of inquiries are made within 14 days of each other, they only count as one inquiry on your credit report. Keep in mind that this applies to loans, not credit cards.

If I only use cash to make purchases, will I improve my credit score? Your credit score is determined by the amount of credit you use, not the amount of cash you use. A steady, responsible use of credit is the best way to build your credit score. You need to find a middle ground, as an absence of credit as well as an overuse of credit can work against you.

Expand Family-Based Substance Abuse Treatment For Meth Addiction

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), a member of the Senate Anti-Meth Caucus, and Norm Coleman (R-MN) recently introduced legislation, known as the Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007, to improve comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for methamphetamine addiction.

Durbin and Coleman noted that studies consistently show that family-based treatment increases long-term sobriety, educational enrollment, and gainful employment, along with decreased criminal activity and child development delays. Family-based treatment centers combine substance abuse recovery with mental health counseling, medical treatment, parenting, education and legal services. These programs provide essential needs of the entire family, rather than just the parent, and have proven to be extremely effective.

Statistically, Illinois and Minnesota mirror the rest of the country with at least 70% of the child welfare cases involving a substance-abusing parent. The meth epidemic now poses greater costs to states and the federal government as a result of increased child welfare and criminal justice caseloads.

"I am proud to say that Illinois has two very successful family-based treatment centers statewide," said Durbin. "The Women's Treatment Center and the Haymarket Center in Chicago have helped hundreds of participants reach their long-term sobriety goals, improve family relationships, enroll in school, and find jobs. This legislation will give these family-based centers the tools and resources they need to continue helping those that come through the door and give them a chance to open new doors for communities that still need help."

"I know firsthand from talking to victims and communities across Minnesota that methamphetamine abuse brings devastating consequences not only to individual abusers, but also to families, friends and the community," said Coleman. "Sadly, meth has a tendency to tear families apart. Our legislation will not only help parents and pregnant women break their addictions, but also provide services to help them recover their relationships with their children."

The Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007: Allows additional funding for the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT) to award grants to programs that provide comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for parents and pregnant women;

Requires the Director to give priority to programs serving areas affected by high rates of meth addiction with special attention to rural areas;

Provides funding to organizations that specialize in comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment services for non-violent offenders as an alternative to incarceration.

Sen. Durbin recently received the Guardian Award from the Partnership for a Drug-Free America to recognize his work in combating substance abuse. He has successfully secured funds for local meth awareness campaigns in Illinois. In 2005, Durbin and Coleman co-sponsored the Combat Meth Act, which was included as part of the Patriot Act and signed into law. The bill includes funds set-aside for prosecutors and law enforcement agents for rural communities.

Declining Home Values Jeopardize Reverse Mortgage

A deeper and more widespread decline in home values is jeopardizing many retirees' ability to tap a reverse mortgage for relief from their financial hardships.

According to a recent report from the National Association of Realtors (NAR), the fourth quarter of 2006 had the biggest year-over-year decline in home prices on record. Prices dropped 2.7 percent in the fourth quarter which followed a 1.0 percent decline in the third quarter.

Not only do declining home prices impact sellers and buyers, they also impact how much senior homeowners may receive when they apply for a reverse mortgage.

A reverse mortgage enables homeowners 62 and older to convert their home equity into cash. What makes this type of mortgage so popular is that there are no payments for as long as the borrowers live in their home. The reverse mortgage is typically repaid from the proceeds from the sale of the home, when the senior homeowner no longer lives there.

The amount a borrower may receive from a reverse mortgage is determined by their age, the interest rate, and the home value. A slump in a home's value can reduce the amount a retiree may receive from the reverse mortgage.

Median home prices are down 3.4 percent, as reported by NAR. During the past six months, there have been declines in three-quarters of the markets. A number of markets reported double-digit declines.

The market with the biggest drop in home values was Palm Bay-Melbourne-Titusville, FL. The median prices plunged 19.5 percent.

A senior homeowner 74 years old with a $200,000 home may receive a lump sum of $123,421 from the federally-insured reverse mortgage. If the home value was to decline by 3.4 percent, the amount would be reduced by $4,484.

However, if the home value was to drop 19.5 percent, the lump sum from the reverse mortgage would be $99,773, or $25,717 less: a significant amount by anyone's standards.

Senior homeowners with an existing mortgage on their home must pay it off to qualify for the reverse mortgage. This is usually done from the proceeds of the reverse mortgage. Paying off an existing mortgage and eliminating the monthly mortgage payment can make a huge difference in the lives of retirees struggling to live on a fixed or limited income.

"A drop in the amount a senior customer may receive from the reverse mortgage could risk their ability to qualify if there are not sufficient funds to pay off an existing mortgage in full," Mary Pat Legler, Reverse Mortgage Specialist, South Central Bank, said. "A decline in a home's value or rise in interest rates can reduce the amount that a customer may receive from the reverse mortgage."

The good news is that NAR believes the worst is over for the slump in home prices.

Prepare For Spring And Summer Severe Weather

With the one-year anniversary of a major tornado in Central Illinois just days away, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently encouraged people to prepare now for severe spring weather. The governor proclaimed March 4th to 10th as Severe Weather Preparedness Week in Illinois, and urged Illinois residents to learn more about the weather hazards that can threaten during the spring and summer months.

The governor said the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and the National Weather Service (NWS) are joining together to raise awareness of tornadoes and severe storms during this year's Severe Weather Preparedness Week. As part of the week, schools and businesses were encouraged to practice their severe storm emergency plans during a statewide tornado drill that was held on Tuesday, March 6th at 10 a.m.

Illinois experienced a record number of tornadoes in 2006, with 124 tornadoes reported touching down throughout the state. The new record surpassed the previous record of 120 tornadoes set in 2003. Tornadoes last year resulted in one death and 49 injuries. On average, Illinois sees around 41 tornadoes each year.

Weather watches and warnings from the NWS are a critical tool in alerting people to approaching severe weather in their areas. The NWS is working to refine its warnings so they provide people with more specific detail about storms in their counties.

Nearly 30 percent of all tornadoes in Illinois occur after dark. For that reason, it's especially important that homes and businesses closely monitor threatening conditions at night, particular when people are asleep.

Besides tornadoes, spring and early summer in Illinois also bring severe thunderstorms and flooding. Severe thunderstorms can produce tornadoes, damaging winds, lightning, hail and heavy rain, all of which can cause death, injuries and property damage. Since 1990, lightning has killed 26 people. In 2001, Illinois ranked second in the nation for lightning fatalities.

While many people don't consider floods as dangerous as tornadoes, flooding is the number one severe weather killer nationwide. The most dangerous type of flooding is a flash flood, which can sweep away everyone and everything in its path. Fourteen people in Illinois have died from flash floods since 1995, most of which occurred in vehicles.

IEMA and NWS have also developed a Severe Weather Preparedness Guide, which contains information and tips on how to keep you and your family safe when a storm approaches and what actions to take following a severe storm, tornado or flood. The guide is available on the IEMA Web site at www.state.il.us/iema or by calling (217) 785-9888.

Senate Approves Legislation To Improve Teen Driver Laws

Legislation proposed by Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White to improve teen driving laws with the aim of reducing traffic crashes and fatalities involving young drivers was overwhelmingly approved by the full Illinois Senate.

Senate Bill 172, sponsored by State Sen. John Cullerton (D-Chicago), will improve the Illinois Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL) Program that governs drivers up to the age of 21. Several recent studies have shown that comprehensive GDL programs greatly reduce traffic crashes and fatalities involving teen drivers. The legislation was drafted based on recommendations made by White's Teen Driver Safety Task Force, composed of legislators, traffic safety experts, law enforcement officials, educators, judges and victim advocates.

The legislation, which now heads to the Illinois House of Representatives for its consideration, includes the following nine provisions.

- Extend the permit phase from three months to nine months. This proposal will give the novice driver more time to learn under the watchful eye of parents through a variety of weather conditions common throughout Illinois.
- Shift the nighttime driving restriction from 11 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays and from Midnight to 11 p.m. on weekends for all drivers under the age of 18 and those who fail to graduate from the initial licensing phase. The nighttime driving restriction includes exemptions for teens that are traveling to and from school activities and work.
- Double the period - from six months to 12 months - that restricts a new driver to a maximum of one unrelated teen passenger.

- Ticket the passengers age 15 to 20, in addition to the drivers, who violate the passenger restriction law.
- Require student drivers to complete a minimum six hours of actual, on-the-street driving with a certified driver education instructor.
- Implement a true Graduated Driver Licensing system that requires new drivers to earn their way from one stage to the next. Under this proposal, once issued a learner's permit, a teen would be required to drive conviction-free for nine months before he or she would be eligible for a driver's license. The teen would then also have to drive conviction free for six months in addition to reaching age 18 before moving from the initial licensing phase to the full licensing phase.
- A stricter law in which the drivers' licenses of those under age 21 would be suspended for each additional conviction following a driver's initial suspension for two moving violations in a 24-month period.
- Require drivers under age 18 who are ticketed for traffic violations to appear before a judge with a parent or guardian to receive court supervision. This legislation also requires the attendance of traffic school as a requisite for court supervision for drivers under the age of 21. This ensures that the parent or guardian is fully aware of the minor's traffic violation and understands the requirements and ramifications of court supervision.
- Establish tough, new penalties - including license revocation and vehicle impoundment - for drivers who are involved in street racing.

Money For Oak Lawn Library Foundation

John J. Gonczy, a candidate for the Oak Lawn Library Board, hosted a fundraiser to benefit the Oak Lawn Library Foundation on Thursday, March 22nd. The event, sponsored by Friends of John J. Gonczy and held at the Stony Creek Golf Course in Oak Lawn, raised $2,500. All proceeds were given to the Oak Lawn Library Foundation.

"We saw an opportunity to do something positive for the library as we celebrated the tremendous support people have shown for my campaign," Gonczy said.

Gonczy, a life-long resident of Oak Lawn, is one of four candidates running for two seats on the Oak Lawn Library Board of Trustees. He is a veteran English, journalism and reading teacher at Mount Carmel High School in Chicago, and serves on the boards of the Children's Museum in Oak Lawn and the Oak Lawn Parks Foundation.

Founded in 1993, the Oak Lawn Library Foundation is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization governed by a volunteer board of community members. Donations to the foundation are invested in an endowment fund established for the long term security of the Oak Lawn Public Library.

The Oak Lawn Village Board Passes Temporary

Storage Unit Ordinance

The Oak Lawn Village Board passed an ordinance concerning temporary storage containers at its regular village board meeting. Complaints had been received by village officials about the storage units and the length of time that they stay on property. At times, it was stated that the units were left for up to six months. These temporary storage units are used by construction companies who store materials which are taken off property when the materials are not used and then returned when they are needed. Residents also use the units during moves or remodeling projects. Possessions are put into the units which are then stored with the company until they are called for by the resident.

It was stated that the containers have been seen on property for months after they are brought back. The village's Planning and Development Commission held a public hearing on the issue and recommended that anyone who wished to use a temporary storage unit needed to get a permit and that the permit would be good for sixty or ninety day. A fee of $30 for 30 days would be required and that would be extended to 60 days for $60. If the unit was returned before the 90 day period was up, the renter would receive a $30 refund.

After some discussion about the time limit, the board passed the ordinance. It was stated that the question of when the 30 or 60 days expired when the unit was taken off site for a day or a weekend could be further discussed and the ordinance changed if it was necessary.

In other business, a proclamation was read lauding the village's telecommunications department. This is the dispatch department who handles calls for the police and fire department emergencies. Mayor Heilmann said that this is National Telecommunicators Week. He stated that the department does an exemplary job keeping both departments safe and informed. He also lauded the department for their roles in the "apprehension of criminals, suppression of fires and treatment of patients. Each dispatcher has exhibited compassion, understanding and professionalism during the performance of their job in the past year."

It was reported that the village had 438 early voters during the weeks it could be done. Early voting will be closed as of April 12th. Polling places in the village, for the April 17th election, will be opened at 6 a.m. and closed at 7 p.m.

Trustee Races Heating Up

The Village of Oak Lawn has two very competitive races for trustee coming up next week. The first pits incumbent Trustee Jerry Hurckes against candidate Kurt Madey in the 1st District. Trustee Hurckes rightfully brags about the numerous programs he has initiated since he became a trustee. These achievements include: a snow removal program for seniors; a Village-wide leaf raking program; his annual Christmas contest; a clean the creek program; and the operation red, white and blue program which placed American flags on residents' homes for the 4th of July. Trustee Jerry Hurckes, who presently works for Congressman Dan Lipinski and previously worked with former Congressman Bill Lipinski, has labored tirelessly to generate millions of dollars for the Village of Oak Lawn. Trustee Hurckes has done a great job keeping his promises to his 1st District constituents. His opponent, Kurt Madey, has no prior experience in Government. He is the choice of Mayor David Heilmann's United Party of Oak Lawn. Mr. Madey has offered the idea that the Village Board of Oak Lawn should take over the school system in Oak Lawn, without perhaps considering that four other Villages share the same school district boundaries. Additionally, State Law would have to be changed for this movement to be allowed.

The second key municipal race features incumbent Trustee Marjorie Joy being challenged by first timers Carol Quinlan and James Jelinski. Trustee Marge Joy has 16 years of experience serving Oak Lawn. She is a 30-plus year veteran educator in the Chicago Public School System, with the last 15 years of service as an elementary school Principal. Mrs. Joy's energy and conviction for the Village of Oak Lawn's school system is admirable. She has been at the forefront of school funding changes, as well as a leader in the new Oak Lawn Children's Museum. Her opponents offer little in the form of political experience. Mrs. Carol Quinlan has recently started a small business and Mr. James Jelinski presently works part-time as a pharmaceutical assistant for C.V.S. Pharmacy.

Trustees Jerry Hurckes and Marge Joy have shouldered several Mayors Unity Party attacks. Several of these attacks are suspect. Our investigations suggest a numbers game is being alleged, especially when Oak Lawn's 22 checking accounts and 9 investment accounts are being re-evaluated by the present Administration. The crux of this debate revolves around the fact that the present Administration factually contended that they are earning more money for Village residents than the former Administration did by changing banks. In both Administrations, three accounts were and are still interest free... payroll accounts, disbursement accounts, and compensating balances (i.e. service fees, etc.). The discrepancy in interest earned can be explained accordingly. The present Administration is indeed earning more money for the taxpayers since higher investment account rates are being paid rather than lower checking account rates, which were the rule of thumb formerly.

The entire Board of Trustees was in favor of changing banks to earn additional interest, which is just sensible. However, the way in which RFP's (requests for proposals) were let for bid, and subsequently revised, was somewhat unusual. Allegations of suspect donations for a tent at a Village function seemed to cloud the selection process. While it is entirely possible that coincidence played its part, we would suggest that when a political organization's funding finds its way into any mix, suspicion results.

Politics is a strange and sometimes complicated game and candidates (especially those who have very little experience or knowledge of negotiations) start to throw accusations and half-truths around with mailings and literature to present themselves in a more favorable light. Mud slinging is nothing new, but voters must look beyond the negative attacks and assess what each candidate has done, or can do, for the Village of Oak Lawn.

What is apparent is that the leadership in the Village of Oak Lawn must repair its division as a board so that it can tackle the ever-present responsibilities of acting in the best interests of all community residents. Voters in Oak Lawn are tired of the blame games upon former Administrations. They want to see continued progress... redevelopment, beautification, additional new businesses, both retail and service-oriented. Continued progress can be achieved by borrowing what was beneficial in the past Administrations and building upon or revamping, as well as introducing fresh new ideas that are transformed from dreams into reality.

Queen Of Peace Inducts 39 New Members Into NHS

Queen of Peace High School and the co-moderators of the Queen of Peace Chapter of National Honor Society, Therese Lahart and Therese Haskins, announced the new NHS members, inducted on March 6.

The NHS was established in 1921 by the National Association of Secondary School Principals to "create enthusiasm for scholarship, to stimulate a desire to render service, to promote leadership, and to develop character in the students of secondary schools." Those four qualities - scholarship, service, leadership and character - serve as the criteria for student selection.

The following students were inducted: Alexandria Bandyk, Samantha Cartwright, Nicole Ficker, Christina Malinowski, all of Burbank; Lenka Durisnova and Victoria Hordosi of Bridgeview; Andrea Chavarin, Erin Coughlin, Elizabeth Crca, Stephanie Deforest, Samantha Degnan, Nicole Fosco, Brittany Gibson, Tanya Gonzalez, Rebecca Hacker, Erin Hecker, Jillian Knapczyk, Jacqueline Janctas, Kelly Lein, Selenia Murillo, Jessica Nechvatil, Rose Petrucelli, Erin Pikowski, Bianca Rojas, and Alexandria Warner, all of Chicago; Amanda Adecock of Hickory Hills, Jessica Cazares, Colleen Gajewski, and Atziry Lee, all of Justice; Courtney Blouzdis, Emily Straple, Lauren Szot, Helen Tanehez, Claudia Valencia, Julie Vargas, Breanna Vrkljan, Cynthia Wojtaszek, Elise Zahorowski, all of Oak Lawn; and Sarah Geinosky of Palos Heights.

Homeschool Panel Discussion

The Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., will host a panel discussion program addressing how to homeschool your children from 6 to 7 p.m. on Wednesday, April 18th.

Are you new to homeschooling? Thinking of homeschooling as an option? Or are you just curious to learn more about it? Panel members will discuss why they chose to homeschool, how to get started, socialization and friends outside of the classroom, as well as answer questions from the audience. No registration required.

The library sponsors a Homeschool Group that meets the second Thursday of each month from 10 a.m. to noon. All ages are welcome. No registration required.

If you would like to have additional information, please feel free to call (708) 422-4990.

Senate Hearing On Pet Food Contamination

U.S. Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL) announced the U.S. Senate will hold an oversight hearing on the ongoing investigation and the regulatory mechanisms that govern the pet food industry as the widespread recall of contaminated pet food continues.

"Many cats, dogs and other pets, considered members of the family are now suffering as a result of a deeply flawed pet food inspection system," said Durbin. "The FDA's response to this situation has been tragically slow. Pet owners deserve answers. The uncertainty about what is safe to feed their pets has gone on far too long. I want to learn exactly when the FDA knew about the contamination, who is inspecting pet food manufacturing plants, and whether we need to force the FDA to update their regulations to protect our pets. Most importantly, I want to hear how the FDA is going to work to resolve the current crisis and ensure this doesn't happen again."

Durbin, a member of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, is working with Senator Herb Kohl (D-WI), the Chairman of the Subcommittee, to schedule the hearing shortly after the Senate returns from recess next week. Hearing witnesses will include FDA officials who will be questioned on the timeline of the investigation, the source of the contamination, and the agency's regulatory and inspection responsibilities. The hearing will also include outside experts who will discuss the current state of the pet food industry, as well as regulatory or resource shortfalls that led to the widespread recall of tainted pet food.

While the FDA is reporting 15 animal deaths due to poisoning, the agency has received more than 10,000 complaints over the last several weeks. Reports of the actual number of animal deaths due to tainted food vary widely from other sources.

Durbin is urging the FDA to take action in three specific areas. Delay in reporting. Menu Foods, Inc. first noticed a potential problem on Feb. 20, but did not contact FDA until March 15. In the meantime, other companies were selling tainted product and the supplier wasn't aware that it had provided wheat gluten contaminated with melamine. Durbin wants companies that delay reporting to the FDA and endanger human and animal health to face penalties.

Lack of inspections. The Emporia, Kansas Menu Foods facility where many of these products were made had never been inspected by the FDA. The agency has been relying on the states to conduct inspections, but the FDA has jurisdiction over all pet food manufacturing facilities and the ultimate responsibility to ensure facilities comply with FDA standards. Where there should be federal regulation, there is instead a patchwork of state inspection systems and voluntary guidance. Durbin wants to require the FDA to work with the states to establish a standardized set of regulations and inspection requirements.

Incomplete data and reporting from the FDA. Blogs and nonprofit websites have filled a gap and become the most efficient way to share information on contaminations. Durbin wants to direct the FDA to create a similar information sharing system that would allow state veterinarians, pet owners and others to alert the FDA of possible contaminations.

NARFE Meeting

The National Active and Retired Federal Employees Association (NARFE) Southwest Chicago Metro Chapter 1106 will hold its next meeting on Wednesday, April 18th, at 10:30 a.m. The meeting will take place in the Bridgeview Public Library, 7840 W. 79th St., Bridgeview.

NARFE accepts all current federal employees, federal retirees, their spouses and survivors into membership. The chapter covers the southwest side of Chicago and many of the suburbs north and south of I-55.

At the meeting, members are given the latest updates on legislation that affects the federal employee and retiree community. There usually is a guest speaker as well.

For more information on NARFE, come to the April 18th meeting or call President John Altar at (708) 458-4990 or secretary Cathy Siciliano at (708) 599-1601.

Statement On United Nations Global Warming Report

The week of April 2nd was a historic week for our states, our nation and the world in facing the challenge of global climate change.

On Friday, April 6th, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change of the United Nations, comprised of respected scientists and government officials from 113 countries, issued a new report predicting that global warming will have dire effects including drought, heat waves, rising sea levels, extinction of species, hunger and disease. Burning fossil fuels is the main source of the greenhouse gases that trap heat and warm the earth. Despite the worldwide consensus - reflected in the report - that climate change is imminent and its effects could be devastating, the federal government has not taken serious action to reduce greenhouse gases.

On Monday, April 2nd, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that carbon dioxide is, in fact, a pollutant and that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has the authority under the federal Clean Air Act to regulate greenhouse gases, in contrast to claims by the federal government that it lacks such authority. We applaud the Court's landmark decision and are hopeful that the United States will soon join other nations that have already committed to serious action to address global warming. As the world's leading emitter of global warming gases such as carbon dioxide, the United States has a special responsibility to confront this looming threat to global ecology, economies and public health.

States in the Northeast and West Coast have shown that states do not have to wait for federal action to take meaningful steps to reduce greenhouse gases. Midwestern states, like Illinois and Wisconsin, are now taking action to address the growing crisis of global warming.

Both Illinois and Wisconsin have established statewide task forces to suggest how our states can achieve meaningful reductions in greenhouse gases while benefiting our states' economies and environment through investment in new, clean technologies.

Both of our states aim to produce 25 percent of the electricity and transportation fuels we need from clean, renewable energy sources like biofuels and wind power by 2025. The windy plains and vast fields of corn, soybeans and other energy crops make the nation's heartland uniquely capable of achieving this ambitious but attainable goal to reduce global warming while becoming more energy self-reliant.

There is no challenge more pressing and more important to face than protecting our planet for the benefit of future generations. As Midwestern governors, we are proud to help lead our nation to a more secure, sustainable and prosperous future where we can meet our energy needs while protecting our planet.

Slippery Oil And Gas Deals

Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White warned investors that although oil prices have fallen since reaching an all-time high last summer, fraudulent oil and gas deals remain a favorite ploy of con artists nationwide.

White, whose office regulates the securities industry in Illinois and investigates complaints of fraud or improper practices, issued the warning in conjunction with the North American Securities Administrators Association (NASAA), the membership organization of state and provincial securities regulators.

"Investors who consider participating in oil and gas ventures should ensure they understand the risk involved," said White. "We also want to warn people that we have seen fraudulent energy deals aggressively promoted to the public. Investors should always research the background of anyone who promotes an investment opportunity to them, get a clear explanation of the deal in writing and carefully read all the fine print."

According to the NASAA, skyrocketing prices of oil and natural gas in recent years have made a variety of traditional and alternative energy projects attractive to investors. Most of these investments are highly risky and not appropriate for smaller investors. And even where the underlying project is legitimate, any revenues realized can be absorbed by high sales commissions paid to the promoter and dubious 'expenses' skimmed off by the managing partner. Most scam deals, say regulators, are devastatingly simple.

White said NASAA has issued an alert to investors who may be considering oil and gas opportunities. Because these investments seem to be interstate in nature, NASAA also has coordinated a network of representatives from state securities agencies to share information on oil and gas investment schemes. Over the past two years, state securities regulators throughout the country have opened more than 260 cases involving oil and gas-related schemes and have issued 122 cease and desist orders against promoters. In Illinois a dozen cases have been opened thus far against potential violators of the law.

Scam artists tend to target individual victims and make an unsolicited contact, usually with a phone call, offering a great business opportunity. Most oil and gas fraud victims don't realize they have been swindled until after the money is gone.

Businesses raising money by soliciting investors must comply with the Illinois Securities law. Scam artists usually tell prospective victims that they are licensed and their investment is registered - and they can be quite convincing.

"You should never take unsolicited promoters offering investment opportunities at their word," White said. "You should always investigate before you invest and my office is available to help."

The Secretary of State Securities Department can tell you whether an individual and his or her company are licensed to sell securities in Illinois, and whether they have a history of disciplinary action. The Securities Department can be contacted by calling 1-800-628-7937 or through its website at www.avoidthescam.net.

Two Important Supreme Court Victories For Clean Air

The U.S. Supreme Court recently handed down two important Clean Air Act decisions. In Massachusetts v. EPA, the court ruled that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has the authority to regulate greenhouse gas emissions from automobiles that scientists say contribute to global warming and climate change.

The US EPA had argued that under the Clean Air Act, it did not have sufficient statutory authority to enforce such measures. Illinois joined Massachusetts and 10 environmental organizations as petitioners in the case.

"Today's Supreme Court victory is an important first step in ensuring that the US EPA takes all appropriate action to effectively deal with climate change," said Attorney General Lisa Madigan.

The Supreme Court also unanimously turned back a Clean Air Act New Source Review challenge by Duke Energy Corporation regarding a Virginia power plant. Illinois filed an amicus brief in Environmental Defense Fund v. Duke Energy Corp. in support of the US EPA's contention that companies who make changes to polluting facilities such as power plants and refineries must update their pollution control equipment whenever those changes increase the total amount of pollution emitted annually - for example, where the changes allow the plant to operate more hours per day or more days per year. Duke Energy had argued that the control equipment upgrades were only required for expansions of plant capacity that result in more pollution emitted per hour.

"The U.S. Supreme Court today preserved the clear provisions of the Clean Air Act, which safeguard the air we breathe from factories, refineries and power plants by requiring modern pollution controls on plants that increase their emissions," said Madigan.

"The court recognized that these controls have to be installed not just on the rare occasions when companies expand plant capacity, but whenever they make changes that result in more pollution over time."

With five days remaining before the April 17th Election look for the remaining days to be filled with complaints and counter-charges by several hopeful candidates. It is our fervent wish that an active and informed citizenry will exercise their privilege to select candidates and referenda questions which have the potential to alter both their future and their families future as well.

As we have suggested in past elections, we remind our readers once again to look for substance and value in their selections, i.e. experience, professionalism and character. Is the candidate you are selecting a person you would be comfortable with representing yourself and family, speaking on your behalf, and making difficult decisions that will impact and govern your life? This is the responsibility you are placing upon someone when you cast your vote to their campaign.

There are a variety of municipal, school board and library board races, as well as referendums this Tuesday, April 17th, 2007. We have done our best to evaluate the strengths, weaknesses, talents and future plans of numerous candidates. There are no losers in our community elections since each candidate has attempted to give of himself/herself and be seen in their most favorable light. We congratulate all of the various participants in advance for offering a part of themselves to the public. Your sacrifice is greatly appreciated and noted. Best of everything in the days, weeks and months ahead.

We have several municipalities in which incumbent leaders and trustees are being challenged for retention. In Bridgeview, Village President Steve Landek and his Active Party running mates get our endorsement for their continued revitalization of a community. Bridgeview continues to build their tax base, helping school districts, community residents and the Southwest Corridor.

The Village of Oak Lawn continues to be a lightning rod for controversy in recent years, primarily because of perception. This time around, a variety of interesting candidates vie for voter approval. In the 1st District, incumbent Jerry Hurckes has repeatedly proven that his strong work ethic and interest in his constituents deserves a retention vote over challenger Kurt Madey. Hurckes earns our endorsement. 3rd District incumbent Bob Streit continues to prove that he is a force to be appreciated. He is endorsed. In the 5th District, incumbent Trustee Marjorie Ann Joy has devoted some 16 years to improving her neighbors quality of life. She is endorsed over a pair of first time candidates, James Jelinski and Carol Quinlan. Quinlan has the potential to become a District Trustee. She merely needs a bit more experience.

In the Village of Worth, Mayor Ed Guzdzio's Progressive Party offers Sally Hartz, Kari Fickes and Mike Doeden to local voters for Trustees. While 2 of the above candidates are newcomers for Trustee they have extended their consideration and confidence, and will continue to pursue projects that will improve their neighbors lives. Former Progressive Party members Randy Keller and Mary Rhein now anchor the Voices of Worth Party and will attempt to secure successful Trustee retention along with Pete Kats. We have confidence in Mayor Guzdzio and his team of Trustees and offer them our endorsement.

In Evergreen High School District 231 we favor three candidates that we feel will continue to advance the excellent educational experience. Incumbents Gail S. Morales and Daniel E. McKeown have proven themselves more than capable in dealing with the district's day to day problems. They have earned our gratitude and endorsement.

We also feel that newcomer Thomas

Sinon, a lifelong resident with two children presently attending Evergreen Park schools, would add valuable experience to the District 231 Board.

In the Palos Community Consolidated School District 118 we endorse Nadine Antonini, Sheila Pacholski and Rick Nogal. These three candidates, who are running as a team, offer a practical mix of education, commitment and a willingness to address everyday problems that students face on an ever escalating basis.

In Consolidated High School District 230 we see Mr. Lee Ro'pas as an excellent young candidate who brings a quality educational and leadership background to the table. He is endorsed.

For Moraine Valley Community College Trustee we endorse Board Chairman Sandra S. Wagner, Secretary Joseph P. Murphy and newcomer Terry D. Cornell, Jr. These three highly committed professionals will continue to insist that Moraine Valley will provide a quality education for modest fees.

The Economic Development Council for the Southwest Suburbs will host their 2007 Spring Breakfast on Thursday, April 19th at Silver Lake Country Club in Orland Park. Breakfast at 7:45 a.m. Program begins at 8:15 a.m. Guest speaker will be Mr. Phil Immordino, President of the Champion Group. Following the presentation, a free one-hour golf clinic on putting and chipping. Bring your own putter and 9-iron. Tickets are $35 per person. For more information, contact Eda Schrimple at (708) 974-5714.

Registration is underway for the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life event which will be held April 27-28 in the Dan and Ada Rice Center on the campus of Benedictine University.

Relay for Life is the American Cancer Society's nationwide signature event involving 1.75 million participants in 2,900 communities. A quarter-million cancer survivors participate in the opening laps representing hope that someday a cure will be found. Participants in this community-based event raise money to fight cancer and increase awareness of the disease.

Teams consist of 10-15 people who camp out together in an effort to raise money and awareness about cancer. Each team must have at least one member walking or running the track during the entire event. A variety of corporations, hospitals, civic groups, neighborhoods, schools, and churches are represented each year. (Last year, this event raised over $60,000 for cancer research!)

To learn more about this event or to register a team, contact Amy Garrison at (630) 932-1141 or e-mail her at Amy.Garrison@cancer.org, or visit the Web site at www.acseven.org/relay/il/benedictine.

The 22nd Annual Misericordia Candy Days will be held on Friday, April 27th and Saturday, April 28th. Thousands of volunteers will be on the street corners raising funds for Misericordia's challenging programs for adults and children with developmental disabilities. The Jelly Belly Candy Company has generously agreed to donate 1.2 million bags of their popular jelly beans. For more information, visit www.misericordia.org or call (773) 273-2768. Volunteers are always appreciated!

For more information about blood cancer, visit www.LLS.org, or call the Society's Information Resource Center (IRC), a call center staffed by master's level social workers, nurses and health educators who provide information, support and resources to patients and their families and caregivers. IRC information specialists are available at (800) 955-4572, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. ET.

Motorists Urged To Slow Down In Work Zones

Trent also noted that ISP will also be strictly enforcing Scott's law violations, which make it an offense if a driver fails to slow down and if possible change lanes when police squad cars or other emergency vehicles with flashing lights

These vans are an additional state-of-the-art enforcement tool that helps reduce fatalities in work zones. Motorists, as well as workers, are at risk when driving in work zones due to configurations that include narrower lanes, lane jogs and dips, closed shoulders and lane closures. Driving at slower speeds allows motorists more time to react to changed conditions.

Southwest Symphony Orchestra presents 'An Evening Of Rodgers And Hart'

Join the Southwest Symphony Orchestra under the direction of David L. Crane in its season finale on Saturday, April 21st at 8 p.m. at Trinity Christian College's Ozinga Chapel, 6601 W. College Drive in Palos Heights. The theme of the concert is "An Evening of Rodgers and Hart," an evening of American song featuring four soloists and the combined choruses of Palos District Voices of the Valley directed by Alice Maguire.

The featured soloists include Candice Crane, former member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Chorus and the Lyric Chorus of Chicago. She has appeared with Chicago Opera Theater, Chamber Opera of Chicago and Northwestern University's Ragland Opera Theater. Debra Austin, distinguished soloist, has portrayed Hansel in Humperdinck's Hansel und Gretel with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra; Suzuki in Puccini's Madame Butterfly with Chicago Opera Theater; the title role in Offenbach's La Perichole with Light Opera Works. She made her Chicago Symphony Orchestra debut in Bach's St. Matthew Passion under Sir Georg Solti. Marc Stingley is highly regarded for his impressive musical background. He has sung throughout Europe and has been tenor soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and the New York Chamber Orchestra. Robert Heitzinger has had solo appearances with the Grant Park Symphony Orchestra, Omaha Symphony, Chicago Sinfonietta, Chicago Opera Theater and appearances on Broadway, the Kennedy Center and throughout the United States and Europe. His recordings are available on Amadis and Centaur labels. He is currently on the faculty of Northwestern University.

Ticket prices start at $16 seniors, $20 adults, $5 students, children under 12 are free. Order tickets by calling (708) 802-0686. Groups of 10 or more may purchase tickets for $10 each. Don't forget the raffle drawing during intermission for tickets to New York City and a Broadway show.

Charlie's Angels Benefit And Auction

A Special Event and Auction will take place on Sunday, April 15th from 1 to 6 p.m. at 115 Bourbon Street in Merriotte Park. On Oct. 19th, 2006, Charlotte Rendine was admitted to the hospital after complaining of having pain in her arm. After very extensive tests, four-year-old Charlie was diagnosed with osteosarcoma, an aggressive form of bone cancer. This condition primarily affects pre-adolescents and is extremely rare in children under 5.

The tumor is contained to a primary site, which makes Charlie's odds of survival very good. Charlie's family and friends in the Chicago area have come together to organize this benefit for her. They are calling the event "Charlie's Angels" because Charlie often talks about the guardian angels she says are with her most of the time. Charlie's family is the Reilly/Winkler Family of Most Holy Redeemer Parish.

There is a $40 donation to the benefit, which includes food, beer, wine and entertainment. A raffle and silent auction are part of the benefit. Raffle tickets are $50 each with only 1200 being sold. First prize is $10,000; second prize is two winners of $5,000; third prize is ten winners of $1,000 each.

To make a monetary donation, make a check payable to The Charlotte Rendine Fund, c/o Evergreen Community Bank EIN: 20-5804-191, 3842 W. 95th Street, Evergreen Park, IL, 60805.

Chicago Zoological Society Whirl Benefit

Approximately 800 to 900 civic and business leaders from the Chicago area are expected to attend the 26th annual Whirl on Saturday, April 21st, at Brookfield Zoo. The black-tie fund-raising event is hosted by the Women's Board of the Chicago Zoological Society (CZS). This year's gala, themed "Travel the Whirl," will highlight the zoo's okapis, orangutans, trumpeter swans, and paradise tanagers. This year's Whirl chair is Susan Ahern.

The magical evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres at The Carousel, where guests can take a spin on the popular hand-carved wooden attraction that opened in 2006. In addition, zookeepers will be on hand to talk about animal care, the husbandry and enrichment program, and conservation efforts.

Afterwards, guests will be welcomed into the main dinner tent, where the evening's theme comes to life. The four quadrants of the tent will be brilliantly decorated by Phillip's Flowers, each highlighting one of four continents - North America, South America, Asia, and Africa - from which the evening's four featured animal species inhabit the wild. The florist worked with the Society's nutritionists to select centerpiece arrangements that will be fed to some of the animals following the Whirl. The four-course dinner menu, catered by Calihan Catering, Inc., was chosen with ocean conservation in mind and in accordance with the Blue Ocean Institute's "Guide to Ocean Friendly Seafood." Throughout the evening, guests can enjoy dancing to the sounds of Gentlemen of Leisure.

Preceding dinner, Jann Carl of Entertainment Tonight will lead a live auction featuring four incredible items - a Jean Schlumberger bracelet donated by Tiffany & Co. and international trips to the lush tropical forests of Rwanda and Tanzania, the Galapagos Islands, and Knight Inlet, Canada. In addition throughout the evening, guests can purchase raffle tickets for a chance to win magnificent prizes, including a $2,500 gift card to Walter E. Smith Custom Furniture store; an in-home dinner for 12 catered by Calihan Catering, Inc.; two Home Plate Club seats to a Chicago White Sox game in May (excluding New York Yankees series) plus autographed memorabilia courtesy of Chicago White Sox; dinner for 12 at Brookfield Zoo's Seven Seas Underwater Viewing Gallery; and several framed and matted 16- by 20-inch photographs of animals that reside at Brookfield Zoo.

The general public can get a glimpse inside this year's Whirl as well as animals and exhibits at Brookfield Zoo during a special half-hour program, "CBS at Brookfield Zoo," which will air Saturday, April 28, at 6:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the $600 per-person 2007 Whirl will benefit the Society's conservation and education program. The Women's Board has already raised nearly $1.2 million for this year's fund raiser. For further information about the Whirl, call (312) 553-2000.

The mission of the Chicago Zoological Society, which manages Brookfield Zoo, is to inspire conservation leadership by connecting people with wildlife and nature. Open every day of the year, the zoo is located off First Ave. between the Stevenson (I-55) and Eisenhower (I-290) expressways and is also accessible via the Tri-State Tollway (I-294), Metra commuter line, CTA, and PACE bus service.

'Big - The Musical'

The Beverly Theatre Guild (BTG) presents "big - the musical" at the Beverly Arts Center, 2407 W. 111th St., Chicago, Friday, April 20 and Saturday, April 21 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, April 22 at 2 p.m. The large cast includes actors and artistic staff from Chicago and throughout the suburbs. For tickets call (773) 445-3838 or buy on-line at www.beverlyartcenter.org.

"big - the musical" (book by John Weidman, lyrics by Richard Maltby, Jr. and music by David Shire), was adapted from the motion picture starring Tom Hanks. It is the story of Josh Baskin, a frustrated adolescent who makes a wish to be "big" to Zoltar, a coin-operated carnival machine, and wakes up the next morning a 30-year-old man. Experiencing everything from work to play, he discovers there is more to being a grown-up than he had thought.

The show director is Josh Penzell (Chicago-Rogers Park); musical director is George Machay (Blue Island); choreographer is Taryn Herman (Chicago-Ukrainian Village); and assistant director is Elizabeth McInerney (Chicago-Beverly). The producers are Wayne Wendell (Chicago-Beverly), Anne McGowan (Evergreen Park), and Eileen Casey (Alsip).

The cast includes David Bell (Chicago - Ravenswood), Eric Galvin (Chicago - Morgan Park), Gerron Jordan (Chicago - Morgan Park), Mary Kelly (Chicago - Beverly), Nissa Harvey (Chicago - Beverly), Meg Massaro (Chicago - Beverly), Jennifer Stuart (Chicago - Old Town), Wayne Wendell (Chicago - Beverly), Maura Manahan (Chicago - Morgan Park), Liz Temple (Chicago - Morgan Park), Kelson Bain (Chicago - Pullman), Kelly Carevic (Orland Park), Marty Donovan (Orland Park), Shea Pender (Oak Lawn), Reagan Pender (Oak Lawn), Elise Harrigan (Oak Lawn), Nicole Pembroke (Oak Lawn), Becca Allpow (Evergreen Park), Colin Allpow (Evergreen Park), Matthew Allpow (Evergreen Park), and Kim Brines (Evergreen Park), Brian Leo (Mokena).

Megan Leo (Mokena), Nora Jones (Crown Point, Ind.), Tobi Lowrance (Oak Forest), Laurie Videka Krizka (Homer Glen), Julie Zeblickis (Bolingbrook) Bianca Minniti (Burr Ridge), Treasur Wright (South Holland), Michael Hager (Woodridge) and Ian McCafferty (Burbank).

Tulip Days Activities Announced

The fourth annual Tulip Days on The Magnificent Mile, presented by LaSalle Bank and The Greater North Michigan Avenue Association April 16 through May 31, will usher in a sea of tulips and a roster of local promotions and events to honor the spring season. In addition to the explosion of color along The Magnificent Mile and in honor of its partnership with LaSalle Bank, a subsidiary of Netherlands-based ABN AMRO Bank N.V., the Consulate General of the Kingdom of the Netherlands and Bike Chicago month, whimsical bicycle sculptures created by teens from Chicago's After School Matters will adorn the tulip beds.

Forty local businesses will be sponsoring the bicycle sculptures that have been created by students ages 14 to 19 who participate in the "After School Matters" art program. Art Instructor Bob Klunk remarked, "Using salvaged bicycles the students were asked to create sculptures. Some chose to paint and embellish existing bicycles while others deconstructed the bicycles and created whimsical sculptures from the parts."

Area retailers, restaurants, hotels and cultural institutions in tandem with the Consulate General of the Kingdom of the Netherlands will also be presenting special offerings in celebration of Tulip Days. A complete list of activities is listed at www.themagnificentmile.com or call (312) 409-5560.

OUTDOORS-WOMAN REGISTRATION OPEN: The Illinois Department of Natural Resources will be offering a "Becoming An Outdoors-Woman" program at Pere Marquette State Park from Sept. 28th to 30th. Registration opens June 6th for new participants and June 27th for BOW alumni. The $150 registration fee includes meals, housing, materials, giveaways, prizes and use of class equipment.

Only 90 spots are available so register early. For information and a registration form, visit www.dnr.state.il.us/lands/landmgmt/BOW, or call (217) 782-7026.

ENROLL IN A FREE BOATING SAFETY COURSE: With spring underway, IDNR Acting Director Sam Flood urged individuals planning to spend time out on the water to participate in one of the department's free boating safety education courses. The free courses provide important and potentially life-saving review of boating laws and regulations and instruction on safe and attentive boating. Safety education courses are a key to the state's boating safety effort. Nationwide, nearly 90 percent of all reported fatalities on boats involved boat operators who had not received boating safety instruction.

People between 12-18 years of age who operate a motorized watercraft by themselves are required by law to possess a boating safety certificate. State law requires that anyone under the age of 13 must wear a life jacket while aboard any watercraft under 26 feet in length at all times the boat is underway, unless they are below deck in an enclosed cabin or operating on private property. And all persons, regardless of age, are required to wear a life jacket while operating a personal watercraft or jet ski.

Statistics compiled by the IDNR show that 17 people died and 66 other people were injured in boating-related accidents in Illinois waters in 2006. There were a total of 78 boating accidents involving 118 watercraft last year. Among the primary causes of boating accidents are careless or reckless operation, operative inattention, equipment failure, hazardous water conditions and alcohol use.

Safety course schedules are available by phoning (800) 832-2599 or by checking the IDNR web site at <http://www.dnr.state.il.us>. Illinois also offers an online boat safety course through the IDNR web site at <http://dnr.state.il.us>. There is a $15 fee charged for the online course.

CONTAMINATION IN ARCTIC LINKED TO BIRD DROPPINGS: A major source of chemical contamination in the Arctic turns out to be bird droppings. Wind currents and human activities long have been blamed for fouling the pristine Arctic. But a study by a group of Canadian researchers found that the pollution in areas frequented by seabirds can be many times higher than in nearby regions.

Researchers led by Jules Blais of the University of Ottawa studied several ponds below the cliffs at Cape Vera on Devon Island in the Canadian Arctic. Scientists report in the journal Science that the ponds which receive falling guano form a colony of northern fulmars that nest on the cliffs, have highly elevated amounts of chemicals. The area of the study is one of the most desolate on Earth, Blais said, and the local food chain is dependent on the guano from the seabirds. (Great Lakes Basin Report)

CONNECTICUT STUDY RECOMMENDS DEER HUNTING INCREASE: A recent study in Connecticut shows that more hunting is needed to control deer in that state. Howard Kilpatrick, a Ph.D. student in natural resources management and engineering at the University of Connecticut, conducted research in Greenwich, Connecticut.

His research showed that how hunting slowed the growth in the city's deer population. Kilpatrick recommends that towns develop area-specific management plans, encourage gun and how hunting and provide more information to property owners about hunting. Kilpatrick explained that many of the state's highest deer densities are in areas where there is limited hunting. (The Sentry)

SPRING BOATING CONCERNS: The dramatic rescue of a kayaker from a flood-swollen river in Wisconsin last month offers what state boating safety specialists say is a compelling example of how quickly cold water can affect a person and why boaters need to take special precautions when on waterways this spring.

On March 13th around 5:30 p.m. the Pierce County Sheriff's Department got a call that a woman kayaking in flood conditions on the Rush River had overturned and became separated from her boat. The victim was in the middle of the river on a log and was becoming hypothermic.

Rescuers wearing survival suits were able to reach the woman, but she said she was unable to grasp anything with her hands and she was unsure if she could even move from the log due to how cold she was.

Wisconsin DNR Warden Brad Peterson arrived at the scene in a flat bottom boat and was able to reach the victim, and rescuers were able to get her into the boat for transport to a hospital. "LET'S BE CAREFUL OUT THERE."

St. Xavier Beats Trinity Christian 5-3

Senior designated hitter Ryan Buchler went 2-for-3 with a triple and two runs scored to help lead St. Xavier University to a 5-3 victory over Trinity Christian College (Ill.) in CCAC baseball action on March 27th at Richard R. Ferrell Memorial Field in Chicago. With the victory, the Cougars stay perfect in the conference standings with a 3-0 record and move back over .500 on the season with a 9-8 overall mark. Trinity Christian falls to 5-13 on the year and 0-1 in the league standings.

Sophomore centerfielder Don Skelly paced the Cougars' offense with three hits on the day. He also finished with a run scored and two stolen bases. Senior catcher Brian Grupp posted his second home run of the season in Tuesday's win, a solo shot over the left field wall to open the bottom of the seventh inning. The Cougars took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the second inning when Buchler led things off with a triple to right-centerfield. He later scored on a RBI single from senior third baseman Nick Tantillo who finished with two RBI on the afternoon.

Trinity Christian took the lead in the top of the third with two runs off a single to centerfield by senior third baseman Aaron Werkman. SXU answered in the bottom of the inning when a dropped fly ball in the right field with two outs scored a run and kept the inning alive for Buchler to record a RBI single on the next at-bat. Down 3-2 heading into the seventh inning, Trinity Christian led things off with a double by junior shortstop Ryan Tevepaugh, who later tied the game up, 3-3, on a sacrifice fly. However, Grupp's homer in the bottom of the seventh broke the tie and Buchler was able to cross home plate again in the eighth inning to secure the 5-3 win.

Senior righthander Shawn Bosler got the start for SXU and was solid throwing six innings and allowing five hits, two runs (earned) and three walks with four strikeouts. Sophomore rightie Bryant Myjak notched the win on the mound for the Cougars in relief pitching two innings and giving up one hit, one run (earned) and no walks with a strikeout. Sophomore righthander Dan Miller picked up the save putting the Trolls down 1-2-3 in the ninth inning.

Lakeshore Ski & Sports Club Meeting

Lakeshore Ski and Sports Club will meet on Wednesday, April 18th at Chief O'Neill's Pub, 3471 N. Elston at Albany in Chicago. The meeting begins at 7 p.m. The 2006-07 ski season is over; however, there are many exciting spring and summer activities ahead which include a Greek Dinner on Friday, June 1st, a Bicycle Trip to Spring Green, WI from June 22nd to 24th, and the Annual End of Summer Picnic on Saturday, Aug. 25th, to name a few of the events planned. It is the last opportunity to sign up for the Annual Spring Banquet on Friday, April 27th. LSSC also has a year-round Tennis Program.

LSSC meets the first and third Wednesday of every month from September through May and third Wednesday only during the months of June, July and August.

For further information, visit the web site at www.lssc.org, call (708) 786-3992 or email lakeshoreskiandsportclub@yahoo.com.

Marist Baseball Program

Marist High School Baseball Program will be hosting a 13 year-old boy's baseball tournament on June 8, 9, and 10 at the Marist High School baseball fields. This will be a 60ft. - 90ft. tournament. All players will receive a Marist High School baseball T-shirt for their participation.

For information regarding the tournament contact Rob Pyznarski at (708) 424-8379.

"Fishing For Trash"

As part of its weeklong Earth Day activities, the Forest Preserve District of Will County is sponsoring "Fishing for Trash" at Monsee Reservoir. Visitors to the fishing/boating lake can volunteer to collect trash while they are fishing or hiking the preserve trails during the week of Tuesday, April 17th through Sunday, April 22nd during the hours the preserve is open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Fishing line and other types of debris pose serious threats to wildlife and obscure the inherent beauty of the preserve. Help us fulfill our mission to preserve and protect the natural resources of Will County by pitching in to pick up any debris you find. To participate, stop by the concession window, pick up a small trash bag, and fill it with any trash you find. Return the filled trash bag to the concession building and receive a voucher for a free one-hour boat rental of your choice. (The voucher must be used in 2007.) Participation is free and open to all ages.

Monsee Reservoir is located on Ridgeland Ave., west of Route 50 and south of Pauling Road, 2.0 miles south of Monsee.

For information, call the reservoir at (708) 534-8499.

Projects Honored With Pride In Partnership Awards

Contractors and government agencies on state-funded construction projects in Chicago and Grayslake with a high level of minority and female participation were recognized during the annual Pride in Partnership Awards ceremony held March 30 in Springfield.

The Construction of the Convocation Center at Chicago State University received the Minority/Female Workforce Participation Award, presented for a commitment to equal employment opportunities for minorities and women in the construction trades. Thoughtful hiring practices allowed this project to exceed the workforce participation goals established for this project. Linear Electric Incorporated was the award recipient, and the FEP Compliance Technician for this project was Andy Campos.

The University Center, College of Lake County Grayslake, received the Participation Award for providing construction opportunities for minority and female construction suppliers and subcontractors. Project partners demonstrated outstanding advocacy on behalf of the State of Illinois' MBE/FBE (Minority Business Enterprise/Female Business Enterprise) program and can serve as a model for fair employment practices. Henry Brothers of Hickory Hills was the award recipient, and the FEP Compliance Technician for this project was Andy Campos.

The CDB continues to promote and encourage minority and female owned and operated businesses to participate in the state's procurement process as prime contractors, subcontractors and suppliers. In addition, CDB encourages all business partners to overcome the underutilization of minority and female tradespersons. The CDB Unit of Fair Employment Practices oversees the MBE/FBE Program, which promotes opportunities for minority and female owned firms; and the Department of Human Rights Minority/Female Workforce Program, which assists minority and female tradespersons by ensuring employment opportunities are met on CDB projects.

The Capital Development Board manages the construction, repair and renovation of state facilities across Illinois, including colleges and universities, mental health facilities, veterans' homes and historic buildings. Capital Development Board projects include the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum, new State Emergency Operations Center and the World Shooting and Recreational Complex in Sparta.

What To Look For When Cicadas Hatch This Spring

The series of serene springs and silent summers Illinoisans have been enjoying the past 17 years will be noticeably interrupted in a few weeks.

Cicadas - flying insects about one to two inches long noted for their shrill, sometimes deafening choruses - will emerge from the ground along a path about 200 miles long that stretches from northwestern Indiana to Wisconsin. Periodical cicadas emerge in vast numbers - as many as 1.5 million per acre - overwhelming predators by sheer numbers.

As many as three species may emerge simultaneously in northeastern Illinois. Their numbers seem to vary according to habitat and geography, tending to be most abundant in areas that historically were forested. The different species are very similar in appearance but their songs are readily distinguishable.

This year, researchers from the DuPage County Forest

Preserve will be conducting a survey to determine how many species of cicada are emerging and where they are being found. The study will answer a number of questions including what is the relative abundance of each species and how their emergence patterns compare to historical data.

Community members who are interested in participating in this study - or just want to learn more about this unusual insect - may attend a workshop at 4 p.m. on Tuesday, May 1st in Birch Hall, Room 112, on the campus of Benedictine University. The workshop will be led by Carl Strang, Ph.D., a naturalist from the DuPage county Forest Preserve.

To hear the songs of the cicadas visit http://insects.umnz.lsa.umich.edu/fauna/Michigan_Cicadas/Michigan/index.html. For more information about the workshop, contact John Mickus at (630) 829-6539 or by email at jmickus@ben.edu.

Maximize Your Health Insurance Benefits

Finding cost benefits and greater value in your health care insurance policy may seem like a fantasy. Yet, with minimal effort, consumers can gain such returns.

"Many people are unaware that their health plans offer value added benefits and other resources at no additional cost - that can save them money and improve their health practices," said Dr. Prentiss Taylor, Jr., medical director of UnitedHealthcare of Illinois.

Based on the policies, according to Taylor, you may be able to:

Lower your prescription costs. Many health plans offer savings for members who use generic or preferred brands. Others offer a discount with half-tab programs; your doctor prescribes a larger dosage and you use a device to split the medication. UnitedHealthcare members who choose to split their pills, for example, can reduce their medication co-pay by half.

Find value-added benefits. Your health coverage may provide benefits such as vision care discounts, wellness products such as smoking cessation programs, fitness club memberships and weight/nutrition counseling.

Utilize educational resources during pregnancy. For pregnant women, some insurance plans offer education, health assessments and other support resources.

Use case manager assistance if needed. Make sure your plan offers case managers who are generally socially trained nurses to guide you over the bumps and pitfalls in case a troubling condition, such as lower back pain, or a more serious illness, such as cancer, occurs.

Activate check-up reminders. Your health plan should inform you when it's time to visit the doctor for check-ups and procedures such as mammograms, pap smears, vaccinations and annual physicals.

Request electronic prescriptions. Verify that your health insurance program utilizes electronic prescriptions and electronic health records. These records are proven to avoid errors and lead to safer outcomes.

Conduct a self-assessment of your health. Many health plans allow you to do conduct an online self-assessment of your health that takes into consideration current conditions and risks. These often provide interactive advice and coaching about how you can change your lifestyle to improve your health.

"By utilizing every resource at your disposal, you can improve your health and the health of your family," added Taylor. "Be sure to read your health insurance policy and member handbook to get a better understanding of such offerings."

Chicago Women's Health Conference

New York Times Science Reporter Denise Grady will be the keynote speaker at the third annual Catch Your Breath Conference and Reception on May 2nd at the Marriott Hotel in downtown Chicago from 2 to 7 p.m.

The event, held by the American Lung Assn. of Metropolitan Chicago, spotlights the disproportionate effect of lung disease on women and underscores inadequate funding of women's lung health issues.

Denise Grady became a reporter for the Science News Dept. of the New York Times in September 1998. She has written more than 500 stories about medicine and biology for the Times, and has edited Times' books on women's health and alternative medicine. As a freelance writer from 1988 to 1998, Ms. Grady contributed to many publications, including Science, Discover, Time, Scientific American, Vogue, Reader's Digest, American Health, Parenting and Self.

Proceeds of the event support local lung health advocacy, research and education programs. The reception is open to the public. Tickets are priced at $125 for reception and education sessions, $40 for education sessions only and $100 for reception only. For more information, visit www.catchyourbreathchicago.org or call (312) 243-2000.

Danger Signs Of Red-Faced Disorder

The angst and embarrassment of adolescence often come roaring back in adulthood with the red-faced symptoms of rosacea, a widespread but poorly understood facial disorder now estimated to affect 14 million Americans. The National Rosacea Society has designated April as Rosacea Awareness Month to alert the public to the warning signs of this conspicuous and potentially serious condition, and to emphasize the importance of seeking medical help before it becomes increasingly intrusive on daily life.

"Most people expect to leave facial skin problems behind when they reach adulthood, so they're often puzzled and frustrated by the onset of rosacea," said Dr. John Wolf, chairman of dermatology at Baylor University College of Medicine. "While the early signs of the disorder may come and go unexpectedly, without treatment it tends to grow more persistent and severe, posing a substantial impact both physically and on people's emotional, social and professional lives."

For many people, rosacea starts as a temporary redness on the cheeks, nose, chin or forehead that at first might be mistaken for sunburn. Over time, the redness tends to become ruddier and more prolonged, and visible blood vessels may appear. If left untreated, bumps and pimples often develop, growing more extensive over time.

In severe cases, especially in men, the nose may become swollen and bumpy from excess tissue. This is the condition called rhinophyma that gave the late comedian W.C. Fields his trademark bulbous nose. In many rosacea patients, the eyes are also affected, feeling irritated and appearing watery or bloodshot.

"The good news is that, while rosacea cannot be cured, it can be effectively controlled with medical therapy and lifestyle changes," Dr. Wolf said. Individuals with any of the following warning signs of rosacea are urged to see a dermatologist for diagnosis and appropriate treatment:

Redness on the cheeks, nose, chin or forehead.

Small visible blood vessels on the face.

Bumps or pimples on the face.

Watery or irritated eyes.

Because the underlying causes and other key aspects of rosacea are unknown, the National Rosacea Society conducts a research grants program to encourage and support greater scientific knowledge of the potential causes and other key aspects of this poorly understood disorder. The society is now funding a growing number of research studies on rosacea that may lead to improvements in its treatment, management and potential cure or prevention.

During April and throughout the year, people who suspect they may have rosacea can call the society's toll-free number at 1(888) NO-BLUSH to receive free information on rosacea. Information and materials are also available on the society's Web site at www.rosacea.org, by writing the National Rosacea Society, 800 S. Northwest Highway, Suite 200, Barrington, IL 60010, or via e-mail at rosacea@aol.com.

Host Educational Conference

The largest Midwestern gathering of top physicians, researchers and disability attorneys on fibromyalgia will be presenting the latest information on the diagnosis and treatment of fibromyalgia and chronic fatigue syndrome at the Fibromyalgia Association Created for Education and Self-help's (FACES, Inc.) 2007 Fibromyalgia, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome Conference scheduled for May 18-20, at the Holiday Inn Matteson Hotel and Conference Center, in Matteson.

The three-day event will include over 20 separate presentations and workshops for patients, well family members, directors of health ministries, social service providers, health and healthcare advocates, attorneys, and physicians, with exhibitors featuring Fibromyalgia/Chronic Fatigue Syndrome friendly products and services.

The theme of the conference is "Crossing the Chronic Pain and Fatigue Bridge to Move from Passive Victim to Active Victor".

Dr. Muhammad Yunus, Professor of Medicine of the University of Illinois Medical School, will open the conference Friday morning, May 18, at 8 a.m. with an eyeing opening lecture into the Human Story Behind the Pain and Fatigue. Friday Luncheon Keynote speakers are Ms. Lynne Matallana of the National Fibromyalgia Association and Dr. Leonard Jason of DePaul University's Department of Psychology, Center for Community Research on Fatiguing Illnesses. Ms. Matallana will discuss the History of Fibromyalgia Research from a patient's perspective and Dr. Jason will discuss the issues surrounding the CFS Name Change.

The conference will also include a benefit fundraiser Friday Evening, May 18, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Holiday Inn Matteson. FACES will unveil Phase I of its Photographic Fibromyalgia Awareness Project. A visually impaired Gospel

Singer/Songwriter will debut her original song written specifically for people with Fibromyalgia. There will be a silent auction and fundraiser participants will learn the Sophisticated form of Chicago Dancing called "Steppin'" and join in for "Steppin' Out Fibromyalgia".

"People with Fibromyalgia, their family, friends, caregivers, alternative health care providers, and any individuals interested in general health and well-being will be able to find out the latest breakthroughs in Fibromyalgia and contemplate Fibromyalgia and Chronic Fatigue's affect on other health conditions, while acquiring legal information and an introduction to economic empowerment strategies at this conference," reports Sabrina Johnson, president and founder of the Fibromyalgia Association Created for Education and Self-help [FACES].

Conference attendees must pre-register on or before May 9. There will be no on-site registration. Registration fee is $150 per person. A group discount is available.

For more information on registration and exhibitor prospectus, visit the Fibromyalgia Association Created for Education and Self-help's website at www.fibrocop.org or call (773) 936-4183.

Think Twice Before Tanning For Prom

Nearly 2.3 million teenagers in the U.S. tan indoors annually, and with prom season right around the corner, the temptation to tan is even greater. But with the big night fast approaching, new research has found that the use of sunbeds during a person's teens and twenties is linked to an increase in melanoma risk, the deadliest form of skin cancer.

The International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) conducted a thorough review of several studies associating tanning bed use and melanoma risk. The researchers showed that the use of sunbeds under the age of 35 can increase melanoma risk by 75 percent. "This new research substantiates what we've believed for years about the danger of indoor tanning," said Perry Robins, MD, President of The Skin Cancer Foundation. "It clearly increases the risk of skin cancer, especially in young women, who are the biggest users. Perhaps people will finally start to listen now that this study and other recent research provides some science to back up the belief."

If the threat of melanoma isn't enough to scare teens away from tanning booths, they should know that 90% of visible skin changes commonly attributed to aging are caused by exposure to ultraviolet radiation. UV tanning accelerates the signs of aging, including wrinkles, leathery skin and fine lines, which can be seen as early as in one's 20's. Yet many teens will still desire a bronzed glow for prom. One safe alternative is so-called "sunless tanners," also known as "self-tanning lotions."

Sunless tanners deliver a perfectly safe tan that typically lasts for three to five days. Unlike tanning beds, they don't involve dangerous ultraviolet rays, they are made with completely harmless common ingredients. For a list of recommended products that will give you a sunless glow, check The Skin Cancer Foundation's Seal of Recommendation list at www.skincancer.org.

Don't be misled by products that sound like self-tanning lotions - "tanning amplifiers," "tan accelerators," "tanning promoters," "tanning enhancers," and worst of all, "tanning pills." Many of these products interact with the sun to create the tan, so they actually end up exacerbating the damage done to your skin.

Be sure to wear sunscreen. Even if a sunless tanner has an SPF rating, the sun-protective abilities won't last longer than two hours. So remember to apply an SPF 15+ sunscreen in addition to the self-tanner.

The Skin Cancer Foundation is the only global organization solely devoted to the prevention, detection and treatment of skin cancer. The mission of the Foundation is to decrease the incidence of skin cancer through public and professional education and research. For more information about melanoma and to learn more about how to protect your skin, visit www.skincancer.org, or call 1-800-SKIN-490.

Benefits Of Dental Implants

Dr. James Hogg, an Oak Lawn dentist, is demonstrating the benefits of dental implants to a patient. He states that implants can be used to replace one or more teeth leading to chewing comfort and great esthetic results. The implants can also be used to support full dentures, keeping them from slipping and causing painful sore spots. Typically the implant is placed by an oral surgeon in their office and often using only Novocain. The crown, bridge, or denture is then placed four months later by Dr. Hogg. For more information call Dr. Hogg at (708) 422-1900.

Seeks Patients Who Take Blood Thinners For Irregular Heartbeats

The University of Chicago Medical Center is seeking patients diagnosed with atrial fibrillation (irregular heartbeat) who are taking warfarin (i.e. Coumadin) as a blood thinner to participate in a research study.

The study could ultimately lead to patients with atrial fibrillation never having to take blood thinners again for this condition.

Atrial fibrillation is a heart condition where the upper chambers of the heart beat too fast, says John Lopez, M.D., one of the two study directors. The condition can cause blood to stagnate and form clots in the heart's left atrial appendage. If they escape, these clots can cause strokes.

The American Heart Assn. says 2.2 million Americans have atrial fibrillation and that about 15 percent of all strokes occur in people with atrial fibrillation.

The medical center is one of four in Illinois, along with 56 other hospitals around the world in a large randomized trial studying the effectiveness of a device implanted in the heart designed to keep blood clots that have formed in the heart's left atrial appendage from ever entering the bloodstream.

First, a tube is inserted through a vein in the upper leg, all the way to the heart. Once the tube is in the correct position, the pictures are taken to measure the heart's left atrial appendage. These measurements determine the size of device to be used. The device, called the WATCHMAN, is guided through the tube and positioned in place. Pictures are then taken again to verify correct placement. Once verification is made, the WATCHMAN is released to permanently remain in the heart.

People taking blood thinners to keep clots from forming typically require frequent monitoring and sometimes have diet and other drug interactions causing them to stop taking these drugs.

Those enrolled in the study will be randomized to either receive the WATCHMAN or continue on long-term medical therapy with warfarin (i.e. Coumadin) which if the participant needs assistance will be provided free of charge. Participants will make approximately four to six visits to the medical center during the first year and then twice a year thereafter for follow-up.

"As is the case in all randomized studies like this, patients may not necessarily benefit directly from the research," explains Bradley Knight, M.D., the study's other director. "However, information obtained during the course of this study may contribute to a better understanding of atrial fibrillation. And patients who receive the WATCHMAN may be able to stop taking blood thinners and may no longer need to have blood drawn for dose adjustments."

Patients interested in participating in the study at the University of Chicago Medical Center may call (773) 834-8399 for more information.

Help And Guidance For COPD

COPD (Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease), a serious lung disease in which the lungs are damaged, is an umbrella term used to describe any one or all of a group of progressive lung diseases, encompassing emphysema, chronic bronchitis, refractory asthma, and severe bronchiectasis. This progressive disease is characterized by partial airway obstruction which creates increased breathlessness and shortness of breath. It is the 4th leading cause of death, and projected to be the third leading cause by 2020.

The COPD Foundation has set up the COPD Information Phone line at 1-866-316-COPD(2673). The call center is staffed by volunteer COPD patients who are prepared to handle calls from people who may be showing symptoms, recently diagnosed patients, seasoned COPD patients, caregivers, and concerned members of the general public interested in more information about COPD.

The National Institute of Health (NIH) estimates that 12 million individuals have been diagnosed with COPD in the U.S. alone. An additional 12 million are symptomatic or developing COPD. The number worldwide is estimated to be as high as 600 million. It is one of the leading causes of disability and kills 120,000 in the U.S. each year. That is one death every 4 minutes. As Grace Anne Dorney Koppell, in her campaign to fight against chronic obstructive pulmonary disease recently said on Good Morning America, "There are 12 million of us diagnosed with the disease, and what terrifies me is that there are 12 million more people walking around out there trying to live their lives and they have COPD but they don't know it. So this is truly a public health epidemic...."

Help and information is just a phone call away at 1-866-316-COPD(2673).

Diabetes Management Presentation

Southwest Suburban Center on Aging, LaGrange, will sponsor a presentation on diabetes management by Shahla M. Hameed, MD., of Adventist Midwest Geriatrics Specialists, to be held Thursday, April 19 at 11 a.m. at the Center, 111 W. Harris Ave., LaGrange. Reservations to attend this free program may be made by calling (708) 354-1323.

Diabetes is a disease in which the body does not produce or properly use insulin which is needed to convert sugar, starches and other food into energy needed for daily life. The cause of diabetes is a mystery, although both genetics and environmental factors such as obesity and lack of exercise appear to play roles.

Dr. Hameed's lecture will focus on learning more about the disease and how to care for yourself if you have been diagnosed with it. This presentation is the second in an ongoing series entitled "Managing Your Chronic Illness" sponsored by SWSOA.

Celebrating 36 years of commitment, dedication and service to seniors, their families and its servicing communities, the Southwest Suburban Center on Aging is a non-profit organization providing quality information and referral, social services, health and wellness programs, education and training and other direct services to nearly 8,000 older adults and their families each year living in 22 communities within Lyons, Riverside and the south portion of Proviso Townships. Programs and services offered by the Southwest Suburban Center on Aging are made possible by community support and donations and, in part, by the Illinois Department on Aging (IDOA), AgeOptions, Community Memorial Foundation and local United Ways.

Prevent & Reduce Underage Drinking

"Alcohol remains the most heavily abused substance by America's youth," said Acting Surgeon General Kenneth Mortisugu as he issued a Call to Action. "This Call to Action is attempting to change the culture and attitudes toward underage drinking in America. We can no longer ignore what alcohol is doing to our children."

More than 5,000 youth under the age of 21 die each year from underage drinking, motor vehicle crashes, homicides, suicide, and unintentional injuries. Youth who start drinking before the age of 15 are 5 times more likely to have a problem with alcohol later in life.

Alcohol affects a child's developing brain differently than an adult. A child's brain goes through rapid change and development between the ages of 10 and 21. Drinking alcohol before age 21 can cause permanent brain damage, according to a report from the American Medical Assn. If you care about youth, these are compelling reasons to prevent and reduce underage drinking.

Underage drinkers consumed 13.6 percent of all alcohol sold in Illinois in 2005. The sales provided profits of $361 million to the alcohol industry and cost the citizens of Illinois $2.9 billion.

The more connected young people feel to their parents, school and church, the less likely they are to drink alcohol. Abstinence from alcohol is an acceptable lifelong decision.

April is Alcohol Awareness Month. For information to prevent underage drinking contact Illinois Churches In Action and ILCAAP at (877) 204-6863 or www.ilcaap.org.

OAK LAWN LIBRARY NOTE

The Oak Lawn Public Library, 5300 W. 95th St., will host a special grand reopening weekend for the Dee Kopf Local History Room on Saturday, April 21st from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, April 22nd from 1 to 3 p.m. Members of the community are invited to stop by and view an exhibit of photographs, newspaper articles and memorabilia from the 1967 Oak Lawn Tornado that will be on display through June. Light refreshments will be available.

In response to a growing community interest in the history of Oak Lawn, the library has reestablished a local history room to provide interested patrons, historians and students access to archived and reference materials with work areas and staff assistance provided.

As part of their revitalized local history efforts, the library requests the donation or use of materials important to the interpretation of Oak Lawn's history, including family papers, business records, as well as photographs and other memorabilia. Those who have items to donate or share should call Dr. Maureen Gilligan, local history coordinator at (708) 422-4990, or email mgilligan@oaklawnlibrary.org.

The library's original local history room was dedicated to longtime Oak Lawn librarian Dolores (Dee) Kopf upon her retirement in April 1976. The room was put to other uses in 1987.

The library will host two free public programs to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the 1967 Oak Lawn Tornado on April 21st and 22nd.

Tornado History Presentation - Saturday, April 21st at noon. The library's new Local History Coordinator, Dr. Maureen Gilligan, will narrate a slide show presentation featuring eyewitness accounts, storm survivor stories, newspaper coverage, film clips, photographs and records maintained in the library's local history archives.

Tornado Memories Open Mic - Sunday, April 22nd at 1:30 p.m. Members of the community are invited to share personal stories about how the 1967 Oak Lawn Tornado impacted their life at this open mic forum. Sign in at the door to speak. Five minute time limit. This event will be videotaped.

Visit the library's web site www.oaklawnlibrary.org for a complete listing of public programs honoring the tornado anniversary and the reestablishment of the library's Dee Kopf Local History Room.

The library invites students in third through fifth grade to participate in a monthly Holiday Club from 4 to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, April 24th. Registered members create crafts for an upcoming holiday that they may take home or put on display at the library. This program is open to Oak Lawn residents and students of Oak Lawn schools. Sign up at the Youth Services Desk.

* * *

The library will host a Teen Game Night, featuring Dance Dance Revolution (DDR), Wednesday, April 25th from 7 to 8 p.m. for students in sixth through tenth grade. Teens may bring their favorite board or card games to play with others. Prizes will be awarded for the top scores in DDR. Free snacks for all who participate in the games.

* * *

Members of the community are invited to stop by the Youth Services Department of the library to view an exhibit of artwork created by students from Lieb and Columbus Manor elementary schools in Oak Lawn. The art will be on display April 16 through May 15.

* * *

For additional information on any of these library programs, call (708) 422-4990 or visit the library's web site at www.oaklawnlibrary.org.

Field Trips For Safety Village

Kids Safe City, 8110 S. Ferdinand Ave. in Bridgeview, is now accepting registration for field trips beginning April through October.

Park districts, day care centers, preschools and scout troops can select from a variety of safety topics for a one-day, two-hour field trip to the village. Children will be taught safety lessons using a hands-on approach in an indoor/outdoor atmosphere.

Kids Safe City is a fenced in miniature village consisting of 13 buildings, paved streets, traffic lights and signs, a railroad crossing, caboose and a non-toxic smoke house! You can view the web site at www.kidssafecity.org.

Selection can be made from one of the following topics: Police, Fire and Smoke House, 911 and Stranger-Danger, Bicycle, Poison, Railroad, Pedestrian, Traffic and Road Signs Safety.

During each session, children will experience driving pedal cars throughout the village, safety videos, projects and stories. Participants will be presented with a certificate for the safety topic they have completed. Juice and snacks will be provided. Call Toni Wokosin at (708) 227-1129 to secure your date and topic.

Seeks Input from Teens

Students in grades six through 10 are invited to participate on the Oak Lawn Public Library Teen Advisory Board from 7 to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, April 18th. Teens can earn volunteer service hours while sharing ideas and suggestions to help the library better serve people in that age group. The group holds regular meetings on the third Wednesday of each month during the school year. No registration required. Light refreshments are provided.

The library is at 5300 W. 95th St. For more information, call (708) 422-4990.

55 Alive Review

The Worth Township Seniors will be sponsoring a 55 Alive review course on Wednesday and Thursday, April 18th and 19th at the Worth Township Center, 11601 S. Pulaski, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. The fee is $10, payable to AARP.

The class is open to seniors 50 years and older, and you will receive a certificate that may entitle you to a reduction in your auto insurance.

For more information and to register, call (708) 371-2900, ext. 28.

Folliard Elected To Illinois Coaches Association Hall Of Fame

After surpassing 400 career wins last year, Richards High School varsity softball coach Julie Folliard (pictured) recently won election to the Illinois Coaches Association Hall of Fame. Folliard, a Richards graduate now coaching the Bulldogs in her 20th season, continues to lead students with an unwavering devotion and an understanding of her role in their development.

Should anyone doubt the influence of a coach who sees her role extending beyond the playing field, one need only ask Folliard's former players.

"Julie Folliard isn't just the most amazing & talented softball coach I have ever had, she was a very important mentor in my life throughout high school and college," said Lindsey LaChiana, an accountant studying to pass her CPA exam.

During and after LaChiana's high school playing days, Folliard worked as a mentor and friend.

"Ms. Folliard was there for me through my switch in colleges and when my father was very sick until he passed away. I do not know what I would have done without Ms. Folliard helping me through my father's sickness and also keeping up with softball and my school work. Any girl that gets to play for Julie Folliard should feel extremely lucky because there are not many coaches out there that really know the game of softball as well as her and care about her girls on and off the field," LaChiana said.

Megan Witt, who teaches social studies at Richards, recalled the dual roles that Folliard played and, in doing so, gave perhaps the ultimate compliment to a former coach: She learned to compete and think not just for herself.

"The thing I remember the most about playing for Julie is not wanting to disappoint her. I remember feeling that. And it was not only on the field, but our off the field actions, too. You could get in trouble with your parents, but you would never want to get in trouble with her. I think she had that influence on a lot of players. She also coaches with a lot of passion. I think is such a testament that so many of her former players coach or have coached," said Witt, who teaches social studies at Richards.

Lisa Hughes Krueger today works as the sales manager for The Clubhouse, a restaurant in Oak Brook. Like athletics, excelling in sales requires a competitive spirit.

"I feel very fortunate to have been coached by Ms. Folliard. She is a master motivator and role model to the young women she coaches," Hughes Krueger said.

"Very dedicated to the players & parents, Folliard's intensity and passion for the game is contagious. She teaches you to handle success like you handle failure. Folliard constantly challenges the players to meet their potential as an athlete and as a student. I am able to fondly reflect on my days in high school, due in large part to the memories that were created playing softball for Richards," she said.

Carole Gorecki, who will graduate from Loyola University medical school in June & soon begin her residency, echoed many of the same thoughts as her fellow alumni.

"Julie Folliard has been one of the most influential people in my life, both on and off the field. She has been a mentor to me and has taught me so much about respect, teamwork and dedication," Gorecki said.

"As a coach, one of the first lessons Julie taught us was how to have respect for our coaches, teammates, and opponents. We learned how to give and take constructive criticism. She demanded that every member of the team abide by the same standards regardless of their talent level. In addition, she led by example by showing every one of us the same respect she expected us to show for her. We were expected to always support our teammates and only give positive reinforcement, and she was consistent in disciplining anyone who did not follow the rules. It was clear that Coach Folliard put 100% effort into everything she did, and she expected nothing less from us. She told us that 'It was a waste of time to do something, if you don't try your hardest & give it 110%,'" Gorecki added.

Like Witt, Hughes Krueger and LaChiana, Gorecki today still feels her coach's influence.

"Coach Folliard has taught me how important it is to enjoy life and get the most you can out of it. I remember when speaking with Julie while in college, she inquired as to whether I had chosen a profession yet and I told her I was concerned about all the time, money, and work required in pursuing a career as a physician.

"She told me to remember that 'if you do something you love for a living, you will never work a day in your life; and that anything worth having is worth working for.' I remember these words every time I have to make a decision concerning my career choice or when this career choice becomes overly stressful or frustrating, and it comforts me and gives me perspective," Gorecki said.

Adding the time when she played, Folliard now has worn the black and gold Bulldog uniform for nearly a quarter-century — long enough to become a leader who molds high school girls into young women who graduate with the confidence and attitude to find success.

The Chicago South Elks Lodge #1596 in conjunction with Little League Baseball Illinois District 8, will be sponsoring a Baseball Drive for the men and women stationed in Iraq.

Our troops in Iraq play baseball and softball on their off time. The Elks will be collecting new or gently used baseballs, softballs, gloves, bats and bases. They are also collecting cash donations to help defray the cost of postage. They will also accept any type of beef jerky, gum and hard candies or anything that does not melt for the troops. The Elks said, "We need your help! To sum it up, our troops need us as much as we need them!"

The Elks Lodge is located at 4428 Midlothian Turnpike in Crestwood. For more information, call them at (708) 597-7465.

Governor Blagojevich Administration officials broke ground in 2006 on a building that will house a pilot program to help provide housing and supportive services for 15 disabled, homeless Illinois veterans at the Illinois Veterans Home in Manteno. The pilot program will serve as a national model for how to overcome challenges in providing permanent housing for homeless and disabled veterans, including veterans suffering from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), and will help Illinois lead the nation in preparing for the likely increase in mental health problems among veterans returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Among the other bills the Governor signed into law is the Illinois Military Families Relief Fund Act, which established a trust fund allowing the families of Guard members and reservists to receive emergency financial grants and general financial support, helping make up the decline in household income that occurs when a wage earner is called up to service. Since August of 2003, the Fund has paid out over $5.2 million to nearly 10,000 families, and 25 other states have modeled similar programs after Illinois.

Four families of soldiers killed in the war on terror will be paid the $277,000 owed them. The money will be paid immediately from a fund for slain service members. Another 18 families will be given $50,000 to tide them over until more can be appropriated, it was announced at a news conference on Sunday, April 1st, which was attended by Lt. Governor Pat Quinn and Tammy Duckworth, Illinois Department of Veterans Affairs Director. Duckworth lost both of her legs in an attack on her helicopter in Iraq in 2004.

They have been waiting since 2005 for their payments, said Duckworth. The remaining families will be paid the initial $50,000 with money borrowed from the Veterans Care health insurance program, which will be repaid from future appropriations, she said.

According to Quinn and Duckworth, Governor Blagojevich will ask the legislature for $6.2 million in supplemental funding this month to pay the rest of the money to the 18 waiting families.

Illinois legislators passed a law in 2004 extending the "line of duty" benefits paid to the families of fallen firefighters and police officers to include the families of Illinois military personnel.

Retroactive to Sept. 11, 2001, about $27 million has been paid to 102 military families so far, said Duckworth. According to Quinn, Illinois is a leader in paying such benefits.

End Mortgage Rescue Scheme

Continuing her aggressive fight against mortgage fraud, Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently filed a lawsuit in Cook County Circuit Court against multiple businesses and individuals who operate a mortgage rescue scheme that targeted Illinois homeowners facing mortgage foreclosure.

The suit, filed against Eyes Have Not Seen, Inc. (EHNS), its president Charles T. White Jr., Debra Gray and Darius K. Monroc as agents of EHNS, Mutual Trust Funding, formerly known as Greater Investment Solutions, Inc., and Creative Financial Solutions, alleges that the defendants violated the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Practices Act and the Credit Services Organization Act, by misleading homeowners into participating in transactions that the defendants falsely promoted would save the homes from foreclosure.

The suit alleges that EHNS and White, operating at 800 S. Wells St. in Chicago, preyed on homeowners in financial distress and on the verge of foreclosure by convincing them to put their homes in someone else's name and obtain a new mortgage.

According to the complaint, EHNS and White approach homeowners who are struggling to pay their monthly mortgage payments and tell the homeowners that if they put their home in someone else's name for a certain period of time, the homeowners will not have to pay the monthly mortgage payments and can use that time period to restore their financial health and rebuild their credit record. EHNS and White encourage the homeowners to put the home in the name of either a relative who has a good credit history or a third party recommended by EHNS and White. This "investor" becomes the mortgagor on a new mortgage taken out on the home.

EHNS and White represent to both the homeowners and investors that EHNS will pay the monthly mortgage payments on the new mortgage for a period of time. Based on these representations from EHNS and White, homeowners agree to take out new mortgages on their homes that are far larger than the existing mortgage.

Madigan's lawsuit asks the court to enter a permanent injunction order, prohibiting the defendants from engaging in the mortgage brokering and mortgage foreclosure rescue businesses in Illinois. The suit also asks the court to order the defendants to make full restitution to homeowners and to pay civil penalties of $50,000 for each violation of the Illinois Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act and the Credit Services Organization Act, and civil penalties of $10,000 per violation committed against a person 65 or older.

Librarians To March And Rally In Springfield

Secretary of State and State Librarian Jesse White announced that his office will be hosting Illinois Library Day on Thursday, April 19th at which hundreds of Illinois librarians, staff, trustees, library users and supporters will gather in Springfield to meet with legislators and generate support for libraries.

The annual event is designed to remind legislators and citizens of the important role that public, school, academic and special libraries play in Illinois. The highlight of the day is a march from the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum to the State Capitol, where a large and enthusiastic rally is planned.

The public is welcome to march and rally with the library community. Supporters will gather at the Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum at the corner of Sixth and Jefferson Streets in downtown Springfield at 11:15 a.m. The march will begin at 11:30 and the rally will be held at noon at the Lincoln statue on the east side of the Capitol Building at Second and Capitol Streets. In the event of inclement weather, the rally will move to the first floor rotunda of the Capitol Building.

Other events scheduled to take place include a strategy session and dinner the night before the event and a breakfast for lawmakers on April 19th at the Illinois State Library. Box lunches will also be available at the State Library following the rally. Information about cost and registration for these events can be found at www.ilsa.org/events/reg_ild.htm. For the latest information about Library Day, log on to www.illinoislibraryday.info.

Common Ground Meeting

When and how religion became the most terrifying face of our age is one of the posers to be addressed at the Common Ground lecture at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, April 18th in the Flossmoor Village Hall, 2800 Flossmoor Road.

Following from the lecture title Religion, Violence and God, Jim Kenney, Common Ground Executive Director and leader of the evening's lecture/discussion, asks: "When in the modern period did violence and religion become so intertwined in the minds of so many thoughtful people, and why, in the enlightened 20th century, was God's name taken so often in vain?"

The April lecture is one of a series of presentations inspired by articles appearing in the publication Interreligious Insight. (See www.interreligiousinsight.org.)

Best Practices Awards

Attorney General Lisa Madigan has opened nominations for the 4th Annual Recreation Access Best Practices Awards, designed to recognize organizations, businesses, individuals and government agencies that have created recreational opportunities for Illinois residents with disabilities.

These awards are given as part of Recreation Access Illinois (RAI), Attorney General Madigan's ongoing, statewide effort to promote recreational opportunities for people with disabilities. The awards are intended to recognize outstanding efforts made by public and private organizations that provide recreation programs and events for Illinois' residents with disabilities.

Public and private organizations, individuals, businesses and government agencies may qualify for the Recreation Access Best Practices Awards. Applicants are asked to submit details of activities, programs, facility upgrades, events and other initiatives that illustrate unique and effective approaches to accessibility in recreation. Eight Best Practices Awards will be available.

A panel appointed by the Illinois Association of Park Districts (IAPD) will review all entries and make recommendations for awards. Madigan will chair the panel, which will include a representative of a park district, a special recreation association, a not-for-profit agency, a for-profit firm and two persons with disabilities.

"The Recreation Access Best Practices Awards program has two goals," Madigan said. "We want to recognize the work of those who promote good health and fitness in the disability community. And by doing so, we hope to encourage others to follow their lead and increase the availability of accessible recreation facilities and inclusive programs."

Recreation Access Best Practices Awards nominations must be received by April 5th. For qualifications and nomination forms call the Northwest Special Recreation Association at 1-847-392-2848 (Voice and TTY) or visit the Attorney General's website at www.illinoisattorneygeneral.gov/rights/disabilityrights.html.

Steer Your Car In The Right Direction

Most Americans will pay big bucks at the pump this summer, which is why is more important than ever to save on your car maintenance costs. Now is a perfect time to learn new ways to keep your car in better shape, longer and save. The American Society of Appraisers highlights the top 10 steps consumers can take to help enhance the value of their car.

"Cars are usually the second largest purchase for most people, right after their house," said Dave Kinney, accredited senior appraiser with the American Society of Appraisers (ASA). "It makes sense to take care of your automobile, not only for sustaining its worth, but for safety purposes as well."

The American Society of Appraisers and expert automobile appraiser Dave Kinney offer the following tips to consumers.

1. Keep it clean. Aside from car wash operators, no one likes dirty cars. By keeping your car clean, not only will you feel better about the car, but you will likely reap the rewards at trade in time or when you sell it. Have your car professionally detailed before you attempt to sell it.

2. Maintain your car according to the manufacturer's specifications. Find the specifications in the owner's guide (that book in your glove box you have ignored since the day you bought it). The quickie oil change shop might try to beat the "change your oil every three thousand miles" mantra into your head, but most manufacturers don't require oil changes until 7,500 miles or more. Don't spend money where it's not needed, and you can help the environment, as well.

3. Go synthetic. When you do get that oil change, consider one of the well-known synthetic oils on the market. They are more expensive, but they also have a longer service life. Synthetic oil is made from regular oil, but it is made so that all the molecules are the same size, increasing flow and decreasing wear. Your engine could last longer and operate at cooler temperatures.

4. Fix what breaks. Today's cars are much more complicated than cars from 10 years ago. A little problem can become a big problem if ignored. Turning up the radio to avoid hearing a noise is not a good plan — get it fixed.

5. Fix those paint chips. Little paint chips have a way of growing into big paint chips; fix them before they grow. Your local auto parts store will likely have a paint touch-up display offering a variety of popular (and some unpopular) colors that match your paint. If they don't, your dealer will.

6. Wax on, wax off. Find a high quality paste wax and spend the afternoon getting to know the nooks and crannies of your car. It's not bad exercise, and you get to work on your tan at the same time. Wax your car once a year at a minimum and repeat often.

7. Get an annual physical. It's good advice for both you and your car. Most states require an annual inspection for all vehicles. Any dealer would be happy to do a 25,000 mile or more point check-up. This is the time to look at tires, belts, hoses, brakes and every other system subject to wear.

8. Park and walk. Don't grab the first space closest to the door of the mall. Instead, park in a less used area and walk the short distance. What's the benefit? You get a little more exercise, and your car avoids the chance for a few dings and being a target for the "park-by-touch" crowd.

9. Don't be cheap. Use parts that are approved by the manufacturer or come from a source you trust. Aftermarket parts can be as good, or better, than original equipment, but unless you get them from a trusted source, be wary. Develop a relationship with the shop that repairs your car. Don't cut corners on safety.

10. Keep your records. You can toss the old candy wrappers in the backseat, but don't toss the paperwork that a potential buyer wants to see. Instead, keep a simple file of all of your bills, receipts, recall notices, e-mails and letters about your vehicle. Future buyers will thank you.

Local Leaders Line Up Against AT & T's Favored Bill

With members of the Illinois General Assembly preparing to spend two weeks away from Springfield, chances are increasing that they will encounter constituents and local leaders in their home districts who are concerned about AT&T's legislative attempt to circumvent current rules that ensure local input in cable franchising agreements.

The list of local leaders lining up against HB 1500, the legislation now being aggressively promoted by AT&T, grew dramatically in recent days when the members of the West Central Municipal Conference formally voiced their opposition to the bill. The Conference represents more than three dozen municipalities and other public entities in the Chicago-area.

"As the decision of the West Central Municipal Conference clearly shows, the more we are able to educate local leaders about the impact of this bill on their communities—the more they find fault with it," said Gary Mack, spokesman for the Cable Television and Communications Association of Illinois.

Local leaders around the state support the current local agreements which ensure that cable providers are held accountable for achieving minimum quality standards and for providing service equitably throughout a community.

"Local leaders are simply not willing to forgo their communities' role in ensuring quality and affordable cable service for their constituents, and they certainly are not in a position to sacrifice a key source of funds on which their constituents depend," Mack said.

Many municipal leaders are also growing concerned about the bold eminent domain powers that HB 1500 would grant to AT&T. Under the terms of the bill, the company could claim ownership over local areas in order to make drastic infrastructure changes it says are necessary—and the bill could even force individual owners to grant the company access to their privately-held properties.

"As lawmakers spend the next two weeks in their home districts, we encourage them to ask local elected officials in their communities—and more important, their constituents—whether they favor any bill that means fewer local funds, less local input, lower customer-service standards and a loss of control over both publicly- and privately-owned property," said Mack.

"We think that lawmakers would find that the people of Illinois are unwilling to make such sacrifices in the name of assisting one large and very profitable company," he said.

General Fund Deficit Lower

State Comptroller Daniel W. Hynes released the Illinois Comprehensive Annual Financial Report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2006. The report, which is based on generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP), shows that the state's General Fund deficit stood at $2.328 billion, a $736 million improvement from the previous year that ended with a deficit of $3.064 billion.

Hynes cautioned however that the improvement, while welcome, does not significantly alter the state's overall fiscal health which is negatively impacted by the state's accrued Medicaid liabilities, long-term pension obligations and cash flow difficulties. He said that the state's backlog of unpaid bills currently exceeds $2 billion while the Budget Stabilization Fund or "Rainy Day" fund of only $276 million is depleted every year.

Significantly, the state's General Fund accrued liabilities, defined as bills from the fiscal year allowed to be paid from a future year's appropriations, did improve in FY 2006. Most notable was that deferrals allowed under Section 25 of the State Finance Act and associated primarily with Medicaid expenditures decreased from $2.949 billion to $2.385 billion.

Hynes, a long time critic of the use of Section 25 payments, said such expenditures allow the budget to appear artificially balanced while the state indefinitely delays hundreds of millions of dollars in payments to health care providers. Consequently, the financial stability of these providers, and of the entire Illinois health care infrastructure, is thus severely weakened.

Recognizing that the nature of Medicaid bills must allow for a longer adjudication period than most other types of state obligations, Hynes' proposal, as embodied in HB 3397 sponsored by Rep. William "Will" Davis of Homewood and Rep. David Miller of Calumet City, would extend the end of the fiscal year for Medicaid expenditures, or what is commonly known as the lapse period, until October 31st of each year. Currently the lapse period for all other state expenditures incurred on or before June 30th ends on Aug. 31st, while Medicaid costs incurred on or before June 30th can be paid without any calendar restriction. While the lapse period for all other bills would remain the same as current law, the establishment of a later but final date for Medicaid bills would not only impose greater discipline on state finances but would ultimately provide for timelier payments to the state's health care providers.

"This is not just about honest budgeting and more accurate financial statements that impact the state's bond rating and credit worthiness," Hynes said. "It also is about keeping faith with and sustaining thousands of health care providers on whom we have imposed this huge burden of deferred costs and what amounts to deficit financing for state government."

The report also noted that the Net Assets of Governmental Activities (defined as the amount the State has left to fund the traditional services of government after assets are used to pay liabilities) stated a deficit of $18.329 billion as of June 30, 2006, a $769.1 million increase from the June 30, 2005 deficit of $17.560 billion. A primary component of this deficit consists of Net Pension Obligations which grew from $12.036 billion at the end of FY 2005 to $14.499 billion as of June 30, 2006, an increase of $2.463 billion and coinciding with the state's partial suspension (also in effect this year) of mandated pension contributions in FY 2006. Pension obligations have grown by $4.161 billion during the past two years.

Make Your Mark Against MS

Tax season is here and once again Illinoisans have the opportunity to make a difference in the fight against MS by participating in the Illinois Income Tax Check Off program. Money donated via the Income Tax Check Off goes to support 19 charitable funds in Illinois, including the Multiple Sclerosis Direct Assistance Fund.

It costs an estimated $50,000 each year to pay for the costly medications, medical equipment, therapy and other expenses associated with treating MS, a chronic, often disabling disease of the central nervous system. That cost can prove devastating even for the most financially able families.

Recent research conducted by Harvard University found that more than 20% of people living with MS reported spending less on food, utilities and other basic necessities in order to meet health care costs. Even more disturbing, 22% reported skipping doses or not taking their MS medications as prescribed. And at the National MS Society, Greater Illinois Chapter, we hear almost daily from people who are unable to pay for the accessibility modifications, counseling services, in-home care and other services that, for many, become necessary because of the disease. Nobody should be put in the unfair position of having to choose between taking care of their health and taking care of the basic needs of their families.

Since it was first included in the Check Off program five years ago, the MS Direct Assistance Fund has been a lifeline for people who needed assistance paying the burdensome costs of the non-medical needs that accompany living with MS. The fund provides money for items such as scooters, wheelchairs, home or auto modifications, counseling, physical therapy, respite care, emergency financial assistance and more that help people living with MS remain active and independent. The money also helps people with MS get transportation to medical appointments and support groups.

MS stops people from moving forward with their lives - physically, cognitively and, all too often, financially. The National MS Society exists to make sure this doesn't happen. Until a cure for MS is found, there will continue to be a demand for the vital programs and services offered by the Direct Assistance Fund. On behalf of the 20,000 people in Illinois who are living with this terrible disease, we ask you to donate to the Multiple Sclerosis Direct Assistance Fund when you file your 2006 taxes. Make your mark against MS at Section 10, Line F, and help create a world free of MS.

This Garden Season, Look To Containers

Although the practice has been around for thousands of years, a swiftly growing trend in gardening is container gardening. "You can arrange the containers for a party on your patio and then move them to other places in your yard," explains Felder Rushing, one of many gardening experts on Learn2Grow (www.Learn2Grow.com), an exciting new gardening Web site. Rushing narrates a course on the site on container gardening. "You can also change the plants around in the containers," Rushing continues. Here are some tips for successful container gardening:

Compatibility is important. Select the plants to go into each container carefully. Plants need similar shade and watering requirements. "Putting plants together in a container is like seating guests together at a dinner party," says Rushing.

Monitor watering. Plants in containers require more water than those grown in the ground. Also, the type of containers you choose will impact the watering requirements. Clay pots are porous and dry out faster than plastic pots. The smaller the container, the more often you will need to water it.

Consider weight. That one-pound pot may weigh more than 12 pounds once you get soil and plant material in it. If you want to be able to move your containers around, make sure they're not too heavy.

Consider conditions. In cold climates, containers will be the first to freeze and in warm climates, they'll hold in heat. Move plants out of hot baking sun in warmer areas and protect them by placing them in a garage or shed in freezing temperatures.

Consider types. Decide in advance what you'd like to grow in your containers. You can choose between herbs and vegetables; colorful flowers; tropical foliage; or perennials.

For more information on how to make beautiful container gardens, visit www.learn2grow.com. A free course on container gardens is available online through March 31st. Learn2Grow's unique online courses cover a broad range of specialty topics as well as garden basics. They are the product of content written by Learn2Grow experts and reviewed by Michigan State University (MSU) experts.

In addition, Learn2Grow contains hundreds of free garden guides, problem solvers, inspirations, articles and projects - about all aspects of gardening. The site's special feature allows people to receive personalized gardening information based on their interests and region. The personalized My Learn2Grow page gives members an interactive garden journal where they can post pictures of their garden, bookmark articles tailored to their region, and record plant information. Forums on multiple topics round out the social aspect of the site.

Log on to www.Learn2Grow.com to learn more about container gardens and see all of the courses, read original content, create your own personal My Learn2Grow page and Garden Journal, find out what people are talking about in the forums, and much more.

Looking good on the outside begins by being strong on the inside. That's because later in life, especially for women, strong bones help prevent fractures and height loss. Your window to build maximum bone density is now, during your late teens and early twenties. So eat wisely, get plenty of calcium and vitamin D, and do weight-bearing exercises every day. Teens And Credit: What Not To Do

Ah, freedom! The world opens up to us at 18-years-old. We can leave the nest, vote and stay out as late as we want. Yet, our parents' words still reign true: with privilege comes responsibility.

At 18, American teens can assume control of their legal and financial futures. Yet they need to understand that slip-ups now can affect their futures for years to come.

"Once kids turn 18, they have their first shot at establishing a positive credit history," said Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, a national non-profit credit counseling agency. "If they end up abusing or misusing the system, their actions can prevent them from qualifying for additional lines of credit down the road."

According to the most recent statistics from Nellie Mae, in 2004 college students reported freshman year as the most prevalent time for obtaining credit cards, with 56 percent having obtained their first card at age 18.

"Our homes, cars and other valuables are all rooted in our credit history. The younger you start, the sooner you'll be able to achieve financial independence," said Sullivan. "Without a consistent, positive track record, teens and 20-somethings won't be able to rent an apartment, buy a car or apply for a loan without their parents' signature."

So, what does it take to build a positive credit history? Sullivan describes what not to do:

Don't go on a spending spree - Just because you have the credit, doesn't mean you should spend it all. Your first credit card should have a low limit, such as $100 or $500. This will help prevent large impulse buys. If you know you're an impulse shopper, you can further restrict temptation by applying for a store or gas card, as opposed to a general bank credit card that can be used at almost any location.

Don't test your credit limits - Make a small purchase to kick off your credit history and then make consistent payments. You don't want to be caught in an emergency situation with a maxed out credit card. If you withdraw over your credit limit, you will be faced with exorbitant fees. Plus, the overdraft shows up on your credit report, and that could prevent you from receiving other forms of credit at reasonable interest rates in the future.

Don't share your credit information - No one should have access to your credit information, including close friends. Don't leave your monthly bill in plain sight, nor ask anyone to hold onto your credit card. This could leave you susceptible to fraud and identity theft.

Don't ignore the fine print - You need to know exactly what you are getting into before you sign the contract. Financial jargon can be confusing, so ask questions if you don't understand the terminology. You will be held accountable for all information listed in the fine print, whether you understand it or not. Be cognizant of over limit and missing payment fees. How much could these fees potentially cost you? What happens if you miss a payment? Do you have an introductory fixed rate? If so, for how long? Once you have established a line of credit, be sure to examine each monthly bill and take notice of the minimum payment amount, the total balance and the interest rate. Has anything changed? Is there an unauthorized purchase? Call the credit card company immediately if you notice inconsistencies.

Don't be afraid to ask for help - It's normal to encounter bumps along the road to establishing credit. Have an open dialogue with your parents and ask them to go over your credit card bill if you are confused. You can also seek the advice of a credit counselor. Visit www.bbb.org to locate a reputable agency.

Spring Clean Your Finances

Spring is in the air, and for many, it signifies a time for deep cleaning. In addition to washing your windows and cleaning out your garage, consider the shape of your family's finances. Spring is a great opportunity, between the rush of holiday planning and summer vacations, to take an honest look at your finances.

The experts at Consumer Credit Counseling Services of Greater Chicago, a division of Money Management International, offer the following suggestions to help you breathe new life into your family's financial future. Tunc up your budget. 'Budget' is not a dirty word. When you think of budgeting, picture yourself paying cash for a well-deserved vacation, helping your kids through college and living a comfortable retirement. Achieving these and other goals is possible; it's not about how much you earn but what you do with what you earn.

Clear out the clutter. Take time to sort out the chaos. Clearing out the clutter will make organizing your personal and financial records a whole lot easier. For example, grocery receipts and other nondeductible expense receipts and statements can be destroyed after they have been recorded for budgeting purposes. Don't forget to delete unneeded financial files in your computer's hard drive.

Perform a credit check-up. A clean credit report can be a valuable asset. By visiting www.annualcreditreport.com, you can access one free credit report each year from each of the three major credit bureaus. Check your reports carefully for accuracy and report any mistakes. As an added bonus, reviewing your reports is a great way to get a snapshot of your financial obligations.

Wipe out debt. Debt can create a dreary financial picture. Reducing your debt allows you the freedom to make smart future financial choices. Start by focusing on your debt with the highest interest rate (never forgetting to make required payments to all debts.) Once that account is paid off, apply that amount to the debt with the next highest interest rate. If this task seems impossible, you might also consider paying off your smallest balance first. Seeing quick progress is often a good motivator.

Polish up your paperwork. Dust off those dated legal documents. It pays to regularly review your will, living trust and durable power of attorney. You should also review your insurance policies to assure that you have appropriate coverage.

"Finally, don't forget to revisit your financial plan several times throughout the year to make sure you are on track," said Cate Williams, vice president of financial literacy for CCCS of Greater Chicago. "Common sense and flexibility are important keys to financial success."

Devil In The White City Tour

The Chicago Architecture Foundation's Devil in the White City Tour is being introduced on select Fridays and Sundays April through October. Departing from the Chicago Architecture Foundation, 224 S. Michigan Ave. at 10:30 a.m., the tour is based upon Eric Larson's best-selling book. It focuses on two remarkable events: the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893 and the emergence of America's first serial killer to come to public attention.

"The fair had a profound effect on the people's lives at the time and in turn, people's changing lifestyles during that period, shaped the built environment," said Lynn Osmond, Chicago Architecture Foundation President and CEO. "CAF has offered this tour intermittently to our members. It has been so popular; we have begun offering it to a broader audience."

The tour includes a visit to the Fair through a slide presentation featuring many period photographs. The presentation is followed by a bus tour of Prairie Avenue and Jackson Park with a visit to many buildings and places identified in the book. People who have already read the book will learn more about the circumstances surrounding the Fair. Those who haven't read 'The Devil in the White City' will find this tour to be an introduction to those fascinating events.

The entire presentation and tour lasts about 3-1/2 hours and costs $55; $45 seniors and students; CAF members are $40. Reservations are required. Specific dates are Fridays: April 20, May 18, June 15, July 13, August 17, September 14, October 19 and Sundays: April 29, May 27, June 24, July 22, August 26, September 30, October 28.

The Chicago Architecture Foundation (CAF) is a non-profit organization dedicated to advancing public interest and education in architecture and related design. The Foundation pursues this mission through a comprehensive program of exhibits, tours, special events, and lectures. CAF's ArchCenter is located in the Santa Fe Building at 224 S. Michigan Ave. at Jackson Boulevard, Chicago. For further information visit www.architecture.org or call (312) 922.3432.

Credit Score Confusion

If you're one of the millions of Americans who don't know their credit scores, you could be missing out on an opportunity to save money on your mortgage, cars, jewelry, electronics, vacations and anything else you may charge.

Your credit score is an estimate of your credit risk, which is based on your credit report. Lenders use this number to determine how likely you will be to repay a loan or line of credit in a timely manner. The higher the score, the more likely you'll receive a lower interest rate, and ultimately save money.

Only 27 percent of consumers understand that credit scores measure credit risk — not credit knowledge, amount of credit or attitude toward credit, according to the Consumer Federation of America.

"There are many misconceptions circulating about the function and purpose of credit scores," said Mike Sullivan, director of education for Take Charge America, a national non-profit credit counseling agency. "Yet, this three-digit number can impact you financially nearly every day of your life."

American consumers have an average of 13 credit obligations on record at a credit bureau, according to Fair Isaac Corporation, which pioneered the most common credit score, called the FICO score. These obligations include commonly-used credit cards, store cards, gas cards and installment loans, each of which has an impact on your credit score.

To help sort out the confusion, Sullivan answers six common questions about credit scores:

Do I have only one credit score? No, lenders are not required to report to each of the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian and Trans Union. Each agency may have different information on your report, and therefore, a different score.

If I continually check my credit report, will that lower my credit score? You can check your report directly from the three credit bureaus as many times as you want, and it will not affect your credit score. To obtain a free credit report, visit: www.annualcreditreport.com.

If I cancel a credit card, can that lower my credit score? Yes, canceling credit cards can actually decrease your score. For instance, if you have $50,000 in available credit and owe $10,000, then you owe 20 percent of your available credit. If you close an account with a $30,000 credit limit, you will then owe the same $10,000 but it will be 50 percent of your available credit. That lowers your credit score. It also affects the history part of your score, lowering it even further.

Does my salary affect my credit score? Your credit score is based on the amount of credit and debt you have, not how much money you make. If you receive a raise, and your credit and debt remain the same, your credit score will not improve. If you receive a raise and use that extra money to pay down your debt, then your credit score will improve.

Does shopping for a loan lower my credit score? While multiple inquiries do show up on your credit report, they do not necessarily damage your score. If the same types of inquiries are made within 14 days of each other, they only count as one inquiry on your credit report. Keep in mind that this applies to loans, not credit cards.

If I only use cash to make purchases, will I improve my credit score? Your credit score is determined by the amount of credit you use, not the amount of cash you use. A steady, responsible use of credit is the best way to build your credit score. You need to find a middle ground, as an absence of credit as well as an overuse of credit can work against you.

Expand Family-Based Substance Abuse Treatment For Meth Addiction

U.S. Sens. Dick Durbin (D-IL), a member of the Senate Anti-Meth Caucus, and Norm Coleman (R-MN) recently introduced legislation, known as the Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007, to improve comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for methamphetamine addiction.

Durbin and Coleman noted that studies consistently show that family-based treatment increases long-term sobriety, educational enrollment, and gainful employment, along with decreased criminal activity and child development delays. Family-based treatment centers combine substance abuse recovery with mental health counseling, medical treatment, parenting, education and legal services. These programs provide essential needs of the entire family, rather than just the parent, and have proven to be extremely effective.

Statistically, Illinois and Minnesota mirror the rest of the country with at least 70% of the child welfare cases involving a substance-abusing parent. The meth epidemic now poses greater costs to states and the federal government as a result of increased child welfare and criminal justice caseloads.

"I am proud to say that Illinois has two very successful family-based treatment centers statewide," said Durbin. "The Women's Treatment Center and the Haymarket Center in Chicago have helped hundreds of participants reach their long-term sobriety goals, improve family relationships, enroll in school, and find jobs. This legislation will give these family-based centers the tools and resources they need to continue helping those that come through the door and give them a chance to open new doors for communities that still need help."

"I know firsthand from talking to victims and communities across Minnesota that methamphetamine abuse brings devastating consequences not only to individual abusers, but also to families, friends and the community," said Coleman. "Sadly, meth has a tendency to tear families apart. Our legislation will not only help parents and pregnant women break their addictions, but also provide services to help them recover their relationships with their children."

The Family-Based Meth Treatment Act of 2007:

Allows additional funding for the Center for Substance Abuse Treatment (CSAT) to award grants to programs that provide comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment for parents and pregnant women;

Requires the Director to give priority to programs serving areas affected by high rates of meth addiction with special attention to rural areas;

Provides funding to organizations that specialize in comprehensive, family-based substance abuse treatment services for non-violent offenders as an alternative to incarceration.

Sen. Durbin recently received the Guardian Award from the Partnership for a Drug-Free America to recognize his work in combating substance abuse. He has successfully secured funds for local meth awareness campaigns in Illinois. In 2005, Durbin and Coleman co-sponsored the Combat Meth Act, which was included as part of the Patriot Act and signed into law. The bill includes funds set-aside for prosecutors and law enforcement agents for rural communities.

Declining Home Values Jeopardize Reverse Mortgage

A deeper and more widespread decline in home values is jeopardizing many retirees' ability to tap a reverse mortgage for relief from their financial hardships.

According to a recent report from the National Association of Realtors (NAR), the fourth quarter of 2006 had the biggest year-over-year decline in home prices on record. Prices dropped 2.7 percent in the fourth quarter which followed a 1.0 percent decline in the third quarter.

Not only do declining home prices impact sellers and buyers, they also impact how much senior homeowners may receive when they apply for a reverse mortgage.

A reverse mortgage enables homeowners 62 and older to convert their home equity into cash. What makes this type of mortgage so popular is that there are no payments for as long as the borrowers live in their home. The reverse mortgage is typically repaid from the proceeds from the sale of the home, when the senior homeowner no longer lives there.

The amount a borrower may receive from a reverse mortgage is determined by their age, the interest rate, and the home value. A slump in a home's value can reduce the amount a retiree may receive from the reverse mortgage.

Median home prices are down 3.4 percent, as reported by NAR. During the past six months, there have been declines in three-quarters of the markets. A number of markets reported double-digit declines.

The market with the biggest drop in home values was Palm Bay-Melbourne-Titusville, FL. The median prices plunged 19.5 percent.

A senior homeowner 74 years old with a $200,000 home may receive a lump sum of $123,421 from the federally-insured reverse mortgage. If the home value was to decline by 3.4 percent, the amount would be reduced by $4,484.

However, if the home value was to drop 19.5 percent, the lump sum from the reverse mortgage would be $99,773, or $25,717 less: a significant amount by anyone's standards.

Senior homeowners with an existing mortgage on their home must pay it off to qualify for the reverse mortgage. This is usually done from the proceeds of the reverse mortgage. Paying off an existing mortgage and eliminating the monthly mortgage payment can make a huge difference in the lives of retirees struggling to live on a fixed or limited income.

"A drop in the amount a senior customer may receive from the reverse mortgage could risk their ability to qualify if there are not sufficient funds to pay off an existing mortgage in full," Mary Pat Legler, Reverse Mortgage Specialist, South Central Bank, said. "A decline in a home's value or rise in interest rates can reduce the amount that a customer may receive from the reverse mortgage."

The good news is that NAR believes the worst is over for the slump in home prices.

To learn more about reverse mortgages, South Central Bank is providing a free reverse mortgage informational package and confidential estimate by calling them toll-free at (877) 370-7533.

Prepare For Spring And Summer Severe Weather

With the one-year anniversary of a major tornado in Central Illinois just days away, Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich recently encouraged people to prepare now for severe spring weather. The governor proclaimed March 4th to 10th as Severe Weather Preparedness Week in Illinois, and urged Illinois residents to learn more about the weather hazards that can threaten during the spring and summer months.

The governor said the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and the National Weather Service (NWS) are joining together to raise awareness of tornadoes and severe storms during this year's Severe Weather Preparedness Week. As part of the week, schools and businesses were encouraged to practice their severe storm emergency plans during a statewide tornado drill that was held on Tuesday, March 6th at 10 a.m.

Illinois experienced a record number of tornadoes in 2006, with 124 tornadoes reported touching down throughout the state. The new record surpassed the previous record of 120 tornadoes set in 2003. Tornadoes last year resulted in one death and 49 injuries. On average, Illinois sees around 41 tornadoes each year.

Weather watches and warnings from the NWS are a critical tool in alerting people to approaching severe weather in their areas. The NWS is working to refine its warnings so they provide people with more specific detail about storms in their counties.

Nearly 30 percent of all tornadoes in Illinois occur after dark. For that reason, it's especially important that homes and businesses closely monitor threatening conditions at night, particular when people are asleep.

Besides tornadoes, spring and early summer in Illinois also bring severe thunderstorms and flooding. Severe thunderstorms can produce tornadoes, damaging winds, lightning, hail and heavy rain, all of which can cause death, injuries and property damage. Since 1990, lightning has killed 26 people. In 2001, Illinois ranked second in the nation for lightning fatalities.

While many people don't consider floods as dangerous as tornadoes, flooding is the number one severe weather killer nationwide. The most dangerous type of flooding is a flash flood, which can sweep away everyone and everything in its path. Fourteen people in Illinois have died from flash floods since 1995, most of which occurred in vehicles.

IEMA and NWS have also developed a Severe Weather Preparedness Guide, which contains information and tips on how to keep you and your family safe when a storm approaches and what actions to take following a severe storm, tornado or flood. The guide is available on the IEMA Web site at www.state.il.us/iema or by calling (217) 785-9888.

Peter Pan Preschool Raises $2,442 For MDA!

During the week of March 19th to 23rd, the students of Peter Pan Preschool raised $2,442 for the Muscular Dystrophy Assn. through the MDA Hop-a-Thon program. Thirty-eight students had a great time while hopping for youngsters who are unable to hop because of muscular dystrophy. The week also consisted of a unit in disability awareness designed around three key principles... Awareness, Acceptance and Assistance. MDA provided lesson plans, books, videos, and suggestions of activities to teach the children that "everybody's different, nobody's perfect."

The Muscular Dystrophy Association's district office in Palos Heights serves over 450 clients in South Suburban Cook County. These families are affected by any of 43 neuromuscular diseases and utilize clinic and support group services as well as depend on MDA for assistance with the purchase and maintenance of durable medical equipment. MDA also provides a summer camp for young people and supports a worldwide research effort seeking treatments and cures.

Peter Pan Preschool has been hopping for MDA for 4 years and has raised close to $10,000 in the fight against neuromuscular disease.

For more information on MDA's Hop-a-Thon program or local patient services, contact the Palos Heights office at (708) 671-9632.

Oak Lawn Camera Club

Everyone is welcome to come to the Oak Lawn Camera Club meeting. Meetings are held the first and second Fridays of each month, October through May, at 7:30 p.m. at the Oak View Center, 4625 W. 110th St.

This month April 13th is competition night. The subject for the month is 'Farms.' The following Friday is a member print contest.

Learn more about photography, improve your skills, socialize with other photographers or just come out to see some beautiful pictures and have some fun!

Babysitters Education

The Oak Lawn Fire Dept. will once again conduct a free 6-week Babysitters Education class on Tuesdays from 6 to 8 p.m. beginning Tuesday, April 17th.

Classes will be held at Salem United Church, 9717 S. Kostmcr, and include topics such as infant and adult CPR, the care and feeding of infants and children, as well as how to entertain the children and handle emergency situations while babysitting.

Participants should be 12 years of age and must register for this class. Registrations will be taken until 5 p.m. on Monday, April 16th. Call 499-7700 to register for the Babysitting Education Class.

Discuss Education Funding Reform

Education funding reform - do we need it? Join us for a discussion on this issue at the Beverly Unitarian Church, 10244 S. Longwood Drive, on Sunday, April 15th at 12 noon. Illinois ranks 50th in the nation on school funding. Over-reliance on local property tax results in gaps in resources. The national average for state support for schools is 51%; Illinois provides 30%. Schools are cutting programs and increasing class sizes to cope. Should a child's educational opportunities depend on their ZIP codes? Open to the general public and facilitated by the League of Women Voters of Illinois. For more information, call 233-7080 or (708) 489-2719.

"Thank You" from the Wm. Grant Family

To Commissioner Ray Orozco of the Chicago Fire Department, especially Truck 51, Engine 84, Ambulance 36 and the entire Chicago Fire Department, as well as the International Association of Firefighters and all their members who stood as honor guard; To Local 2, the 100 Club, the 511 Club, and Gold Badge Society for their gifts as well as their compassionate presence; To the entire Chicago Police Department, especially Dist. 22 officers and the Bagpipes and Drums of the Emerald Society, as well as firefighters, police and dedicated civil servants everywhere; To the medical and pastoral staff at Little Company of Mary Hospital, Father Pat Pollard, Pastor at Christ the King Church and his staff, Blake Lamb Funeral Home, as well as Catholic Cemeteries; To our friends and neighbors, Kathy Reaney of Atlas Designs for the beautifully prepared Mass program; Nick and Lori Di Novi of 115 Bourbon Street for being such cordial and generous hosts at Bill's funeral reception; To members of the press and reporters for their sensitive support; To the principals and teachers, especially Kristin's and Caroline's schoolmates, and students at all the schools who stood outside for the funeral procession; Finally, to the Oak Lawn, Evergreen Park, Alsip and Worth Firemen and Police for their ladder salutes and traffic control, as well as all the people of Chicago, the Suburbs, and across the Nation,

THANK YOU

The tragic death of Firefighter William Grant brought many people together to grieve with and assist our family in so many ways, this has been so very important to us. The outpouring of support, food, donations, assistance, sympathy and heartfelt prayers during this very difficult time has been overwhelming and is greatly appreciated.

Although we would like to acknowledge every kind word and act, there is no way to thank everyone individually, especially the anonymous and those with no return address...

TO ALL OF YOU, THANK YOU!

AND

MAY GOD BLESS BILL!

Student Selected As A Junior Statesmen

Oak Lawn Community High School student Paul Depre, Jr., of Oak Lawn was selected to attend the 68th Annual Junior Statesmen Summer School Program at Princeton University. The program offers a challenging, dynamic academic experience for students who have a passion for politics and government. Depre will be among 1200 high schools students who will gather on five campuses to immerse themselves in what they love, politics and debate. For over 66 years, the Junior Statesmen Summer School Program has prepared outstanding high school students for leadership.

Depre will attend the program at Princeton University from June 24 to July 19. While on campus, he will take college-level courses in American Government and Speech. Depre will also participate in nightly student debates of controversial public policy issues in a Congressional Workshop. Highlighting the month-long session will be frequent meetings with high-level groups of leaders from government, business, and the media. This nonpartisan speakers program gives future leaders a chance to share ideas with today's political powerbrokers.

Depre is a sophomore at Oak Lawn Community High School, where he is a member of the Tennis Team, Mathletes, Skills-USA, Chess Team, Scholastic Bowl, and Students Against Destructive Decisions. He hopes to study history, law, and politics in college.

Anyone wishing to assist Depre with the $4,150 program fee, can send checks payable to: Admissions Director, The Junior Statesmen Summer School, 1725 K Street NW, Suite 1214 Washington, DC 20006. Checks are to be made payable to the Junior Statesmen Foundation and include a note that Paul Depre Jr. is the intended beneficiary.

Warning Regarding Telephone Scam

Cook County Sheriff Thomas J. Dart is warning citizens throughout the Chicago area to beware of Cook County Jail inmates who may be using jail pay phones to scam unwitting victims.

The Sheriff's Office issued the warning after receiving several complaints from citizens who have reported receiving collect calls from jail inmates who attempt to "hi-jack" the telephone numbers of their victims by posing as police officers stationed at the jail.

"Anyone receiving a collect call from Cook County Jail is cautioned not to accept the call unless they are sure someone they know is trying to contact them," Dart stated. "If a citizen does accept a call and the inmate attempts to get personal information or urges you to call another phone number, you should hang up immediately and report the incident to the authorities."

The Sheriff's Office is currently investigating a scam in which inmates try to get unwitting victims to forward their phone numbers to a third party, which allows the inmate to charge subsequent collect calls to the victim's account.

According to investigators, the inmates conducting the scam call random numbers collect and pose as police officers stationed at the jail. They then tell the individual who answers the telephone that a member of their family has been in an accident and in order to get more information the victim must dial a series of numbers for more details. If the victim calls the number as instructed, they will transfer their telephone number to a call-forwarding service, which enables the inmate to charge the victim's phone account with future collect calls.

Election Night Results

Nearly all inmates at Cook County Jail are held on a pretrial basis and have not yet been convicted of a crime. Because of their pretrial status, the inmates are legally permitted to make collect telephone calls.

Anyone receiving harassing telephone calls from Cook County Jail can contact SBC at 1(800) 984-8800 and request a block on their telephone number that will prevent calls from the pay phones located inside Cook County Jail.

Results for the April 17th election will be available to the public in several ways. The Office of the Cook County Clerk will display suburban election returns in the fifth-floor lobby area for the 2,370 precincts, which have elections. The Clerk's office is located at 69 W. Washington St. in Chicago, on the fifth floor.

The Clerk's office will post results of each race on its elections web site, www.voterinfo.net. Unofficial precinct results will be available for each race starting a few days after the election.

State law allows for provisional and absentee ballots postmarked before Election Day to be counted up to 14 days after Election Day. As a result, it will be difficult to call close races before all votes are counted. The Clerk's office has until May 1st to count provisional and late-arriving absentee ballots and adjust vote totals.

The clerk's office will release the official results after the canvass is completed by May 8th.

Fashion Show

American Business Women's Association, Libra Charter Chapter, presents "Passport to Fashions" dinner and fashion show on Thursday, May 3rd at Gaelic Park, 6119 W. 147th St. There will be a cash bar beginning at 6 p.m. and dinner will be served at 7 p.m. followed by the fashion show. Raffles will also be held.

Fashions will be shown from Stein Mart of Orland Park featuring day, casual and travel wear.

The donation is $30. All profits will benefit the Education Scholarship Fund.

To ensure your seat and table assignments call Cathy Jackson at (312) 364-8310 days or (708) 687-0962 evenings. To purchase dinner tickets, call Mary Lou Deegan at (708) 687-3055 days or (708) 532-1627 evenings.

Terrifying Tornado Of 1967

This picture appeared in the April 27th, 1967 issue of the Oak Lawn Independent with the following caption: Their home demolished, its furnishings scattered over the area; members of an Oak Lawn family search for valuables, while the son does a man's job, bravely carrying to a waiting car papers and trinkets retrieved from the wrecked dwelling. "It's all that was left," said the father. (More pictures on page 10.)

Cable Deregulation Challenged

Growing attention on a proposed statewide cable franchise bill could slow a legislative blitz by supporters of telecommunications giant AT&T.

State Representative James Brosnahan (D-Oak Lawn) was expecting the House Telecommunications Committee he chairs to vote Wednesday to approve HB 1500, the franchise bill he has sponsored, but the vote could be delayed. The bill would strip local municipalities of cable franchising power and create state franchises authorized by the Illinois Commerce Commission, going far toward deregulating the industry in Illinois.

AT&T has poured money into a full-court press by lobbyists in support of the measure, along with an extensive TV ad campaign suggesting that HB 1500 promises competition and lower cable rates.

But last week Ald. Edward Burke introduced a City Council resolution calling on the legislature to reject the bill. He plans to hold hearings on the issue with Attorney General Lisa Madigan and others, said spokesperson Donal Quinlan. A press conference called by Burke Tuesday morning (10 a.m. at City Hall, room 302) will raise the profile of opposition to the measure by the city and by municipalities across the state.

As the committee meets, community activists backing Chicago's CAN-TV and public access channels across the state will arrive in Springfield for a citizen lobby day by the Keep Us Connected Coalition. (Community Media Workshop is a coalition member.) The coalition says HB 1500 would undercut existing guarantees on funding, channel accessibility and quality for public access cable, would provide for no new public channels in new service areas, and would establish stringent "no-repeat" requirements - not applying to commercial channels - allowing providers to eliminate public access channels.

"Instead of talking about strengthening public access, as we should be, we're fighting to get back to first base," said Barbara Popovic of CAN-TV.

Representatives of municipalities are challenging the basic concept of HB 1500 - that state franchises are needed to promote cable competition. They point out that by overriding local control, the bill eliminates basic customer service protections now enforced by municipalities, as well as local franchise requirements that entire communities be served.

Without anti-redlining provisions - which are probably only practical on a local basis - the measure won't promote competition and lower rates across the board, but will create a dynamic where rates go down in affluent areas but are "subsidized by higher prices paid by residents in lower-income, non-competitive areas," Burke argues in his resolution.

Municipalities are outraged that for the first time they'll have no oversight over construction in their public right-of-ways, said Terry Miller, an attorney with the City of Naperville. Local officials worry about refrigerator-sized utility boxes which AT&T would have blanket authorization to install under the bill's franchise, he said.

Under the bill the ICC can authorize franchises but has no enforcement power. Supporters of HB 1500 have promised "self-enforcement."

Most shocking for many is the bill's grant of eminent domain powers to AT&T and other state franchise holders, with no requirement for just compensation or avenue for appeal. HB 1500 "gives away the store regarding the ability of a private company to encroach on residential property in ways we've never seen before," Quinlan said. "It's extremely problematic."

The eminent domain provision is not expected to survive current negotiations over amendments, but it's indicative of the way Brosnahan's bill contains "an a la carte sampling" of only the provisions in cable law that favor AT&T, Miller said.

"What's clear about this bill is that it was written by telecommunications lobbyists," according to technology analyst Sascha Meinrath, executive director of the Champaign-Urbana Community Wireless Network, on his blog. "I can only imagine that the goal was to fast-track this bill and sneak it through before the public got organized enough to demand that it be withdrawn."

"AT&T wants to make this happen now because they know that with more time, more questions will be raised," said Brian Imus of Illinois PIRG, calling HB 1500 "a sweetheart deal for AT&T."

He points out, "There's nothing now blocking competition, nothing stopping AT&T from negotiating cable franchises with local municipalities."

"Local franchising works real well," points out Roger Huebner of the Illinois Municipal League. He's meeting with Brosnahan Tuesday to propose amendments to the Municipal Code that currently cover cable franchising to address AT&T's complaints about aspects of the process that are cumbersome, he said. The approach embodied in HB 1500 - creating a new article in the Public Utilities Act to give the ICC authority to issue state cable franchises - is unnecessary, he maintains.

Verizon, AT&T's chief competitor for internet provider television (IPTV), has snapped up hundreds of local franchises on the East Coast, and according to Huebner, AT&T itself is seeking local video franchises in Illinois communities including Bellwood and Wheaton.

The municipal amendments should get full consideration, said Miller. That would mean no committee vote on Wednesday.

Brosnahan's office said he was waiting for proposed amendments from the Attorney General's office. Another hearing on the bill has now been scheduled for one week after this Wednesday's hearing.

Illinois PIRG was joined by national consumer groups including Consumers Union in opposing the bill in its original form. "The unintended consequence will be systematic redlining on a statewide scale," according to a letter from Consumer Union's Jeannine Kenney and others to state legislators. They say other states with similar deregulation schemes have seen prices increase, "leaving consumers with nothing but empty promises."

Consumer groups also emphasize the importance on non-discriminatory "net neutrality" provisions ensuring free access to content to the Internet.

Michael Maranda of the Chicago Digital Access Alliance points out that AT&T is pushing legislation legalizing redlining and undermining local control and access even as it presents itself as a bidder on Chicago's wireless network, which parallels the city's cable franchises - and requires a digital inclusion plan. "It's a horrible bill and a discredit to the state," he said.

Gov. Blagojevich Directs Flags To Be Flown At Half-Staff

Gov. Rod R. Blagojevich ordered all state facilities to lower the U.S. and Illinois State flags to half-staff in memory of the victims of the Virginia Tech tragedy. The governor's order honors more than 30 students murdered and more than 20 injured on the Virginia Tech campus and is in accordance with the President's order to lower flags around the U.S.

"Today we mourn the loss of the students and faculty killed at Virginia Tech," said Gov. Blagojevich. "There are no words that can erase the deep sorrow and loss suffered by the families and friends of the victims. There is no line of logic that can explain such utterly senseless and brutal violence. On behalf of the people of Illinois, I offer our deepest sympathy to the families of the victims and the Virginia Tech community. They are in our thoughts and prayers."

Statement From Governor Blagojevich

"This is a historic day for the City of Chicago and for the State of Illinois. Chicago is a world-class city, a great sports town and the perfect place to host the Olympics. It's a city filled with immigrants from all over the world, and the logical location for athletes from around the world to compete in the ultimate international sports event. But this race is a marathon, not a sprint. The State of Illinois will continue working closely with Mayor Daley and the Chicago 2016 committee to do everything we can to bring the Olympics to Chicago," Gov. Blagojevich said.

PRYME TYMERS Meet

The PRYME TYMERS, a very active fellowship that meets at Trinity Church, 9230 S. Pulaski Road in Oak Lawn, invites the entire community to its next meeting on Thursday, April 26th at 11 a.m.

Brian Milich from the Sheriff's Office of Community Service will be present to discuss "Seniors In Emergency Situations." His presentation will explain how most natural and man-made disasters take us by surprise and how to prepare for their impact, i.e. fire, flood, tornado and terrorist attack. In addition, Brian will provide information about how to receive a free cellular phone for at-risk seniors. A roast pork luncheon, prepared by Chef Pitluck, will be served at noon. The cost is $6 and reservations are required.

Call the church office at (708) 422-5111 or Tom Panush (708) 636-7548 by Friday, April 20th. Transportation is provided upon request. A canned good item is also collected for the Salvation Army Food Pantry.

Thrall Family Makes $1.4 Million Gift To Elim's Autism Program

The Thrall Family announced that they plan to bestow a gift of $1.4 million to Elim Christian Services. The gift is to be used toward Elim's Moving Beyond Capital Campaign program, in which Elim will expand its capacity to serve more children and adults with developmental disabilities throughout the Chicagoland area. Through this campaign, Elim will be established as a Resource Center of Best Practices, sharing the knowledge accumulated through 59 years of excellence in the education and empowerment of children and adults with learning and developmental disabilities.

The Thrall family, headed by Jerry and Lynn Thrall, has been involved with Elim Christian Services for many years. One of their grandchildren, Adam, is a student in Elim's Autism Comprehensive Education (ACE) program. Now in its third year, the ACE program is gaining a reputation in the special education community as providing excellent, cutting-edge care for children with autism. The ACE program will be expanded to accommodate up to 60 children with autism. The renovated space for the expanded program will be named, "Thrall Family Space for ACE" in recognition of the family's outstanding commitment.

Adam's mother, Polly, has been thrilled to see the progress Adam has made during his time at Elim. She explains, "We couldn't be happier with Elim. We knew on our first visit that he needed to be here. The difference is that the staff are committed here, it is the reason God put them on this earth. Adam is loved and he is safe. Safety is especially important to us because if there was a problem, he couldn't tell us. He's made great leaps and bounds at Elim."

The mission of Elim Christian Services is to equip children and adults with disabilities to achieve their highest God-given potential. Elim pursues this mission by providing educational, vocational, therapeutic, and residential service to over 800 persons with special needs. From learning disabilities to severe disabilities, Elim is located at 13020 S. Central Ave., in Palos Heights.

Panel To Discuss Use Of Children As Soldiers Worldwide

Hundreds of thousands of children are recruited and used for armed warfare every year under fear of death. Raising public awareness of the human rights atrocities associated with this issue and urging officials to withdraw support from countries that knowingly recruit children, acclaimed author and former child soldier Ishmael Beah will join a panel discussion to call for immediate action to end the recruitment of children for combat across the globe.

The panel will discuss the use of children as soldiers worldwide at the University of Illinois-Chicago, in Room 302 of the Student Center East, on Thursday, May 3rd at 6 p.m. The East Student Center is located at 750 S. Halsted St.

Ishmael Beah was born in Sierra Leone in 1980 and before he moved to the United States in 1998 was used for warfare. Beah's book, A Long Way Gone: Memoirs of a Boy Soldier, is a memoir of his personal experiences as a child soldier in the Sierra Leonean Army and is currently number four on the New York Times Best Sellers List.

Beah will join panelists: Jo Becker, Children's Rights Advocacy Director for Human Rights Watch; Bernardine Dohrn, Clinical Associate Professor of Law and Director and founder of the Children and Family Justice Center. The panel will be moderated by Lynette Jackson, professor of Gender and Women's Studies and African American Studies at UIC and Chair of UIC's International Studies Program.

The panel is being co-sponsored by Human Rights Watch, Project Focus, The UIC International Studies Program and the UIC African American Studies Program.

Electric Rate Hikes Could Spell Disaster For Consumers

While electric rates are on the rise across the state, the worst is yet to come for Chicago's ComEd customers. Over the summer months, ComEd's rates are expected to soar, leaving many families and businesses in the Chicago area struggling to afford their electric bills.

Recently, AARP hosted a town hall meeting in Chicago Heights to address the issue and urge state lawmakers to resolve it before high electric bills hit those least able to afford them, including the older people and families on fixed incomes. At the event, citizens and businesses told of the problems they were already having and raised concern about being able to keep up with their next electric bill.

"High electric bills are nothing short of statewide disaster - many people are getting hit hard by the issue right now, in the Chicago area the problem is looming, but it is quickly approaching," said Bob Gallo, State Director for AARP Illinois. "Illinois State lawmakers must agree on a solution that allows people to afford their electricity before they are forced to suffer both financially and health-wise as they may have to leave the air-conditioner off in warm weather due to costs."

Illinois' 10-year electric rate freeze expired Jan. 1st, exposing ComEd and Ameren customers to extremely high rate increases. To date, ComEd customers have seen only minimal increases in their electric bill. However, in the coming months rates and bills are expected to soar, leaving many families and businesses unable to afford the electricity they need to live healthy and comfortable lives.

The Illinois House has passed House Bill 1750, sponsored by Rep. George Scully, which rolls electric rates back to the 2006 level for 3 years while a long-term solution is worked out. The bill is now in State Senate. A similar Senate Bill, SB 1592, was introduced by Sen. Gary Forby and also is awaiting action; Sen. Debbie Halvorson was instrumental in pressing for the bill.

AARP is working to ensure the people of Illinois have the fair, equitable and affordable electricity they need and deserve. AARP is urging both the Senate and House to come to an agreement and immediately send the governor a bill that provides relief for both ComEd and Ameren customers, effectively rolling back the electric rate hike, and refunding the excessive amounts paid since the first of the year.

AARP has over 1.7 million members in Illinois. AARP is a nonprofit, nonpartisan membership organization dedicated to making life better for people 50 and over. It provides information and resources; engages in legislative, regulatory and legal advocacy; assists members in serving their communities; and offers a wide range of unique benefits, special products and services for members. CAGW Releases Prime Cuts 2007

Citizens Government (CAGW) recently released Prime Cuts 2007, a comprehensive look at the depth and breadth of waste throughout the federal government. Just in time for Tax Day, the report catalogues 750 recommendations through-out the government which, if enacted, could save taxpayers $280 billion over the next year and $2 trillion over the next five years.

"As Americans reluctantly finish filing their tax forms, it is important to call attention to where all that money is going. Unfortunately, as Prime Cuts proves, much of it goes toward inefficient and wasteful government programs," said CAGW President Tom Schatz.

Prime Cuts includes examples of agencies, programs and policies that are plagued by fraud or negligence, serve political or parochial interests rather than the general good, do not demonstrate results, duplicate efforts in the private sector, circumvent procedural checks for transparency and accountability, or exceed their original mandate.

Prime Cuts features some long-standing proposals to terminate specific programs such as the White House's National Youth Anti-drug Media Campaign (saving $512 million over five years), sugar subsidies (saving $800 million over five years) and the Advanced Technology Program (saving $721 million over five years). New recommendations include eliminating the Historic Whaling and Trading Partners Program and the Denali Commission, which together would save $80 million over five years.

During fiscal 2007, 14 Prime Cuts recommendations were enacted which will collectively save taxpayers almost $3 billion in the first year and $46.5 billion over five years.

"As Prime Cuts shows, Congress has no excuse for failing to identify and eliminate wasteful spending other than its own indifference," Schatz concluded.

The April 17th Election is now history as voters have cast their ballots for their candidates of choice. Since this column is prepared prior to the closing of the polls it does not reflect either the unofficial or official results from the election. We will certainly follow up next week with an official recap of the local contested races. We do wish to thank those citizens who made the effort to improve their municipalities, school districts, library districts, park districts and fire protection districts by participating in our elective process. Your involvement strengthens your community.

Mayor Richard M. Daley received an early 65th birthday present Saturday afternoon as the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) selected the city of Chicago's bid to host the 2016 Olympic Games over that of fellow finalist Los Angeles. According to USOC Chairman Peter V. Ueberroth, the energy and determination of the Chicago delegation, and the citizens of Chicagoland, tipped the scales in Chicago's favor. "I saw a little bit of an enthusiastic youngster in the mayor," Ueberroth said. "You can't act that. It just comes out. It's infectious, that enthusiasm." Chimed in Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa, "This is a man who has no peer in American cities." Mayor Villaraigosa went on to say that he will stand with Mayor Daley and do whatever is necessary to help Chicago bring the 2016 Olympic Games to Chicago. Quite a compliment from one's main U.S. competition.

Congratulations to Patrick G. Ryan, chairman of Chicago's 2016 exploratory committee, his outstanding presentation committee members and staffers, and of course the Mayor! Now the game is on internationally and other sites under consideration include: St. Petersburg, Russia, Rio de Janeiro, Madrid, Prague Czech Republic, Tokyo, and Rome. Cities have until Sept. 15th to file a bid application with the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

Illinois' U.S. Senators Dick Durbin and Barack Obama recently sent a letter to the Secretary of the United States Air Force, Michael Wynne, in their continuing efforts to keep jobs at the 183rd Fighter Wing in Springfield.

In their correspondence, the Illinois lawmakers asked the Pentagon to establish an Air Operations Center (AOC) at the Capital Air Guard Base in Springfield, a move that would provide 68 full-time and 302 military positions at the 183rd. The Senators also reiterated their strong support for either retaining the current flying mission or assigning alternate aircraft for the 183rd.

"We recognize the constraints on the Defense budget, but it is essential the Illinois Air National Guard (ILANG) maintain a high level of capability and readiness to support both critical state and federal missions, including prosecuting the Global War on Terrorism and Homeland Defense. We seek your support to address this oversight."

Presently, the 183rd Fighter Wing is targeted to dissolution due to budget constraints. We hope our U.S. Senators will prevail.

Legislation sponsored by downstate Rep. Kurt Granberg (D-Carlyle) that would bring ethics reforms and accountability to community colleges and increase local control passed the House last week and moves to the Senate for further consideration.

House Bill 3504 requires classification of community college districts as units of a local government. As a result, they would be required to adopt resolutions and enact policies regarding accepting gifts by college officials and employees and standards of political activity.

Granberg's legislation would also provide more locally based control of community colleges, in light of a ruling by the Illinois Attorney General's office finding that local control was not specified in law. This legislation ensures that communities have the necessary oversight to guarantee that these schools serve the community in the best way possible, since many of the college officials are elected by the voters.

Governor Rod Blagojevich has appointed the head of the City of Chicago's Office of Emergency Management and Communications, Andrew Valasquez III, as Director of the State of Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA), which oversees disaster response efforts in the State of Illinois. Valasquez is the first Hispanic ever to be appointed to the helm of the state's top safety agency. His appointment became effective last month, pending State confirmation.

Valasquez's new job responsibilities also include oversight of the Illinois Terrorism Task Force, which is charged with the specific task of assuring that Illinois is ready to respond to an act of terrorism. Director Valasquez will work with Michael Chmness, Chairman of the task force, to help improve the plans in place to deal with a terrorist attack in Illinois, including communication and response procedures between state agencies and local communities.

Join the fun on Thursday, April 26th from 6 to 10 p.m. at Beverly Country Club for the first annual "In Good Company" benefit assisting Maternity Services furnished by the Little Company of Mary Hospital Auxiliary. Enjoy premier shopping, health and domestic demonstrations, informal modeling, delicious food stations, drinks and friends. Win a $1,000 gift credit card, golf clubs and accessories or a TV and gift package featured in the Grand Raffle. Exquisite instant basket raffles also will be available featuring such items as an American Girl Doll, artwork, jewelry, play and dinner tickets. Most importantly, this fun-filled evening will improve hospital efforts to raise funds for the Auxiliary's pledge to Little Company of Mary Maternity Services. Helping to fulfill this mission is Title Sponsor, Standard Bank, and Presenting Sponsor, Krahl Construction.

Pre-event tickets are $35 and can be purchased by calling: (708) 229-5067. If available, tickets at the door will be $40. VIP sponsorships are still available for $500 offering 10 tickets, a special gift and the exclusive entry to the first hour of shopping and pampering services.

Night Blue Theater Stages Revival Of Tony Award Broadway Musical "La Cage Aux Folles"

Night Blue Theater is proud to announce they will be staging the Broadway musical "La Cage Aux Folles" for a limited seven performance engagement at two suburban locations in April. It will open at The Chicago Marriott Southwest at Burr Ridge located at 1200 Burr Ridge Parkway just off of the County Line Road exit from I-55. Performances are Friday, April 20th at 8:00pm and Saturday, April 21st at 2:00pm AND 7:00pm. Tickets are $20 for adults and $18.00 for students and senior citizens with I.D. The hotel is also offering a special Room/Dinner package for $139.00, which includes one double occupancy room and a $40.00 meal voucher when show tickets are purchased. Call the box office at 630-257-3077 for reservations. The following weekend the show will be presented at Georgio's Banquet/Comfort Inn and Conference Center located at 8900 W 159th St in Orland Park one mile east of LaGrange Road. Performances are Friday, April 27th at 8:00pm, Saturday, April 28th at 3:00pm AND 8:00pm and Sunday, April 29th at 3:00pm. Tickets are $26.00, which includes two drink tickets. Call the box office at 630-257-3077 for reservations.

This boisterous and uplifting celebration of love and family in an untraditional setting is based on the play by Jean Poiret. It features a book by Tony Award winner for "Hairspray" Harvey Fierstein and jazzy music and lyrics by Jerry Herman, the creator of "Hello Dolly" and "Mame". The later inspiration for the 1996 film "The Birdcage", it is a classic family musical about love, loyalty, and the complexities of parenthood - whatever the form. Heading a cast of 24 is theatre veteran John B. Boss (Oak Lawn) as Albin, whose alter ego ZaZa is the headliner at "La Cage Aux Folles," a transvestite club on the French Riviera. La Cage marks John's third role with Night Blue, having previously played Schultz in Cabaret and Engineer in Miss Saigon. This will be his 6th production of La Cage Aux Folles having played Georges and Albin in previous productions in the NW suburbs, Rockford and Michigan City, Indiana. No stranger to regional audiences, he has appeared with Oak Lawn Park District, Illinois Theatre Center, Beverly Theatre Guild, B.H.U.C., L.Z.P. Productions, Music On Stage, and Drama Group to name a few. He received regional awards for roles in Man of La Mancha and Unveiling. Professionally Mr. Boss has appeared in several car and casino commercials as well as two National Tours.

For Young Audiences. He has also been seen in shows at Theater at the Center, Light Opera Works, Pheasant Run Dinner Theatre and First Street Playhouse. He is especially thankful to Peter Verdico for auditioning and the costumers for making him look "ravishing." The club owner and longtime partner Georges is played by Peter Verdico. The St. Tropez couple and the rest of the cast will sing and dance their way through a glittering score in this raucous musical comedy that won't fail to touch your heart. Making his directorial debut is Night Blue Company Ensemble member Paul Packer. Packer is assisted by Night Blue Theater Producer Dave Walters. The musical numbers are choreographed by Shawn Quinlan with vocal direction by Leslie Horner (Homewood). The cast also includes Mark Stickney as the son Jean-Michel, Tina Smith as his sweetheart Anne, Keith Rumbaugh (Park Forest) and Summar Jonas as the crusading future in-laws, Mark R. Martell as Jacob, the "maid", and Maura M. O'Flaherty as Jacqueline, the local socialite. The notorious Les Cagelles are played by Rocco Ayala, Dominic Boyte, Christina Flores, Eric Hawrysz, Jose Perez and Laura Zettergren. Jamin Gahm (Joliet), Sarah Gilbert (Alsip), Sean Janda (Lockport), Annie Keefe, Kevin Kempeczynski (Chicago Ridge), Irene Patino (Joliet), Amanda Lee Squibb (Chicago Ridge) and Chris Snow. Filling out the ensemble are Ed Modesto and Matt Morales (Thornton). Director Paul Packer is pleased that Night Blue Theater founder Dave Walters, gave him the green light to direct this wonderful show. He states "Night Blue's La Cage is going to focus on Herman's music and Fierstein's story. We have enlisted the talents of some of the finest singers in the Chicago area to give the show the full sound it needs. He further states, "Night Blue Theater is the perfect outlet to bring out the intimacy of the relationships in the show. It truly is a family show about families. We will be using a minimal set and elaborate costuming... It is truly going to be dazzling."

To order tickets to LA CAGE AUX FOLLES call the box office at (630) 257-3077. More information is available on line at www.nightbluetheater.com.

Illinois Railway Museum Open For The 2007 Season

The Illinois Railway Museum, located in Union (McHenry County), Illinois opened its 54th season on April 1st. The museum, with more than 400 pieces, is the largest of its type in the United States. Trains operate on Sundays from April through October, Saturdays from May through October, and seven days a week from Memorial Day through Labor Day. In addition to the operating trains, more than 400 rail cars and locomotives are on display in car barns and open display yards. One admission price allows visitors unlimited train rides and entrance to all public exhibit areas. See the IRM web site at www.irm.org or call 1(800) BIG-RAIL for recorded information.

Special events are scheduled throughout the season. For 2007 the first special event is something new - "Scrap-A-Train Day"...no, not a train demolition - it's a scrapbooking event! On May 5th, the first 250 paid adult visitors will receive a coupon for a make-and-take train-themed scrapbook project, presented by scrapbooking pro Julie Piesciuk! The museum's other "specials" during May include free admission for moms on Mother's Day (must be accompanied by at least one fare-paying individual); Scout Day on May 19th, which provides special activities for boy and girl scouts - for more details, call (815) 923-4391, ext. 404; and the Memorial Day Weekend - May 26th, 27th and 28th - marking the beginning of the summer season!

The museum gift stores are open on operating days. Food service begins in mid-May. Picnic areas are available [large groups should call (815) 923-4391, ext. 404, to reserve an area]. Clean, modern restrooms are available. Main walkways are paved, allowing handicapped accessibility. Parking is free.

For advance planning: Ever-popular Day Out With Thomas returns Aug. 17th, 18th, 19th, 25th and 26th. Tickets go on sale on May 21st.

Frank Lloyd Wright Event

After a long Chicago winter the Frank Lloyd Wright Preservation Trust is celebrating nature, one of the five major influences on Frank Lloyd Wright's designs, with Naturally Wright.

This popular multi-faceted event features an exclusive display of nature drawings from the Preservation Trust's collection, a special tour of the Home and Studio that highlights Wright's methods to integrate natural features into his designs, and a demonstration on how to create Prairie-inspired botanical arrangements. Refreshments will be served.

Join us for Naturally Wright at 4 p.m. on Saturday, April 21st at Frank Lloyd Wright's Home and Studio, 951 Chicago Ave. in Oak Park. Admission is $16 for Preservation Trust members and $20 for non-members. Tickets are available online at wrightplus.org or at the Home and Studio Museum Shop, 951 Chicago Ave. in Oak Park. For more information about this event, call (708) 848-1976.

Naturally Wright is part of ToursPlus, a program of enhanced tours providing new and intriguing ways to experience Wright's Home and Studio in Oak Park and Wright's Robie House in Chicago. Visit wrightplus.org to learn about the wide array of ToursPlus offerings.

Toddler Spring Fling Dance

Toddlers and their families can celebrate Spring with a night of child-friendly music and food at the First Annual Toddler Spring Fling Dance hosted by the South Region chapter of PACES (Parent and Child Education & Support Organization). The Toddler Spring Fling Dance promises to be an evening of dining and dancing in a festive and family-friendly environment. All infant thru preschool-aged children and their families are welcome on Saturday, April 28th from 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. to be held at Standing Stones Baptist Church, 16250 84th Avenue, Tinley Park.

"Happy Jacks" will be on hand to provide cotton candy, snow cones, popcorn and/or candy art, while Moms and Dads have a chance to meet other parents, socialize and enjoy quality time with their children in a warm and welcoming environment. The Windy City Thunderbolts mascot will also be on hand to greet the children. Meanwhile, parents can participate in a silent auction (credit, cash & checks accepted).

The Toddler Spring Fling Dance is open to all. Cost is $5 per person for PACES members ($6 at the door); $6 per person for non-members and all children 12 months and under are free. To guarantee a reservation, checks should be made payable to PACES (include the number of adults and children in the memo line) and mailed to PACES Toddler Ball c/o Dawn Mack, 8728 S. 50th Avenue, Oak Lawn, IL 60453. Tickets will be held at the registration table under your name.

Life Is A Dream

The Moraine Valley Community College Academic Theater Department will present on April 27-29 and May 4-5 the regional premiere of an original adaptation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Nilo Cruz of Calderon de la Barca's 17th century Spanish play Life is a Dream. Friday and Saturday performances will be at 7:30 p.m., and the Sunday performance will be at 3 p.m. in the John and Angeline Oremus Theater in the Fine and Performing Arts Center, on campus, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills. Tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for students and seniors.

Life is a Dream is the suspenseful story of a king who is forewarned that his son will be a tyrannical ruler. Respecting the omen, he locks the prince away. Releasing and then imprisoning him again, the king convinces his son that it was all a dream and that he was never a prince. Questioning free will and fate, this classic play is an imaginative look at the ethereal nature of fantasy versus reality.

This production will be directed by Dr. Craig Rosen, assistant professor of Theater and coordinator of Moraine Valley's Academic Theater Department. He was instrumental in obtaining the translation by Cruz, which Rosen says is very straightforward and easier to understand than the original script.

"Life is a Dream is a very poetic play with dreams, stars and the zodiac built into the language and the set," said Rosen. "I find it very moving, beautiful and philosophical. It's a great challenge for our students. I'm excited because it's a classic play that's been rediscovered. It's getting a new life."

The cast list for this production is: Mike Azarkiewicz - Tinley Park; Frank Caclatore - Evergreen Park; Eriela Hayes - Merrionette Park; Lindsey Kammer - Palos Park; Craig Knight - Palos Heights; William Krolkowski - Justice; James Lis - Palos Area; Bill Miller - Evergreen Park; Eriela Rangel - Justice; and Luke Simone - Orland Park. For more information on Moraine Valley's Fine and Performing Arts Center, visit morainevalley.edu/fpac. To order tickets, call the Moraine Valley Box Office at (708) 974-5500. Phone orders are subject to a $1 per order handling fee.

For news media inquiries, call Jessica Crotty, College and Community Relations coordinator, at (708) 974-5281, or e-mail her at ecrotty@morainevalley.edu.

Bill Miller, of Evergreen Park, as King Basilio and Eriela Hayes, of Merrionette Park, as Rosaura will perform in Moraine Valley Community College's Academic Theater production of Life is a Dream on April 27-29 and May 4-5. The college is presenting the regional premiere of an original adaptation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Nilo Cruz of Calderon de la Barca's 17th century Spanish play.

Latest From The Archives Compact Disc Set

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra Assn. has issued a new volume of compact discs titled Soloists of the Orchestra III. The two-disc set, part of the CSO's ongoing From the Archives recording series, offers a select group of outstanding performances featuring past and present players in the soloist role. It is the third volume in the series that is completely dedicated to soloists of the Orchestra and features works - previously unreleased and now available for the first time - recorded live by the Chicago Symphony in Orchestra Hall, at the Ravinia Festival, the Petrillo Music Shell in Grant Park, and Mandel Hall at the University of Chicago.

The latest release includes selections representing a vast range of genres, styles and periods, illustrating the versatility and virtuosity of the Orchestra members. The lineup of soloists includes several musicians who have formed the backbone of the Orchestra over the past 50 years, including Adolph "Bud" Herseth, who led the trumpet section for more than 50 years, and violinists Victor Aitay and Samuel Magad, piccolo player Walfrid Kujala and flutist Donald Peck - each of whom gave more than four decades of his professional career to the Chicago Symphony. All soloists featured in this collection reflect the inspired hiring choices and orchestra-building wisdom of music directors Artur Rodzinski, Rafael Kubelik, Fritz Reiner, Sir Georg Solti and Daniel Barenboim.

Priced at $35, Soloists of the Orchestra III is available for purchase online at www.symphonystore.com and in person at The Symphony Store for the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, 220 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60604. To place an order by phone, call (312) 294-3345. Orders may also be placed via fax at (312) 294-3466. The Symphony Store is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. except on concert evenings when the store stays open until 30 minutes after the performance.

FISHING THE ROCK RIVER, A MIXED BAG AND A FEW SURPRISES: The long awaited call finally came, legendary Rock River fishing guide Denny Halgren fulfilled a promise he made last year: "When the time is right, I'll give you a call, and we will target catfish and walleyes."

At the appointed time, I met Denny at Bunny's Bait Shop in Dixon, Illinois. Bunny's is a must stop for anyone fishing the Rock. This is the place where the guides hang out. Owners Irene and Ray have the latest information on the hot fishing spots as well as the best baits and presentations to use, and they are more than willing to share this information with their customers. Bunny's has the best selection of after-hours coin-operated vending machines for bait and tackle that I have ever seen.

We launched Denny's spacious John-type aluminum boat and jet motor, below the Dixon dam. Denny was a day or two away from having his new boat ready, a Weld-pro boat powered by a 150 hp Suzuki retro-fitted with a jet lower unit. This set-up allows Denny with his flat-bottomed boat and jet-drive, to fish areas not accessible to propeller driven boats.

The day was picture-perfect, clear blue skies and temperatures in the high sixties. The only problem, the winds were out of the west at 30 miles per hour. We were jigging for walleyes over Denny's favorite current breaks, boat control was important. The river was six feet over normal pool, the river flowed to the West and the winds were blowing to the East. Denny put us into walleyes using trolling motor, drift sock and anchor. The largest fish of the day was a 4 pound-5 ounce walleye, a nice fish on any body of water. We kept two walleyes and turned our attention to catfish, finding a few sheltered bays. Using Denny's tackle and following his instructions, we caught a fine mess of two to four pound channel cats to take home.

The next day promised to be a better walleye day; no wind and mild temperatures. Things were looking good as we anchored below the Dixon Dam. Then it happened. The folks controlling the dam decided to clear the screens of accumulated debris. Suddenly it became impossible to fish. The line and lures were constantly getting hung up on weeds, logs, and other garbage.

The trick was to motor downstream a mile or two, and fish until the debris caught up with us. Then fire up the engine, move downstream and fish until the debris caught up with us again. This went on for five miles. Taking stock of the situation, we decided we had enough walleyes and catfish, two great days on the river, and stories to talk about around the campfire.

Denny with 'eating size' channel catfish.

The Rock River originates at the Horicon Marsh in Wisconsin, and enters the Mississippi at Rock Island. This is a beautiful river, no commercial traffic, with stretches showing no signs of human activity.

Denny has fished the river most of his life. Catching fish or not, a trip with him is most interesting. He is more than willing to share his knowledge of the river and local history. Denny leads the futile effort to impose creel and size limits. As he put it: "The river is a 'World Class Fishery' and could be better with some simple, common sense regulations."

Denny is a full-time guide, targeting channel and flathead catfish and walleyes. I found his fees to be reasonable, his knowledge of the river, and the amount of effort he puts into pleasing his clients the reason he has so much repeat business.

He is a professional guide in every sense of the word. He is licensed and insured, fishes year-round, weather permitting. He spends some time during January and February on the Outdoor talk circuit giving seminars.

Denny is a Pro-Staff member of Plano Moulding, Lodi Nets, True Tum Hooks, Plueger Reels, Suzuki Outboards, Cajun Lines and All Star Rods, just to mention a few. To book the fishing trip of a lifetime with Denny, call (815) 288-6855.

Dispute Exelon Contention That Tritium Remediation Not Harmful To Preserve

A press release issued by Exelon Nuclear asserting that its remediation of an inadvertent release of tritiated water is not potentially harmful to the nearby Braidwood Dunes and Savanna Nature Preserve is being disputed by the Forest Preserve District of Will County.

Exelon won approval from the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency to reverse the flow of groundwater into a pond that was contaminated and subsequently purchased by Exelon. This groundwater supply, Forest Preserve ecologists believe, is critical to the health of Braidwood Dunes.

Data provided to Forest Preserve staff by Exelon itself predicts a drop in groundwater levels. The data show that Exelon's pumping has already lowered its own pond's elevation by seven feet, a depth that will remain for the four to five years necessary to treat the spill. Because the pond is fed by groundwater, this lowering is causing the groundwater to flow back into the pond from District property. Exelon's own model of alternate pumping strategies predicts that the groundwater will be impacted by as little as 1.1 feet on District property furthest from the pond and as much as 4 feet on District property nearest the pond.

The western portion of the preserve, which is closest to the pond, contains the highest quality wetlands and support populations of at least one state endangered plant species and other species reliant on the groundwater level.

Braidwood Dunes and Savanna Nature Preserve is protected by the Illinois Natural Areas Preservation Act and other Illinois' statutes and regulations relating to protection of wetlands and wildlife.

In a report provided to the Operations Committee of the Forest Preserve Board of Commissioners, the District's governing body, Executive Director Michael Pasteris wrote. "The rarity and high ecological quality of Braidwood Dunes and Savanna Nature Preserve is why it is a dedicated Illinois Nature Preserve. The preserve was purchased, developed and managed with public funds; as caretakers of the public's interest, its protection is serious business for us. It is not clear that these facts, the ecological sensitivity of the site or the seriousness of our concerns are appreciated by Exelon."

At present, negotiations between Exelon and District staff have reached an impasse. "Exelon recently drew a line in the sand and is unwilling to take further steps to address our concerns," Pasteris reported to the Operations Committee. "Exelon cannot dispute the fact that it has released tritiated water in the groundwater and onto District property in violation of the Illinois Natural Areas Preservation Act. It is also clear that Exelon's failure to disclose these releases when they occurred is really the cause of Exelon's present dilemma and our concerns. If Exelon had promptly disclosed the releases of tritiated water, the plume would never have spread as far as it has, and we would not be in the position that we are now in."

The Executive Director is urging Exelon to do what is necessary to deal with the tritium cleanup without jeopardizing the health of Braidwood Dunes by negatively impacting its crucial supply of groundwater. "Time is not on our side," Pasteris says. "If Exelon chooses not to work with us, the District will have to consider taking appropriate action to protect Braidwood Dunes and the wetlands and sedge meadow within this preserve. The District will continue to consult with the Illinois Nature Preserves Commission and the Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources regarding our course of action."

Francis Cardinal George, O.M.I., Archbishop of Chicago, dedicated Catholic Charities first national multi-agency holistic effort to assist formerly homeless U.S. military veterans on Wednesday, April 11th. St. Leo's Campus is located at 7750 S. Emerald Ave., which is one block east of Halsted St.

St. Leo Residence is a new four-story building with 141 furnished studio apartments, library, computer lab, fitness center, community, recreation rooms and laundry occupied by formerly homeless U.S. military veterans who live and receive services on campus. The Residence is built on the site of St. Leo the Great Church, which served a large Archdiocese of Chicago parish from 1885 until 2002 when it closed.

Scheduled for completion later this year are three more sites. Auburn-Gresham Community Outpatient Clinic and Resource Center should be completed later this spring. This new two-story community-based clinic, owned by Catholic Charities and operated by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, will assist residents of the St. Leo Campus and the 20,000 veterans who live in the surrounding community. The Center will provide medical care treatment, counseling, education, computer and employment training.

Pope John Paul II Home for Disabled Veterans will open early in the fall of 2007. The Home will provide 14 households of persons with physical disabilities with affordable housing in Section 811 apartments operated by Catholic Charities Development Corporation. A rooftop deck on the two-story Home will overlook the new St. Leo Veterans Garden.

St. Leo Veterans Garden is under construction and will be a centerpiece of the Campus. It is a new tranquil walled garden to honor all living veterans, funded by a grant from the Illinois AMVETS. A paved brick path will link the garden's fountain with five distinctive areas representative of each branch of the U.S. Military service featuring flags, seating and plantings.

Catholic Charities operates two residential programs at the Veterans Administration Hines Campus in Maywood: the Bishop Goedert Residence for 70 seniors and Cooke's Manor, providing affordable housing for 40 residents recovering from substance abuse.

The VA estimates that on any given night there are more than 300,000 homeless veterans in the U.S., and an estimated 18,000 live in the Chicago metropolitan area. The VA projects that nearly half of the homeless veterans are from the Vietnam era. Many of these men and women experience Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), have health and substance abuse problems and need help finding employment.

The St. Leo project is the first of five national pilots across the U.S. in areas of greatest concentration of homeless veterans. It is designed to be replicated in other communities throughout the country. Catholic Charities has a long history of serving veterans in need. In the past 10 years, an increasing number of veterans have turned to Catholic Charities for emergency assistance, food, transitional shelter, job training and substance abuse counseling.

St. Leo's Campus opened in mid-January 2007. Residents rent fully furnished studio apartments at a cost of $325 per month. It is expected that residents will occupy their apartments up to two years, while they gain the skills to become self-sufficient. On-site Catholic Charities social service staff works with residents on individualized plans for self-sufficiency that can include education, job skill training, job search, job retention and maintenance of physical and mental health.

In just two months since the St. Leo Campus for Veterans opened, many residents have found employment, some of them at St. Leo's itself.

Good-bye until next week. God bless you and your family and God bless America.

How Do I Remove My Deceased Spouse's Name From The Title To Our Home?

Cook County Recorder of Deeds, Eugene "Gene" Moore (pictured) remarked the question most asked at community forums and out-reach events is, "how do I remove my deceased spouse's name from the title to our home?" The reality is that the decedent's name is not removed from the chain of title, but his or her absence is explained by way of a Deceased Joint Tenancy Affidavit.

The Deceased Joint Tenancy Affidavit is given under oath and requires the following information: (1) the affiant (the person swearing to the information) was acquainted with the deceased who was one of the owners of the land at his/her time of death. (2) The death of the deceased is evidenced by a certified copy of his/her Death Certificate which is attached. (3) Identify the county in which the land is located and provide the legal description.

The integrity of the chain of title to your homes and other real estate is guarded with great prejudice by the Recorder of Deeds office, especially in this technological age in which we live. We continue to employ and maintain our grantor (the person or entity selling or gifting the real estate)/grantee (the person or entity receiving the real estate) indexes, which were previously manually maintained, but now computerized. Our office and the public must be able to determine how a document or recording entered the chain of title. The Deceased Joint-Tenancy Affidavit and the certified copy of the decedent's death certificate are both filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office in the county where the real property is located. Upon the filing of the above documents the surviving Joint-Tenant then owns the property in severalty (alone) and may exercise any and all rights with respect to the property. When the chain of title is later examined the absence of the joint-tenant is explained by way of the Deceased Joint Tenancy Affidavit.

The Deceased Joint Tenancy Affidavit also requires information other than the information enumerated above, but that information will depend on the particular circumstances of the decedent and affiant. A copy of the Deceased Joint Tenancy Affidavit can be obtained from a stationary store or from Chicago Title Insurance Company.

'Women's Spring Retreat'

Discover what nutrients are essential for overall wellness and well-being.

Build strong roots to explore your mind-body-spirit using yoga, meditation, and visual exercises.

Distribution Of Antitrust Settlement

Attorney General Lisa Madigan recently announced that checks have been issued to Illinois consumers who filed valid claims in the Remeron antitrust litigation. In all, 2,993 Illinois claimants who purchased the drug Remeron during the period June 15, 2001 to Jan. 25, 2005 will receive a total of $481,568.

The payments are the result of a nationwide settlement of allegations that a pharmaceutical company violated federal antitrust laws by delaying a less expensive generic form of the anti-depressant drug Remeron from coming on the market. Madigan joined the attorneys general from all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the five U.S. commonwealths and territories in the allegations against Organon USA, Inc. and parent company Akzo Nobel N.V. in a 2004 complaint filed in federal court in New Jersey.

The $8.6 million consumer portion of the $36 million settlement will compensate consumers for a portion of the higher price they paid for Remeron than they would have paid for a generic substitute. State purchasers, reimbursing agents such as Illinois' Medicaid and third party payers also shared in the aggregate settlement.

Madigan said the states' complaint alleged that Organon misled the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) about the scope of a new "combination therapy" patent it had obtained to extend its monopoly. In addition, the complaint alleged that Organon delayed listing the patent with the FDA in another effort to delay to consumers the availability of lower-cost generic substitutes. These actions resulted in higher prices for those who paid for Remeron. With annual sales in excess of $400 million at their peak, Remeron was Organon's top-selling drug, but sales stood to decline substantially with the onset of generic competition.

The settlement was approved in federal court in August 2005. Subsequent court proceedings as well as the notice and claims process itself resulted in a delay in the distribution of proceeds until now, Madigan said.

Illinois Global Warming Pollution Up 22%

Global warming pollution in Illinois increased by 22% between 1990 and 2004, according to The Carbon Boom, a new analysis of state fossil fuel consumption data released today by Environment Illinois. This is the first time that 2004 state-by-state data on carbon dioxide emissions have been released.

"To head-off the worst impacts of global warming, we need to stabilize and reduce emissions substantially in the coming years," said Environment Illinois Field Organizer David Nollman-Watanabe. "Unfortunately, in Illinois and across the country our emissions are rising each year. We need real leadership from our federal and state officials to reverse this trend."

Environment Illinois's report comes less than a week after the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, a U.N. body charged with assessing the scientific record on global warming, released its consensus report on the current and projected impacts of global warming. The report warned of increasing droughts, floods, heat waves, water stress, forest fires, and coastal flooding in the United States but concluded that "many impacts can be avoided, reduced, or delayed" by quickly and significantly reducing global warming pollution.

Using data compiled by the U.S. Department of Energy, Environment Illinois's new report examines trends in carbon dioxide emissions from fossil fuel consumption between 1990 and 2004, the most recent year for which state-by-state data are available.

Major findings of the report include:

Illinois's carbon dioxide emissions from fossil fuel consumption grew from 191.1 million metric tons to 233.8 million metric tons between 1990 and 2004, an increase of 22%. Illinois ranked 3rd nationwide for the largest absolute increase in carbon dioxide emissions over the 15 year period.

Nationwide, emissions of carbon dioxide from fossil fuel consumption increased by 18% between 1990 and 2004. Coal-fired power plants and the transportation sector—especially cars and SUVs—drove this emissions increase.

In Illinois, carbon dioxide emissions from coal-fired power plants jumped by 64% between 1990 and 2004, rising from 55.7 million metric tons to 91.5 million metric tons. Illinois ranked 1st nationwide for the largest absolute increase in carbon dioxide emissions from coal-fired power plants over the 15 year period.

"The good news is that we have the technology at our fingertips to cut global warming pollution and forge a cleaner, more secure energy future," said Nollman-Watanabe.

In January, Environment Illinois released its global warming Blueprint for Action, which calculated that we could achieve a 25% reduction in global warming pollution from Illinois sources by 2025 using a combination of clean car standards, renewable energy, and energy efficiency. That Blueprint is available at www.EnvironmentIllinois.org/blueprint. Subsequently, Governor Blagojevich set a state goal of reducing emission to 1990 levels by 2020 and has initiated an advisory group to devise a plan to meet the goal.

"The Governor has set a good target for emission reductions, and now we need to make sure it is more than simply an aspiration, by setting mandatory standards for global warming emissions as other states have done," said Nollman-Watanabe.

Environment Illinois is working to advance the same solutions at the federal level. The Safe Climate Act (H.R. 1590), introduced by Representative Henry Waxman (CA) in the House, and the Global Warming Pollution Reduction Act (S. 309), introduced by Senators Bernie Sanders (VT) and Barbara Boxer (CA) in the Senate, would limit global warming pollution to levels that current science says are needed to prevent the worst effects of global warming. The bills would freeze U.S. global warming emissions in 2010 and reduce emissions by about 15% by 2020 and by 80% by 2050.

"To protect future generations, our leaders must take decisive action to cut global warming pollution. Environment Illinois calls on Representative Tim Johnson to co-sponsor the only bill that does what scientists say we need to do—the Safe Climate Act concluded Nollman-Watanabe.

College Illinois Rates

To save money on future college costs, Illinois families can enroll their children in College Illinois, the state's 529 prepaid tuition program, through April 24th. New plan prices that will take effect in the fall are expected to be much higher than plan prices available for purchase now.

Applications are available at the program's Web site, collegeillinois.com. Interested families can register online in about 10 minutes. One-on-one, live customer support assistance is also available at the site in real-time during business hours. College Illinois recommends that those without online access call the program toll-free at (877) 877-3724.

Selecting A Lawyer: What You Should Know

Contrary to the image portrayed on television and in the movies, most lawyers do work that is decidedly less glamorous but necessary to protect the rights of their clients.

If you are in a situation that you believe warrants the services of a lawyer, there are some basic facts you should know.

Your lawyer must be completely loyal to you with no conflicts of interest. This means he or she must have no competing interests with other persons, including the lawyer's own interests.

Your lawyer must know all the facts of the case — including those which may appear unfavorable to your cause. Furthermore, they must not disclose those facts to anyone without your consent unless required to do so by law. Your lawyer must keep your confidences. At the same time, your lawyer must be loyal to the administration of justice. So, while he or she may use in your behalf all legitimate means, your lawyer must not resort to illegal or unethical tactics or untruths.

Your lawyer must be licensed to practice law in Illinois. The preparation for such a law license and legal practice requires a great deal of time, hard work and expense. The licensed lawyer must graduate from an accredited law school and must pass the Illinois bar examination, a rigid test of knowledge in all fields of law. Finally, he or she must submit to an examination of personal character and fitness to practice law before being admitted to the bar.

You should feel comfortable with your lawyer. Most people select as their lawyer one whom they have met or is recommended by friends or relatives. When this is not possible, advice may be sought by contacting a referral service, such as the Illinois State Bar Association lawyer referral service at www.isbalawyers.com. However the selection is made, you should have confidence in the lawyer who undertakes to represent you.

For further information about law-related issues, contact an Illinois State Bar Association-member lawyer in your area or visit www.isbalawyers.com.

Religious Leaders Urge Illinois Senate To Pass Medical Marijuana Bill

Fifty religious leaders throughout the state are urging the Illinois senate to pass SB 650 to allow seriously ill patients to use medical marijuana. The senate is expected to vote on the bill within the next few weeks.

Denominations with official positions supporting medical marijuana include the United Methodist Church, Presbyterian Church (USA), Union for Reform Judaism, Unitarian Universalist Association, Episcopal Church, and United Church of Christ. In addition to clergy from these denominations, medical marijuana supporters in Illinois include clergy from Catholic, Evangelical Lutheran, Disciples of Christ, Church of God, and Baptist congregations.

Clergy from these 11 denominations endorsed the Interfaith Drug Policy Initiative's statement of principle, which states, "Licensed medical practitioners should not be punished for recommending the medical use of marijuana to seriously ill patients, and seriously ill patients should not be subject to criminal sanctions for using marijuana if the patients' medical practitioners have told them that such use is likely to be beneficial."

This is precisely what SB 650 would accomplish. Similar laws have been enacted in 12 other states. Patients in Illinois suffering from cancer, AIDS, multiple sclerosis, and other serious illnesses who find marijuana to be helpful currently face a terrible choice: Either continue to suffer needlessly or risk arrest and jail.

"Medical marijuana users need mercy, not handcuffs," said the Rev. Robert A. Hillenbrand, a Presbyterian minister from Rockford who spearheaded the efforts to mobilize supportive clergy on this issue. "The use of any kind of treatment is best left to medical science and to the doctor-patient relationship."

A letter featuring the statement signed by 50 Illinois religious leaders was sent to all members of the state senate. Many of the clergypersons followed up by making phone calls to their senators.

"The moral choice on this issue is clear," said Charles Thomas, executive director of the Interfaith Drug Policy Initiative, which is coordinating the religious lobbying efforts in Illinois. "We pray that the senators will heed this call for compassion."

"It's immoral to punish people for making an earnest attempt at healing," said Rev. Jeffrey L. Phillips, a United Church of Christ minister from Arlington Heights. "Jesus broke the law of his land to heal the sick on the Sabbath."

District 218 ACT Prep Review

District 218 has paused its curricula in junior year science, math and English courses for the two weeks leading up to the April 26 ACT to focus exclusively on test preparation. Seeking greater familiarity with subject content and reduced anxiety for test takers, the project is the first time the district has initiated such a review.

Administrators designed 'All Hands on Deck' as the capstone of a yearlong preparation for the college entrance exam. The social studies department also has halted its standard curricula for five of the days between April 10 and 24 to focus on ACT preparation, while foreign language teachers have devoted time to review academic vocabulary.

"These initiatives take the cooperation, time and efforts of everyone," said Superintendent Dr. John Byrne. "We believe these efforts will help students, which in turn will benefit the schools and communities we serve. And of course these actions will once again underline that the District 218 staff is always willing to do what is best for kids."

English teachers have narrowed their focus to grammar and reading.

"Any review should be helpful," said Richards High School English teacher Meg Dunneback. "These final days before the test are a complete review of test-taking strategies as well as subject content. Not all kids will review on their own, so now all kids are getting more help. It's a test of endurance, and we have trained them well for it."

Math teachers, meanwhile, have led students through a host of drills targeting algebra, geometry, trigonometry, data analysis and probability concepts and problems. "I have seen an immense improvement in my children just from the small steps we have taken together already," said Richards math teacher Sarah Przytula. "This review gives me the opportunity to share tools and strategies that I would not have time to share with them otherwise."

Science teachers have reviewed the gamut of subject content. "The test emphasizes scientific reasoning skills," said District 218 Curriculum Director for Science Carol Baker. "Passages (on the test) can be about biology, chemistry, physics and earth science topics."

"Within our science curriculum we have added test prep questions as class discussions at the beginning of the day. We have also started to place ACT-type questions on each test. Practice tests are also given to the students periodically throughout the school year," Shepard High School science teacher Maureen Kall said.

Aside from covering subject content, helping students feel relaxed has been a primary goal of the review efforts. "I think this review will bring the students a level of comfort that they would not have had," said Shepard English teacher Colleen Fiscella.

Kall clearly sensed that students felt greater ease about the biggest test of their lives. "It will help to relieve the 'testling anxiety' that many students face when taking tests. If a student has been exposed to questions that are similar to those found on the actual ACT, they will be more comfortable," she said.

Although the review might seem like 'cramming,' in fact the busle of the project represents just the final step in test preparation.

"You can't cram for a test like the ACT. It takes time to develop the myriad academic skills that juniors will need to call upon to perform well. The district designed these two weeks to prime students for the test," said Assistant Superintendent for Instructional Services Dr. Kevin McCaffrey.

"Throughout the year, we build test prep questions into our homework, quizzes, and chapter tests," said Shepard math teacher Kathy Faragoi. "All junior teachers have given two 60-minute practice ACT math tests, in addition to the full practice ACT exam the students took on March 15."

Indeed, Przytula started the year by giving her students a practice ACT exam.

"The students had 60 minutes to complete the 60-question test. The tests were graded and students were informed if they had met standards. I then offered an extra credit opportunity for students that wished to present a problem and solution to their peers. For a few weeks we spent our warm-up time doing this, truly breaking down one or two problems a day," said Przytula.

English teachers also blended exercises into lesson plans during the year with an eye toward the ACT.

"Grammar review is an obvious way that we prepare for the ACT. Review of concepts such as commas, colons, and verb usage is a good way to prepare. In my class, we also concentrate on the writing portion by responding to ACT prompts, and then analyzing those prompts with the ACT rubric," Fiscella said.

Dunneback made her students assess their own state of readiness.

"In the fall, we discussed simple test taking strategies. Throughout the year I gave actual tests in English and reading. The kids scored themselves on the ACT scale and then we looked at what they typically got wrong. This gave them something to work on for the next time they took the test. These testing days were sprinkled into the year so they didn't feel overwhelmed," Dunneback said.

District 218 hired the consulting firm College Visions to help students refine their test taking strategies and relaxation techniques.

"Confidence exerts a substantial effect on student performance. When our kids open their test booklets, we hope the greater command of subject material and familiarity with ACT testing methodology will give them a real boost," McCaffrey said.

Winners Of All-American Boy & Girl Program

Congressman Dan Lipinski hosted an awards ceremony for the finalists of his All-American Boy & Girl Program. The contest is designed to showcase America's next generation of young leaders. The participants are all 7th and 8th grade students who reside or attend school in the Third Congressional District. The young men and young women who were selected as finalists are all scholastic achievers, involved in extracurricular activities, and are involved in their communities.

"I think this is a great program for the junior high school students in the Third Congressional District. Everyone who participated is an invaluable member of our community. These kids work hard in school and perform community service work in their neighborhoods and churches; I feel that they deserve recognition for all of their hard work", Lipinski said.

Congressman Dan Lipinski was joined by Lyons Township Supervisor Pat Rogers (back row, left) and Berwyn Mayor Mike O'Connor (back row, right) in honoring the winners. Pictured are: (front row, left to right) Eva Lopez, Bridgeport Catholic Academy; John Gross, St. Francis Xavier; Allison Young, St. Leonard; Katie Clouston, St. Rene Goupil; Caitlin Taff, St. Christina; Larissa May, St. John of the Cross; Mike Gass, Worth Junior High; (back row, left to right) Anna Borys, St. Albert the Great; Jake Doman, St. Linus; Manuel Valle, Edwards School; Michael Annerlino, St. Linus; David Anfield, Gurrie Middle School; and Kyle Szeto, Robert Healy School.

Spring Luncheon

The Worth Township Seniors Annual Spring Luncheon will be on Friday, May 4th. The luncheon starts at 12 noon. Tickets are $6. You must be an active member to attend. The luncheon will be held in the gym of the Worth Township Center, 11601 S. Pulaski Rd. in Alsip. If you have any questions, call (708) 371-2900, ext. 28.

Choir Students Win Medals

Show choir students from Richards High School won gold and silver medals at the Illinois High School Association Solo and Ensemble Contest at Thornwood High School on March 31.

Students who won gold medals included Shyvon Adams, Cassie Aguilar, Amber Atkinson, Emily Brankin, Armone Chappel, Nicole Chipman, Jennifer Galvan, Zac Goldstein, Jessica Greene, Bob Hoppenrath, Julie Janin, Julianne Kaiser, Emily Larson, Nate Martin, Ellen Miller, Paul Piane, Kyle Ryan, Patrick Rylko, Lizzie Saathoff, Clare Smith, Jennifer Thiel, Alexis Uriquiza, Hugh Vondracek, Rebecca Williams and Monica Zilinger.

Students could compete in three vocal categories, so some won more than one medal. Teacher Rose Cunningham directs the choral program at Richards.

Spaghetti Dinner

The Our Lady of Loretto Athletic Association, 8925 S. Kostner, Hometown, will host an "All U Can Eat" Spaghetti Dinner on Sunday, April 22nd from 12 to 6 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the door. The cost is $5 for adults, $3 for senior citizens, $3 for children 6 to 10 and $2 for children 5 and under. The meal consists of spaghetti, meatballs, salad, bread and dessert. All proceeds benefit the children in the OLL sports program.

For orders to go, call (708) 857-9344 on that day or call Elaine at (708) 636-9415 with any questions.

Trinity Lutheran Church Holds Sale

You know spring has arrived when Oak Lawn's Trinity Lutheran Church announces the dates of its Spring Rummage Sale. This year the sale will be held on Thursday, April 26th from 6 to 9 p.m. and Friday, April 27th from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Bag Day will be Saturday, April 28th from 9 to 11 a.m. Everything that can be stuffed in a brown paper grocery bag can be purchased for only $2.

Bargains include clothing for all ages, household goods, jewelry, books, toys, furniture, and much more. The church is at 9701 S. Brandt Ave. (two blocks west of Cicero Ave.).

Allergic Diseases

Moraine Valley Community College will host a Medical Education Series discussion on "Allergic Diseases: An Overview" from 7 to 8 p.m. on Monday, April 30, in the College Center's Moraine Rooms, 9000 W. College Pkwy., Palos Hills. The discussion will cover the symptoms and causes of allergies as well as avoidance measures and medications.

Dr. Anju Peters, assistant clinical professor of the Allergy Division at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine, will facilitate the event. Peters has spent nearly 15 years in the subject of chronic rhinosinusitis (CRS)—a group of disorders characterized by inflammation of nose mucosa and nasal cavities lasting 12 weeks or more. CRS disorders annually account for as many as 22 million office visits and more than 500,000 emergency department visits in the U.S., according to some estimates. Annual CRS-related healthcare expenditures reach as much as $3.5 billion.

This event is co-hosted by Northwestern Memorial Hospital and Moraine Valley's Health Sciences Programs, and is supported by a Carl D. Perkins grant. Admission to the discussion is free.

For the past three years, Moraine Valley and Northwestern Memorial Hospital have combined efforts to host several Medical Education Series discussions in a variety of health topics, including cardiology, urology and ophthalmology. For more information, call (708) 608-4152.

Improving Stiff Joints Through Cartilage Regeneration

The ability to move around is fundamental to our well-being. Yet, as we age, our ability to move independently is limited by changes in our joints. They begin to lose their flexibility and we see more stiffness in our everyday activities. These changes can be caused by chronic joint symptoms, America's leading cause of disability in people 15 years or older.

Chronic joint symptoms affect over 73 million Americans, a number that is expected to grow significantly over the next 10 years, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In part, this is due to the unprecedented rate at which the U.S. population is aging. As baby boomers age, they can expect to feel changes in their joints beginning in their 40s, and nearly everyone can expect to develop chronic joint symptoms by their 70th birthday.

Not Just An Age Issue

However, immobility and stiffness aren't just a function of age. The expected increase in disability due to chronic joint symptoms is also due to the fact that roughly 50 percent of Americans are overweight. Evidence of significant changes in the level of cartilage is seen in joints of most overweight people who are in their 40s, according to researchers. In fact, some physicians believe that these changes in cartilage levels may occur during our 20s and 30s. This degradation of our cartilage may explain the loss of flexibility and increased stiffness many of us have begun to feel in weight-bearing joints, such as knees and hips. This loss of cartilage opens the joint to developing significant pain with any movement. Fortunately, besides losing a few pounds, there are precautionary measures you can take to protect the cartilage in your hips, knees, lower back and neck, finger or toe joints.

Cartilage Regenerates

Medical studies have proven that even though cartilage does not contain blood vessels, nerves or lymph vessels, cartilage is an active, growing tissue that needs continuous regeneration to perform. Controlling the rate of cartilage regeneration are specialized cells called chondrocytes. These cells detect minor changes in the composition of the cartilage and respond by synthesizing new cartilage. However, joint cartilage may begin to break down over time if the natural regeneration process cannot keep pace with the wear and tear of daily life.

Protecting Cartilage

To protect and preserve your cartilage health, it's important to maintain the basic essentials of good health: good nutrition, getting sufficient exercise and rest and maintaining a healthy weight. Also, if you are at high risk for cartilage degradation, you may want to ask your doctor about CH-Alpha, available from Gelita Health Products. Its active ingredient, collagen hydrolysate, has a direct effect on the chondrocyte cells that control the production of cartilage tissue.

Collagen hydrolysate, with bioactive collagen peptides, is absorbed through the gastrointestinal tract, accumulates in the joint and may stimulate type II collagen growth to reduce chronic joint symptoms and improve joint function. In clinical studies with hundreds of patients, over 80 percent of patients experienced a significant improvement in joint mobility and a reduction in pain with collagen hydrolysate. It has also been shown, over time, to reduce the need to take analgesics, such as ibuprofen. Taking CH-Alpha orally may not only alleviate the symptoms, it could also address the underlying cause of joint pain, stiffness and immobility.

Collagen-based products have been used for many centuries for therapeutic purposes, and are recognized as safe components of pharmaceuticals and foods by the Food and Drug Administration Center for Food Safety and Nutrition.

Prescription Drug Costs

There are times when many Americans need a cure for the all-too-common high cost of prescription drugs. The problem is that the cost of prescription drugs continues to rise in the U.S. Some patients must choose between food and medicine; others are forced to import drugs. Patients can save money on their prescription medications with these easy tips:

- Switch from your brand-name, expensive prescription drugs to low-cost alternatives. Both generic and name-brand medications must be manufactured to meet the same strict FDA requirements. Generics are time-tested to be safe and effective. Some new brands have not been marketed long enough to pass the test of time.
- Don't be misled by free drug samples at the doctor's office. Samples are a form of marketing. Often, you're in for an expensive surprise when the sample runs out and you go to fill the prescription. Get the real price of your drug sample and see if there is a more reasonably priced option at www.USGenericsOnline.com.

"Consumers spend more than they have to on their prescriptions. Know your options, like generic equivalents, and you can save a lot of money," said licensed pharmacist Mel Solocheck, co-founder of USGenerics.

The company provides information on drugs that treat most major medical conditions including diabetes, arthritis and high blood pressure. For information, visit www.USGenericsOnline.com or call (888) 551-MEDS.

Healthy Immune System

The human body is constantly under attack from millions of microorganisms with which we share the planet, which is why it is important not to take your immune system for granted.

What can you do to help keep your immune system healthy and ready to shield your body from infection? To answer this question, Shaklee Corporation recently formed the Center for Immune Research, which offers these important tips:

1. Find ways to relax. Because stress produces many different effects on the endocrine systems, scientists believe that immune function may be diminished by chronic stresses. There are a number of techniques to help you relax, such as deep breathing or yoga, which can reduce mental and physical stress as well as lower blood pressure and slow down your heart rate.

2. Sleep matters. Besides leaving you feeling sluggish, irritable and forgetful, not getting enough sleep can temporarily reduce the activity of certain cells in your immune system by up to 50 percent. Strive to get seven to eight hours of sleep each night.

3. Feed your immune system well. Not getting enough calories and getting too much dietary fat may weaken immune response. This is one important reason why nutritionists recommend a well-balanced diet that includes plenty of fruit, vegetables, low-fat dairy products and whole grains.

4. Get physically active. Regular exercise helps to strengthen your immune system, cardiovascular system, heart, muscles and bones. Being active also stimulates the release of endorphins, improves concentration and other mental functioning, lowers cholesterol and blood pressure, and may lower cortisol and other stress hormones.

5. Learn about interferon. Although most Americans have never heard of interferon, this natural protein helps protect the body from the daily exposure to millions of germs that can lead to serious infection. Activated when an invading virus attacks a cell, interferon signals neighboring cells into action and triggers their resistance mechanisms. Interferon also activates other immune cells that kill invading pathogens.

Because interferon plays such an important role in immune health, Shaklee Corporation is raising awareness about NutriFeron™, a new dietary supplement that naturally increases the body's production of its own interferon.* The Japanese scientist who originally discovered the existence of interferon in the body—Dr. Yasuhiko Kojima at Tokyo University—developed NutriFeron™ after more than 40 years of research on natural interferon-inducing compounds.

For more information from the Center for Immune Research about enhancing and strengthening the body's natural defense systems, visit www.immunityfacts.com. To learn more about the benefits of NutriFeron™, visit www.nutriferon.com.*This statement has not been evaluated by the Food & Drug Administration. Thoughts On Health & Nutrition

FIRST FDA-OTC DIET DRUG APPROVED

Consumers will be able to buy the first FDA-approved over the counter (OTC) version of a prescription diet drug this summer. Xenical, the prescription drug marketed by GlaxoSmithKline since 1999, will now come in the low-dose, OTC version called "alli".

The main ingredient in both drugs is orlistat, a naturally-occurring fat blocker that binds to several digestive enzymes. This results in part of fat-containing foods passing through the intestinal tract without being absorbed.

About 25 percent of dietary fat is blocked when the prescription form of orlistat is taken with breakfast, lunch and dinner, resulting in a reduction in about 200 calories daily. The OTC drug, alli, will save you about 100 calories a day.

Taking orlistat-containing drugs is not without some possible problems, however. Fat-soluble vitamins such as A, D, E, and K may not be absorbed as readily when these medications are taken. Because of this, taking a multi-vitamin containing fat soluble vitamins is advisable.

Some people should not take the fat-blocking drugs. Those who have had an organ transplant, are restricted, since transplant drugs can cause special risks when combined with orlistat-based drugs. Persons who have diabetes, thyroid, and/or anti-clotting drugs are also at risk for problems.

Even healthy people who take either medication may have problems. If you have tried Xenical, you probably know that fat still must be limited in your diet. In the case of taking either drug, the more dietary fat you eat, the greater your chance of loose stools and diarrhea, bloating, gas and abdominal cramps. A restriction of fat intake in general will help to control these symptoms.

As always, discuss the use of alli with your physician before deciding to take it. You may be unaware of potential medical complications it can cause you.

Pediatrician Hassan Alzein, M.D., Named One Of The Country's Best

The Consumers' Research Council of America recently named Dr. Hassan Alzein (pictured), a pediatrician at Little Company of Mary Hospital and Health Care Centers, one of America's Top Pediatricians. Only a select few health care providers who meet specific criteria receive this recognition.

Dr. Alzein has practiced at Little Company of Mary for 12 years after completing a residency in pediatrics at the University of Illinois at Chicago Medical Center.

April Is Autism Awareness Month

Recent statistics from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) suggest that 1 in 150 people in the United States could be diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). That means 26,000 children in Illinois may have an ASD. ASD is a neurobiological disorder. Scientists do not know exactly what causes autism and symptoms can range from very mild to severe.

Currently, Illinois is facing a shortage of trained professionals to diagnose and treat children with autism. Early intervention is vital to the well-being of these children. Studies have shown that early treatment allows children to develop communication skills and other adaptive behaviors, reducing the appearance of problem behaviors.

April is National Autism Awareness Month. The Illinois General Assembly is aware of the issues Illinois faces and is taking action. This session, House Speaker Michael Madigan, D-Chicago and more than 64 House Members have sponsored House Bill 1661. HB 1661 supports evidenced based services throughout Illinois, including, 12 regional centers, four community outreach centers and 11 community planning initiatives. The bill provides diagnostic and treatment resources that will impact more than 16,000 children in FY2008.

Autism Spectrum Disorder can be detected as early as 18 months. Provided is a list of possible signs of autism. If you have a child or know a child that displays these symptoms contact your pediatrician, your local early intervention agency, school of The Autism Program. It is very important to begin intervention as early as possible in order to help your child reach his or her full potential. Acting early can make a real difference!

Play Skills

At age Did your child...

- 4-12 months Enjoy toys for their sensory value - mouthing, feeling, and hearing
- 12+ months Use toys as they were intended
- 16+ months Give objects identities other than intended (use blocks as cars or food)

30+ months

Social Interaction

At age Did your child...

- 4 months Show interest in faces, smile back, initiate smiles
- 6 months Relate to parents with joy, smile often when playing
- 9 months Orient to name, play give-and-take
- 12 months Use gestures to get needs met, repeat actions, show objects
- 15 months Check parent's facial expression, draw attention to objects of interest, begin to show empathy
- 18 months Pretend play, attract parental attention by looks or gestures
- 24 months Enjoy playing next to children, offer toys
- 36 months Imagine self as a character, talk for objects, play show and tell, talk about feelings

Joint Attention

At age...

- 2 months Exchange smiles
- 8 months Follow a caregiver with his eyes
- 9 months Follow a point
- 10 months Show objects
- 12 months Point to obtain an object
- 14 months Point to indicate to another an object of interest and look to others to gather social information

Investigate Further and Consider Autism if:

At age...

- 9 months Your child...
- 12 months Did not babble
- 16 months Did not point or gesture
- 24 months Did not use single words
- Any age Did not use 2-word phrases

TB Remains A Universal Health Concern

The spread of tuberculosis continues to present a global public health threat. Second only to HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis is one of the world's leading infectious killers. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), two billion people are infected with Mycobacterium tuberculosis (M.tb), with eight million new active cases annually and two million people dying from the disease each year.

According to data compiled by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 14,000 new cases of active TB were diagnosed in 2005 compared to 30,000 new TB cases in 1992. In addition to those with active TB, an estimated 10 to 15 million people in the United States have latent TB; i.e. infection with no signs or symptoms of active disease. In 2006 there were 569 cases of active TB in Illinois of which 116 were identified in suburban Cook County.

An illness of the respiratory system, TB is spread when infectious people cough, sneeze, talk or shout. Only people who are sick with TB in their lungs (active TB) are infectious. With appropriate antibiotic treatment, TB can be cured in most people. Left untreated, each person with active TB disease will infect on average between 10 and 15 people every year.

Early symptoms of active TB can include weight loss, fever, night sweats and loss of appetite. Symptoms may be vague and go unnoticed by the affected person. For some, the disease either goes into remission or becomes chronic and more debilitating with an active cough, chest pain, and blood sputum.

Successful treatment depends on close cooperation between the patient and health care provider. Treatment usually combines several different antibiotic drugs that are given for at least 6 months, sometimes for as long as 12 months.

In suburban Cook County, treatment and control services are provided by the Suburban Cook County Tuberculosis Sanitarium District (SCCTSD). The SCCTSD operates three full-time clinics with a combined total of 83,000 patient visits and administers 30,000 tuberculin skin tests annually.

Until 50 years ago, there were no medicines to cure TB. Now, strains that are resistant to a single drug have been documented in every country surveyed; what is more, strains of TB resistant to all major anti-TB drugs have emerged. Drug-resistant TB is caused by inconsistent or partial treatment, when patients do not take all their medicines regularly for the required period because they start to feel better. To ensure compliance with treatment in suburban Cook, directly observed therapy (DOT) is employed in the treatment of all active cases of TB.

Nationwide Asthma Screening Program

Adults and children with breathing problems can find out if asthma is taking their breath away during the 11th Annual Nationwide Asthma Screening Program, sponsored by the American College of Allergy, Asthma and Immunology (ACAAI).

Chicago-area allergists, who are asthma specialists, will offer free asthma screenings at the following locations:

- April 28th from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Dia Del Nino Festival with the Chicago White Sox, Armour Square Park, 3309 S. Shields Avenue.
- May 5th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Healthy Living Expo, Benedictine University, Rice Center, 5700 College Road, Lisle.
- May 5th from 9 a.m. to Noon at Sportsplex, 11351 W. 159th Street, Orland Park.
- May 9th from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Chicago Ridge Shopping Plaza, 95th Street and Ridgeland Avenue, Chicago Ridge.
- May 20th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Century Shopping Centre, 2828 N. Clark Street.

Supported by AstraZeneca, the program screened more than 100,000 people and referred more than half for a professional diagnosis in its first decade.

In addition to identifying people who might be at risk from asthma, the screening program provides an opportunity for those who already know they have asthma to talk with an allergist about their disease and how to keep symptoms under control.

Asthma affects about 23 million Americans including 9 million children and is responsible for about 4,000 deaths each year. Although the exact cause of asthma is unknown, many treatments are available to control this chronic inflammation of airways in the lungs and related symptoms.

An asthma attack often is triggered by allergens such as pollen, dust and animal dander, certain drugs and food additives, viral respiratory infections and physical exertion.

Once asthma is diagnosed, experts recommend aggressive treatment with allergen avoidance and medication. Because inflammation of the lungs and airways plays a central role in the development of asthma, the most effective medications are those that reduce inflammation. Studies show inhaled corticosteroids are the most potent and effective anti-inflammatory.

This year at the screenings a new brochure about asthma in very young children will be available to parents and caregivers.

During a screening, adults complete a 20-question Life Quality (LQ) Test developed by ACCAI for the program. Children under 15 take a special test called the Kids' Asthma Check that allows them to answer questions themselves about any breathing problems. Another version of the Check is available for parents of children up to 8 years of age to complete on their child's behalf.

Participants also take a lung function test that involves blowing into a tube and meeting with an allergist to determine if they should seek a thorough examination and diagnosis.

For a list of asthma screening sites and dates or to take the online versions of the LQ Test and Kids' Asthma Check, visit the ACCAI web site at www.accai.org.

Supporting Youth Fitness Programs And A Run For Something Better

In the sport of distance running, orange is in.

At this year's ING New York City Marathon, ING, a global financial services company, used orange shoelaces to tie its premiere road race sponsorships to communities. Runners and nonrunners alike laced up their sneakers with ING Run For Something Better orange shoe laces and took to the streets to support children's physical fitness.

The orange shoelaces were given to individuals who made a donation of $10 or more to the Run For Something Better charitable fund, which supports youth running programs.

Wearing their laces on race day was an easy and visible way for everyone to show their support, whether competing or cheering.

Plans are in place to expand the fundraising program to the ING Bay to Breakers 12K in San Francisco, the ING Georgia Marathon in Atlanta and the ING Miami Marathon in 2007.

Money raised through the Run For Something Better will be used to fund local programs that help kids be strong, fit and healthy, including running training programs in those race communities.

The company worked with New York Road Runners to create the Run For Something Better in 2003 as the charitable companion to its title sponsorship of the ING New York City Marathon.

The program is a way to introduce youths to the sport of running and the advantages of being fit and healthy, as well as a way to help support the communities where the company sponsors running events.

Since the creation of the program, the company has donated nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in New York and Miami and has committed an additional $500,000 per year to support running programs in cities where it sponsors races.

In New York City, the program benefits youth running programs that help make running a year-round component in the lives of over 6,000 children through school-based initiatives provided by the New York Road Runners Foundation and summer track and field programs through the City Parks Foundation.

With dedication, running builds stronger bodies and minds, and can help build better communities. The financial services company sees the parallels between distance running and financial planning.

It's about starting small, setting goals, continuously improving and staying committed for the long run.

"The company's commitment to the sport of running has led to its sponsorship of some of the best-known races in the country, building connections with communities and staying committed to helping children be fit and get a healthy start in life," says Toby Hoden, chief marketing officer, ING.

In keeping with the company's commitment supporting teachers and education, it also sponsors the ING Unsung Heroes(r) program, which recognizes those classroom heroes who take teaching to new heights and make learning fun. Each year, the company presents 100 grants totaling $240,000 to help fund innovative classroom projects nationwide.

ING is also the first-ever presenting sponsor of the National Teacher of the Year program, a project by the Council of Chief State School Officers.

To make a contribution to the ING Run For Something Better charitable fund, part of the ING Foundation, which is a registered 501(a) organization, visit www.ingrunforsomethingbetter.com.

The Risks Of Chronic Kidney Disease

You may know that the sun and certain foods are good sources of vitamin D. But did you know that due to chronic kidney disease, millions of Americans can't convert the form of vitamin D produced by the sun or found in food and over-the-counter vitamins into the active form of vitamin D used by the body? This means that even if you're taking vitamin D pills, getting adequate sunlight or eating foods rich in vitamin D, your bones and organs may be at risk due to a deficiency in "active" vitamin D.

Chronic Kidney Disease

Chronic kidney disease (CKD) is a condition in which kidney function slows and the kidneys stop doing critical jobs such as filtering toxins from the bloodstream.

The severity of CKD is classified in stages, with stage 5, also known as kidney failure or end-stage renal disease (ESRD), being the most severe. Patients with ESRD require dialysis, a procedure where several times a week for several hours their bloodstream is routed through a machine that filters toxins.

40 million Americans with or at risk for chronic kidney disease

Early-stage CKD-before dialysis is necessary-is often undetected and can worsen with declines in kidney function.

According to the National Kidney Foundation, 20 million Americans-1 in 9-have CKD and another 20 million are at increased risk.

So what does CKD have to do with vitamin D, let alone your bones?

Before the body can use vitamin D, it has to be "activated." Inactive vitamin D-the vitamin D you get in the form of over-the-counter pills, food or sunlight-is activated by two steps, one in the liver and the other in the kidneys.

Then, much like a key fits into a car ignition and starts the engine, activated vitamin D fits into vitamin D receptors located in numerous tissues and systems throughout the body and triggers processes that help maintain bone, the heart, the immune system and so on.

For people with CKD, however, their kidneys' ability to activate adequate amounts of vitamin D deteriorates as their overall kidney function decreases. In fact, people with kidney disease may eventually lose the ability to activate vitamin D altogether.

Secondary hyperparathyroidism

When levels of active vitamin D are low or inadequate within the body, a serious complication of CKD called secondary hyperparathyroidism (SHPT) can occur. SHPT can lead to a wide range of problems, including damage to bones and many vital organs.

How is SHPT prevented and treated?

When CKD and SHPT are detected early, the conditions may be managed and disease progression may be slowed.

Remember, people with stage 3 or 4 CKD who develop SHPT cannot convert vitamin D into its active form within their own kidneys. Experts suggest that these patients with stage 3 or 4 CKD and SHPT take an activated form of vitamin D medication-which is available only by prescription-to correct their vitamin D deficiency and thereby treat SHPT. Managing SHPT lowers risk for bone loss or fracture, cardiac complications and dangerous mineral and hormonal imbalances.

For more information on the risks of CKD and SHPT, and how current treatments can help, visit the National Kidney Foundation at www.kidney.org or call (800) 622-9010.

Climbing Out Of Depression

One man is scaling each continent's tallest mountain to heighten global awareness of depression.

Twenty years after the suicide death of his father, mountain climber Joe Lawson formed Expedition Hope to help raise awareness of depression and the risks of letting the illness go untreated.

Lawson's father battled depression his entire life, until he decided to put an end to his suffering when Joe was just 16 years old. After struggling to understand his father's suicide, Lawson developed an interest in mountain climbing and has since traveled the world in search of new adventures and personal challenges. One of these personal challenges includes Lawson's attempt to climb the highest mountain on each of the seven continents.

Up to 19 million Americans suffer from depressive disorders, including major depression. Although it is one of the most frequently seen psychiatric disorders in the primary-care setting, it often goes undiagnosed or is under-treated. This may be because depressed patients often discuss their physical symptoms rather than emotional complaints. In fact, in one study about 70 percent of patients diagnosed with major depressive disorder (MDD) presented with only physical complaints. Pain is present in approximately 45 to 75 percent of patients with MDD, and can include headache, back, shoulder and abdominal pain.

"My father's depression left him feeling isolated and estranged, making it hard for him to seek help and talk about his condition," said Lawson. "Had he had the proper treatment, his life might have been saved."

With the help of Eli Lilly and Company, Lawson began his journey last May by climbing Alaska's Mt. McKinley, the highest peak in North America. However, after injuring his knee while on the mountain, Lawson had to turn back. Instead of giving up, Lawson went on to summit Mt. Kilimanjaro, the highest peak in Africa, in September 2005, and Mt. Kosciuszko, the highest peak in Australia, in November 2005.

"Like mountain climbing, persons suffering from depression may face extreme challenges, but help, treatment, and relief from symptoms are attainable with appropriate assistance," said Lawson.

This year, Lawson will attempt to summit Mt. Elbrus, the highest peak in Russia, and Mt. Vinson Massif, the highest peak in Antarctica.

Inhalant Use By Kids Is Rising

Parents who think they are doing everything they can to protect their children from drugs may not be aware of all the dangers found right in their own homes. More than 1,400 common household products are currently being abused by kids across the country to get high.

Inhalants are easily accessible, legal, everyday products. When used as intended, these products are completely harmless and have a useful purpose in our lives, but when intentionally misused and abused, they can be deadly. Most parents and educators are in the dark regarding the popularity and dangers of inhalant abuse, and unfortunately, the practice is becoming more common and accepted among children.
